Do You Want An Alumni Magazine?

I think it was Aristotle who said, "The only way to get an Alumni magazine is to subscribe for it."

You may dispute the authorship of the above, but you can not dispute the statement. The only way that a magazine can be issued, at regular intervals, to the alumni and former students of the University of North Dakota is to have the Alumni and former students come forward in sufficient numbers and with sufficient money so that we can go ahead.

Before you forget about it send in your check for a year's subscription.

It will be the most satisfactory investment that you have ever made. Furthermore, such a magazine is worthy of your support.

An Alumni Magazine is absolutely essential to link the interest of the former students of the University to their Alma Mater. And the future growth, success and happiness of the University of North Dakota is necessarily limited without the active, loyal interest of its several thousands of former students and alumni.

An Alumni Magazine will be a means of communication for the President of the University on any problem confronting the school.

It will be a means of communication between you and your classmates.

It will be a chronicle of the achievements of North Dakota men and women in all parts of the world.

It will be the means of keeping you in step with each generation of North Dakota young men and women, so that, when you return for the annual home-coming or any other event you will not feel entirely out of the picture.

It will tell you of the activities of Alumni clubs in New York, Chicago, Minneapolis, Seattle, Los Angeles, Fargo, Bismarck, Minot, and wherever they may be formed.

A successful magazine will mean a bigger, better and stronger Alumni Association and it will mean a bigger, better and stronger University.

The first issue is being financed by the Alumni Association—subsequent issues must pay their own way. We have worked out a method whereby the cost will be comparatively low and we intend to issue the magazine four times a year. If a great enough interest is indicated, we can issue it monthly.

We are going to wait, with considerable anxiety, the verdict of our readers, not only on the magazine itself, but on the idea of a University Alumni publication and we want you to express your approval, not with flowers, but with letters beginning, "Enclosed find check——"

Alumni Important Factor in Life of "University"

April 30, 1925.

Alumni and Former Students:

The publication of this magazine is likely to be epoch making for the Alumni Association. It is almost as likely to be epoch making for the University.

We all know but we do not always realize that a university is made up of faculty, students and alumni. This, after all, is the same thing as saying that the University is made up of its teachers and students, which is obvious. The term students includes alumni and former students. Alumni are members of the household the same as married children never lose their ties with the old home. The same holds true for all former students, whether graduating or not, that they keep up the old home ties.

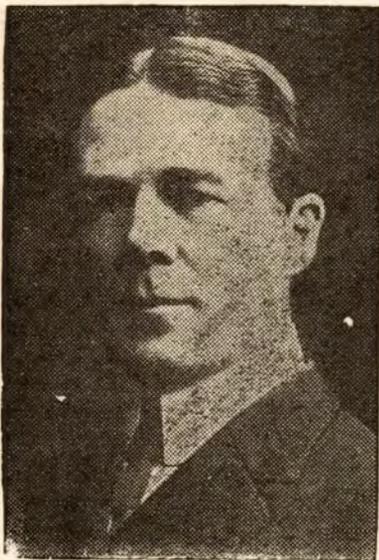

There is a new tie binding to the University more of the old students each succeeding year. No class goes out of the University now without members who are the sons and daughters of our old students. Looked at from one angle, these sons and daughters are a sort of hostage at the University, pledges alike of confidence and good will.

The University, where the teachers, as the old phrase had it, were in loco parentis, is ever after the object of one of life's loyalties. That is well nigh a universal experience of university men and women. It is a loyalty, too, to be fostered. The memories are connected with some of life's finest friendships; the loyalty is to noble ideals; the appeal enlists our interests in things that are helpful and uplifting.

The object of the magazine, then, is to make these relations real in the interest of both the alumni and old students, on the one hand and the University on the campus, on the other.

Alumni Support Important

The alumni have become a more and more important factor in the old universities of the country as time goes on. This is shown by the statement in the Hand Book of Alumni Work that "Practically every college or university in this country now has some sort of an alumni publication, either weekly, monthly or quarterly, designed to keep the graduates informed of the progress of their institution." Again, "Now practically every state university has a flourishing association with an alumni paper and an alumni secretary, who in the larger universities gives his whole time."

President Thomas F. Kane

The directors of our U. N. D. Association have acted wisely in waiting until the number of old students was large enough and the plans for issuing a magazine inexpensive enough to make it easy for each one to "do his bit." The calculations are to issue the magazine for only a dollar a year.

We must realize, however, that to make a magazine the fine success and satisfaction that it may be to all of us, giving a dollar is not enough for any of us to do. Each one must remember to send to the editors his views from time to time and items of news about himself, his classmates and other old students so that each alumnus in picking up every number of the magazine may find, in the alumni news, items about persons he knew in the University.

We may not realize how large the membership of the Alumni Association is and how many other students, while not graduating, have the same feeling toward the University that the graduates have. When the class of 1925 goes out the alumni will number 2362, and the old students who are non-graduates would number perhaps three times as many more. The alumni register shows our alumni in 185 towns and communities of our own state. One of the services that the magazine can perform will be to help make these alumni and student lists more accurate and bring them more nearly up to date.

Explain Work of "U"

Another of the valuable things to the University will be the help that old students can give in having the University correctly understood in the state. For example, items about social life at the University, athletics, about any kind of student escapades constitute news. Students preparing their lessons, making their records at classes, following up their investigations in the library and the laboratory do not furnish items of news. Hence, not unnaturally people out in the state get the impression, from the press that the students are largely spending their time in social life, athletics and frivolity.

You can show, as no one else can, that the main business at the University is the school work. The students who cannot keep up a reasonable school record are advised to go home, as not profiting by the work of the University and as not justifying their parents in keeping them here.

To say a word in regard to the University itself at the present time, the University will start in the coming biennium in a better position than in any other biennium since the war. At the same time, as you may know, it starts the biennium under a serious handicap, the handicap of not having its dismantled building replaced by a permanent building.

The growth of the University, for example, has been highly satisfactory. The University will graduate this June the largest class in its history, 254 students at this time being candidates for degrees. These degrees, of course, represent four

Foreign Trade Banking

By Roscoe Mackean, B.A. '20

Following the suggestion made to me, I shall try to give you some idea of the extent to which one American Bank, in particular, has succeeded in linking up the commerce and banking of practically every country of the globe. Under the subject of Foreign Trade Banking one might of course write technically to a great length. I, being a very junior international banker of barely four years experience in New York, London and Bombay, India, will attempt to stay close to some facts and generalities gleaned from my association with one of the largest financial corporations in the world—the International Banking Corporation, owned by the National City Bank of New York, New York.

The International Banking Corporation was granted a charter in 1901 by special Act of the Assembly of Connecticut State—a document with such latitude that this institution with its foreign branches is empowered to transact almost every conceivable kind of business at home and abroad. The original purpose of its organization was to promote American trade and finance after the Spanish-American war and when we acquired the Philippines, the Bank went there at the suggestion of the United States Government, and until the National Bank of the Philippines was organized, was Uncle Sam's chief financial agent in the Islands. This was the beginning of a chain of foreign branches which has been forged link by link until it has encircled the globe.

Foreign Agent Established

In Shanghai in January, 1902, the first foreign agent was established for the purpose of assisting the United States Government in the collection of the Chinese Boxer indemnity.

Our Shanghai Branch was formally opened May 15, 1902, and is now the parent branch of the North China chain of branches at Pekin, Harbin, Dairen, Hankow and Tientsin. The branch at Pekin assisted the American group in handling the six-power loan to China, while the corporation now acts as the fiscal agent for the American group of bankers in China. In south China our branches are located at Canton and Hongkong.

At present we have, combined with those of the National City Bank of New York, a total of seventy-five branches abroad and two in the United States. The total staff of the International Banking Corporation now numbers about 1545 of whom over 200 are senior and junior officers at Head Office and Branches. Our foreign staff is nearly half as large as the overseas personnel of the American State Department and combined with that of the National City Bank of New York's foreign staff we employ just about as many people abroad as Uncle Sam. Such has been the growth of the Corporation in about a quarter century—now having a capital and surplus of $10,000,000 — and reserve and undivided profits of $4,552,234.

As international banking specialists it is necessary that our officers be both bankers and exchange experts, as well as widely informed on foreign politics, merchandising and many other things which do not enter into the domestic banking field.

Chief Function Explained

The buying and selling of bills of exchange drawn in different countries in various currencies is perhaps the most important function of a foreign trade bank. As in double entry book-keeping there must be a credit for every debit, so in operations in foreign exchange there must be a sale for every purchase of exchange. The "covering" operation as it is called may be done at once or it may be deferred to a later date. In judging the time for "covering" by an accurate gauging of futures comes the greatest display of the foreign branch manager's expert knowledge of trade, politics, weather, seasons, etc. Here in India we have the monsoon—the summer rains—which may or may not appear when needed. The day that our monsoon breaks here in India we pass the information to New York by cable and week by week cabled reports on its progress go to various branches who may be interested. Every week each branch issues a "Market Report" covering the week's news in local commodities as well as the opening and closing rates of the various exchanges, with personal comments by the branch manager.

Personally, my experiences of the past four years have been highly comprehensive and broadening. Out here we think in terms of the world; when we speak of markets we mean world markets. In certain matters we know more of the doings of London, Paris, New York and Shanghai than does the greatest gossip of any of these places know of her (or his) closest neighbor. There is a more or less constant coming and going of American tourists and business men who make our office their headquarters and general meeting place and through whom we keep in touch with mutual friends all over the globe.

A WORD FROM PRES. KANE

year courses, and the Master's degree and Law degrees represent at least five years. There are a hundred more students above the sophomore year in the University this year than last year.

Serious Handicaps

These statements will suggest the fact that the standards are being reasonably raised all the time and that all work is eliminated which does not properly constitute four year courses. The University has the corresponding recognition from other universities in the rating of the University as standard and the rating of its several courses and likewise from the honor scholarship societies that have granted charters in practically every school in the University.

On the other hand, it has one of its most serious handicaps that it has had at any time in having to conduct work in a temporary shack in which the class enrollment is approximately 1000 students a day, a shack which is without any accommodations whatever other than mere classrooms, and the rooms can be kept comfortable in the wintertime in much the same sense that you could keep a tent comfortable.

We have about as serious a handicap of a different kind in not being able to provide salaries that will hold our most promising men. Two of the most promising of our younger men have accepted positions within a week that paid just $1000 more than their salary with us.

Hence, my first statement that this magazine is likely to mark an epoch in the history of the Alumni Association and is likely to mark an epoch in the development of the University. You old students can be of unmeasured help to the University in its work and development, and from my own experience and from, so far as I can tell, the universal experience of alumni, the help that you may give through counsel and your interest in the University will be of as great a satisfaction to you as anything that you have the opportunity to do along with your work in life.

Sincerely,
THOMAS F. KANE.

When I return to Grand Forks this coming summer I shall have more than circled the globe, having visited ports and places which, before 1920, were merely a name on a map but now are as well known to me as any of the streets of Grand Forks. To those with a fondness for travel a career such as this should have a strong appeal. Even though one did not intend continuing residence in foreign countries the business experience gained in foreign banking would go a tremendous way in giving one a larger grasp of the fundamental principles of many businesses at home.

The University Since 1900

By Dean Vernon P. Squires

The Editor has asked me to sketch the history of the University since 1900. I do not know exactly what his idea was, but the year 1900 is a very good place to begin. Up to that time, though excellent work had been done, we had been a UNIVERSITY only in name, having only one degree-granting college, namely the College of Liberal Arts. There was, to be sure, a "Normal Department" which required two years of college work, and there were the Preparatory and Commercial Departments which, however, were of only high school rank. During the previous sixteen years only eighty-two degrees had been given, which is less than one-half of what are now given in a single year. It was a day of small things. In 1900 the campus included only twenty acres; there were only four buildings; and in the faculty there were, including the President, only ten professors, three assistant professors, and eleven instructors. From the beginning the income of the institution had been inadequate and this had been cut off entirely in 1895. Only the enthusiasm and unselfish devotion of the President and the faculty had kept the work going during these trying years.

But in 1899 the institution was given a new lease of life; the Legislature made adequate provision for its maintenance and gave promise of adequate support in the future. In that year the School of Law was established, to be followed by the College of Engineering in 1901, the School of Medicine and the School of Education in 1905. In 1905 also came the affiliation of Wesley College and in the following year President Merrifield gave the University twenty additional acres of land lying just east of the old campus, including the ground on which the Library, Woodworth Hall, and the Chemistry and Law buildings now stand. A little later the state added eighty additional acres, giving us the present campus of one hundred and twenty acres. From this time on also new buildings were rapidly added so that from about 1900 the institution began to assume the proportions of a true university and grew rapidly in facilities, in curriculum, and in numbers. In 1904 a street car line to the city was built, thus making the University much easier of access and bringing town and gown into close relationship.

The ten years from 1900 to 1910 were among the best years in our history. There was a wonderful spirit of loyalty on the part of the students and of cooperation on the part of the faculty. The spirit of progress dominated the place. Student life emerged from the boarding school stage, developing various academic activities characteristic of the older universities. We took a rational interest in intercollegiate athletics and won our share of victories. In interscholastic debate and oratory we were very successful also. The musical abilities of the students were organized for both vocal and instrumental practice, while by its superior dramatic work our Sock and Buskin Society began attracting wide-spread commendation. It was a notable decade.

Many Faculty Men Come

Many strong men joined the faculty during these eventful years. Only four of our present staff date from before this period; these are Dean Babcock of the College of Engineering, Dean Kennedy of the School of Education, Dean Squires of the College of Liberal Arts, and Professor E. F. Chandler, Head of the Department of Civil Engineering. During the decade in question, the following members of the present teaching staff began their work with us; Professor John Tingelstad of the Norse Department and Professor O. G. Libby, now Professor of American History, in 1902; Professor A. G. Leonard of the Department of Geology, and Mr. J. W. Wilkerson, now Business Manager, in 1903; Professor R. T. Young of the Department of Biology in 1906; Professors John G. Gillette, Gottfried Hult, and C. C. Schmidt in 1907. In 1904 when the University was twenty-one years old, it celebrated its "coming of age" by observing "Founders' Day" for the first time. The observance of this day has since been an annual custom.

In 1909 President Webster Merri-field resigned. He had been one of the original faculty of four who had begun work in the old red building in September, 1884. For twenty-five years he had thrown himself into the life of the institution with a tireless devotion which was both beautiful and rare. For eighteen years he had served as President. He had seen the school develop from the status of a small academy to that of a true University, and he felt that his work was done. He wished to retire while still in his full strength that he might enjoy the fulsome years of well earned leisure. His successor was Dr. Frank LeRond McVey, formerly Professor of Economics in the University of Minnesota, and later Head of the Tax Commission in the state of Minnesota. President McVey was a master organizer and came to us at a time when organization was needed. The University had grown rapidly, but not as systematically as might have been wished. There was much need of coordination and adjustment. This, President McVey accomplished. During his term the Budget System of the institution was established, the University Extension Division was created, the various colleges were reorganized, and a constitution was drawn up defining the duties of all officers and determining the methods of procedure to be followed in all ordinary cases.

The attendance during President McVey's first year was 485 (counting only students of college rank). During his last year, 1916-17, the corresponding figure was 868, an increase of eighty per cent, or an average of about eleven and a half per cent per year. Meanwhile the standards had been constantly and consistently advanced. The old Preparatory Department was dropped and reorganized as a Model School within the School of Education with a separate faculty of its own; the entrance requirements in the Law School were raised to two full years of college work; and a Graduate Department was built up under the direction of a special Graduate Committee. Among the men who joined our staff during President McVey's time and who are still with us are Deans H. E. French and E. T. Towne, and Professors G. A. Abbott, E. X. Anderson, W. G. Bek, William E. Budge, Roger W. Cooley, George R. Davies, Henry A. Doak, L. C. Harrington, Raymond R. Hitchcock, and Howard E. Simpson.

War Period Trying

When war was declared on April 6, 1917, patriotic fervor was stirred at the University of North Dakota as elsewhere. A good many young men soon left to enlist in the service, to enter training camps, or to undertake other forms of war work. To such the University generously allowed some academic credit, generally giving them, if their standing was satisfactory, full credit for the semester's work. Military drill was at once begun under the direction of members of the faculty who had some knowledge of the subject, and during the summer Captain C. H. McVey was secured as official commandant. Things went on in this way through the academic year, 1917-18. Practically all the young men in attendance were studying military science. Meantime the young ladies were busy with various forms of Red Cross work. Several members of the faculty resigned to engage in war service and those who remained threw themselves heartily into the various forms of civilian service which demanded time and ability. Meantime President McVey resigned, and Dean E. J. Babcock, the senior member of the faculty, took up ad interim the duties of the President's office. It was a trying time; a spirit of restlessness and uncertainty was abroad; students and teachers alike found it difficult to devote themselves to regular work; but an unusual degree of good will and a cordial spirit of cooperation prevailed and the regular routine went on much as usual.

During the fall and early winter of 1917-18 a committee of the faculty were working with the Board of Regents at the task of selecting a President. This committee, after considering many names, finally recommended Dr. Thomas F. Kane, then President of Olivet College. Dr. Kane was a John Hopkins man who had had long experience as a teacher and administrator at the University of Washington, as well as at Olivet. This election was confirmed by the Board and on Founders' Day 1918, President Kane made his first public appearance at the University. It was not, however, until after the spring recess that he was able to come to the University to take up active work.

By the spring of 1918 our government had the war situation much better in hand and began with greatly renewed efforts the work of recruiting and training an American army. Early in the summer the campus took on the appearance of a military camp. A large group of army men were stationed here for special training in various lines under the general direction of Dean Babcock. The gymnasium was used for barracks; the commons became a mess hall. In the fall the regular Student's Army Training Corps was authorized and most of the men of the institution thus came under the direct command of the military authorities. The young ladies were sent away from Davis Hall and this building was given over to the men. On October 1, 1918, the male students were sworn into the regular army with an impressive ceremony which, by federal order, took place simultaneously at over five hundred schools and colleges throughout the nation.

As everyone recalls, the armistice was signed in November, 1918. This was followed in December by the breaking up of the S. A. T. C. and on January 7, 1919, by the resumption of regular University work. As a whole, the war record made by the University is highly creditable. Those who remained on the campus did everything in their power to help their country's cause and not less than 1270 of the University's sons and daughters, including thirty-five members of the faculty, engaged in active service. Of the 1149 young men (not faculty members) 310 or about twenty-seven per cent were made officers, 111 of them being non-commissioned, and 199 commissioned officers. Thirty-three made the supreme sacrifice.

Post-War Period Gratifying

Since the close of the war the work of the institution has gone steadily onward. These have been intense years politically and economically in North Dakota, as indeed in the whole country, and various effects of the stress and strain have been manifest in University life as elsewhere. But meantime the attendance has increased from 712 college students, the number enrolled during 1917-18 to 1475, an increase of 763 or more than one hundred per cent, or an average of nearly fifteen per cent a year. Three fine buildings, besides a large addition to the Power Plant and various smaller shops, have been added to the working equipment. These buildings are a large Armory, built during the war by the joint contributions of the state and federal governments, the Chemistry Building, erected in 1919, and the beautiful new Law Building dedicated in 1924. The professorial staff has increased from forty-three to seventy-three. During recent years the University has gained in prestige by the granting of charters for chapters of Phi Beta Kappa, Sigma Xi, and many other honorary and fraternal societies; a form of student government has been adopted; a School of Commerce has been established; the School of Education has been put on a true University basis; the R. O. T. C. has been organized and has made a notable record in competition with other college units; University activities, athletics, forensic, musical, and journalistic have maintained high standings. Other evidences of growth and prosperity might be mentioned, but enough has been said to indicate that progress has been rapid, real, and steady. Meantime, the alumni, now numbering about two thousand have come more and more into positions of high responsibility in business and political life. The University now sees on every hand her sons and daughters honored by their fellow citizens and looked up to as leaders in civic and social progress. In short, the University of North Dakota has come to a point where she can take pride in her history, feel real satisfaction in her achievements, and have an assured faith in her future.

Flickertail Club Formed To Boost Athletics

By C. D. Locklin, Ex-'13

Recognizing that their Alma Mater had always been losing the larger number of the best athletes graduating from high schools in this state to institutions outside who conducted vigorous and organized campaigns to secure the very best possible talent, alumni and former students of the University of North Dakota in close touch with the athletic situation of their school last fall brought to a head sentiment that had long favored some move to keep our own athletes within the state, with the organization of the Flickertail Club of the University of North Dakota. The crystallization of sentiment was accomplished at a banquet tendered the football team on the eve of its Homecoming game when officers for the club were elected and authority placed in their hands to draw up and adopt a constitution and proceed with the enrollment of members.

As expressed at the organization meeting and embodied in the constitution, the aim of the club is to foster athletics at the university by placing the advantages of the institution be-

Class of 1925 Considers Endowment Plan

By Maurice O. Ryan, B.A. '25

In the fall of 1921, about 300 rangy fellows slipped a halter shank around a stall post in a half hitch, and came down to register in the University of North Dakota. Here, we found that fully 200 of the fairer sex had displayed a similiar desire, and were making life miserable for Dr. Wm. G. Bek, the freshman's dean. Then, we started a new round of things.

After the first listless years, we pulled together, and under the able tutelage of the best little chorega that ever shook a menacing finger at the boys who wouldn't sing, we won the Carney song contest in '25. Then, when some member of the class was getting noisy, we unearthed figures to show that we were the largest class to be graduated from the University in one year, that we had the largest percentage of men to the proportion of women, and that we had the greatest number of members who "stuck it out" from the green cap stage to graduation year. About that time, we started to look for new things to do. Our importance had gone to our heads. But as sometimes happens, the workings of a group mind united in its depravity, evolved something en-duringly practical and worth while. An endowment for the University instead of a post to lean upon as a memorial to our school, was mentioned, first timidly, then more boldly, as the suggestion "took."

Four meetings of the class have been devoted to consideration of all types of endowments and savings fund donations. Faculty members, whose alma maters had been endowed by graduated classes were called into consultation. Insurance companies and business men were interviewed. A scheme finally survived the severe elimination tryouts, and stands ready today to be accepted or rejected by each member of the departing class as an expression of regard for his university.

Alumni of the school, located in Grand Forks, and adjoining territory, heard of the scheme. Many of them expressed the wish that they might subscribe. A few faculty men wanted to help the scheme get started. And here we are, now writing to tell you that your old Alma Mater now has an endowment from its graduating class. It will probably not total more than $15,000, if that much, from the class of '25 alone, but it is a step in the right direction, and one that should be far reaching in its ultimate results. Should you want to add your little mite, just a few dollars a year, for a short number of years, drop a line to the editors of your magazine. Do this for your school, and help the first subscription of the endowment to "go over the top" in characteristic N. D. style. The sum of $15,000 multiplied by only ten classes in as many years is $150,000, and each year, because of larger enrollments, the sum should increase. A vertiable snowball of greenbacks had been started and will rapidly grow, and our sons and daughters years hence will find in our old school an institution of which they may be justly proud. It will be better equipped to serve them than it was to serve us, and we will sit back and stroke our gray whiskers, and reflect that we started something from which our youngsters will reap the benefit. That is a regal thought, an inspiration which will not readily be abandoned. Mail us your portion of the "widow's mite" for the good of U. N. D.

FLICKERTAIL CLUB FORMED

fore the high school athletes who are graduating each year, making them feel that it is their duty to attend their own university and that they are wanted there. The club also takes upon itself as a duty an interest in the financial condition of prospective students and through its employment committee aids in finding work for those athletes who must have employment to assist them in financing their way. The club further has as an aim the fostering of a new stadium.

Low Membership Fee

Because the executive committee believed that what it needed now more than money was the interest of the male alumni and former students, it placed the membership fee at one dollar, hoping to bring within the organization a large number of men who could be formed into a working body over the whole state. It was not expected that much could be accomplished the first year, but it was hoped to get the work aimed at under way. While not as many have been enrolled as we expected, there has, nevertheless, been a distinct progress which will grow as the graduates realize and assume their individual responsibility.

The organization works through its officers in Grand Forks. The secretary has communicated with the high school coaches, superintendents and alumni over the state as to the most promising athletes graduating this spring. He has endeavored to learn with varying success the financial condition of each boy, what kind of a course he plans to take and his school preference. Where it has been possible, alumni in close touch with these prospects have been asked to talk to them and communicate with the secretary. In other instances the club officer has worked directly with the boy. In the first plan used the secretary has not met with a great deal of co-operation and it is this end that must be bolstered greatly if the organization is to succeed.

The Flickertail club has found powerful competition in its work. Large institutions over the country, which have been taking material out of the state for years have already obtained promises from no less than a half dozen of the very best high school graduates and in most cases they have taken them out of the larger cities where there are many North Dakota alumni and students. In one of these cities two good athletes will go to an outside university next fall.

Big Meeting October 16

The first annual meeting of the club will take place on the evening of October 16, following the banquet for the football team. This is the day preceding the Homecoming game with South Dakota university and the organization is planning on assisting in making the day the biggest in the athletic history of the school.

Whether any changes in the working policy of the club will be made at the meeting is not known. Success has been greatly handicapped during the first year of the organization not only through lack of co-operation on the part of the alumni, but through lack of funds. It has been possible to carry out only a small portion of the work that could have been done had there been more money available. Some of the officers have believed that changes should be made both in general direction of efforts to secure members and in the financial policy. These two propositions are expected to furnish an interesting discussion at the fall meeting. Both will be gone over by the executive board, which will gather for a business session some time before school closes this spring.

Glenn Bruce, who attended North Dakota two years, but who received her degree from Northwestern University, has spent the past six months in the south doing lyceum work. Her permanent address is 8 Elizabeth Court, Oak Park, Ill.

Eugene L. Hough (B. S., '22) is with the Engineering Department of the General Electric Company, Schenectady, New York. Other Dakotans he has seen recently include Charles (Chuck) Randall (B. S., '23) at 17 N. Ferry St., Schenectady, Bill McCulloch (B. S., '21) with the firm of Heyl and Patterson of Pittsburg, Pa., and Alfonso Langord (B. S., '22) whose address is 407 Colonial Apts, Wilkesburg, Pa.

John Francis Douglas: Builder

The builder of Seattle. That is how John Francis Douglas, B.A., '96, one of those elected the most prominent of all University former students, is recognized as a result of his work in leading construction of the heart of Seattle business district. He has been a moving force in the financial and building activities of that city for many years.

In the western city where Mr. Douglas and Mrs. Douglas (Neva Bostwick, B.A., '96, have made their home for the past 17 years, many of the finest structures have been constructed by companies in which the U. N. D. man was a leading figure. A resume of the outstanding events of Mr. Douglas' career are given here.

John Francis Douglas was born near Toronto, in the Province of Ontario, October 30, 1874. He moved with his family to North Dakota in April, 1885, where he attended the public schools and the preparatory schools of the University of North Dakota. He went through the University of North Dakota, from which he graduated with the degree of A.B.

After studying law at the University of Minnesota, Mr. Douglas attended the law school of Yale University, graduating in 1898 with the degree of LL.B. On leaving the law school he returned to North Dakota, and was admitted to the bar of that state. The same year he married Neva Bostwick, who had been a classmate of his for six years, and the next two years were spent in Grafton, where Mr. Douglas practiced law.

In 1900 Mr. Douglas moved to Seattle, Washington, was admitted to the Washington bar, and practised law in Seattle from 1900 to 1907. During these years he acted as attorney for a number of building enterprises, and gradually became financially interested in these enterprises and in their management. With C. F. White, Mr. Douglas organized the Metropolitan Building Company of Seattle in 1907. This company was formed for the purpose of taking over the lease on ten acres of ground located in the heart of Seattle and belonging to the University of Washington. Since October, 1907, he has been secretary and manager of the Metropolitan Building Company.

The Metropolitan Building Company has erected a large number of office buildings on this tract, among them being the White-Henry-Stuart Building, an eleven story structure covering a city block; the Cobb Building and the Stimson Building, two structures, one eleven stories and one seven, exclusively for the medical professions; the Douglas Building, a five story office building; the Olympic Building, housing a seven level concrete ramp garage, the Fifth Avenue frontage of the building being devoted to exclusive shops; and the Hippodrome Building, sub-leased to an amusement company.

John Francis Douglas

The $4,500,000 community hotel, the Olympic, is built on leased ground in the heart of Metropolitan Center, covering an entire block, with the exception of the Metropolitan Theatre, which it surrounds on three sides. Mr. Douglas is the secretary of the company which owns the hotel building, and vice-president of the company which leases and operates it. Mr. Douglas has had experience in the financing, erection and operation of buildings for the past seventeen years. He was a trustee of the Seattle Chamber of Commerce for fourteen years, and vice-president for two years. He is a trustee of the Building Owners and Managers Association of Seattle, and has been chairman of the rental committee of the National Association of Building Owners and Managers.

As major in the United States Army in war time, Mr. Douglas was in command of the quartermaster's depot at the Port of Seattle. He was also appointed at Washington, D. C., to serve on the government housing bureau, and in connection with this went to various camp localities in the country to examine the situation and report on methods of improving housing conditions for the officers and enlisted men stationed at these camps.

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas have three children, John F. Douglas, Jr., now at the Harvard Graduate School, Neva Douglas, a daughter, at the University of Washington, and James Douglas, who will attend the same school.

U. N. D. GRADUATE TAKES HIGH PLACE AMONG DRAMATISTS

Maxwell Anderson, B.A. '11, is now devoting all his time to dramatic activity. His play, "What Price Glory," written in collaboration with Lawrence Stallings, has been acclaimed by critics as the best of the season's new plays. It has been playing to capacity houses in New York since October, and promises to continue indefinitely. Mr. Anderson was an editorial writer on the New York World before entering entirely into the field of drama.

The following article about his latest play appeared in the November 27 issue of The Dakota Daily Student:

"Of significance to students who are interested in the success of alumni is the fact that 'What Price Glory?', a play by Maxwell Anderson, alumnus of the University, and Lawrence Stallings of the New York World, has been selected by Heywood Brown of the New York World, to head his list of 'best' plays for the new season.

"From the first 'What Price Glory' has been greeted with enthusiasm by such critics as Brown, Woolcott of the New York Times, Miles of the Minneapolis Journal, and others.

"The theme of the play purposes to portray the true life and experience of a marine during the world war. It was severely criticized by welfare workers and efforts were made through the police department of New York City, to censor the play, because of alleged blunt army language and false portrayal of the American soldier.

"These critics insisted that the play pictured the World War veteran as immoral. Brown, however, branded the whole criticizing faction as narrow-minded, ignorant and incapable, and the play continued to receive the plaudits of New York playgoers, and dramatic critics of the leading newspapers. Today it is without a doubt a tremendous success.

"Mr. Anderson, who was employed on the New York World as an editorial writer before the success of the play, has resigned his position on that newspaper. Recent reports in magazines and newspapers state that he and Lawrence Stallings will reap a fortune from receipts and royalties from the play."

R. B. Kennedy, physical director and commandant of the military department of the University of North Dakota in 1901, is now editor of the Whittier News, Whittier, Calif.

Dorothy Masee, ex-'24, W. L. Crain, B.A. '18, and Alf Thorwaldson, B.A. '24, are all taking work at the University of Chicago.

U. N. D. Clubs Are Active Throughout Nation

By Club Secretaries

U. N. D. IN NEW YORK CITY—

Founders' Day, 1920, was celebrated at Grand Forks with speeches, dinners and convocations. In New York City, it was observed by a group of twelve U. N. D. alumni, meeting at the Hotel McAlpin. These twelve came together to start an alumni association in New York. Raymond A. Heising, '12, was named chairman. On March 24, there was a second meeting, in Earl Hall at Columbia University, at which the organization was perfected, and a constitution adopted.

The writers of the constitution chose as a name, "The University of North Dakota Club of New York City." The purpose of the club was stated as "To enable the friends and former members of the University to meet socially, and to stimulate interest in the University." Socially, the club has been a success; and altho it has not yet endowed a handsome auditorium for Alma Mater, much has been done to foster interest in U. N. D.

Officers elected at the first meeting were Edgar H. Gustafson, '15, president; Edna Mae Rasmussen, '14, vice-president; J. Bertrand Johnson, '13, secretary-treasurer; and Minnie Steinbar, '16, and Inga Leine, additional members of the executive committee. It is recorded that after the business meeting, there was dancing, games and refreshments. The wholeheartedness of the celebration is noted by the treasurer's succinct report that the meeting left in the treasury a balance of fifteen cents.

Succeeding Edgar Gustafson as president, the club has had J. Bertrand Johnson, elected in 1921; and Mrs. Maxwell Anderson, '11, who directed the organization from 1923 to 1925. Arthur W. Kishpaugh, '12, was elected secretary in 1921, and served four years.

There is an interesting record of a meeting in June, 1920, when the members went on a picnic at Bear Mountain. The secretary's minutes note that rain stopped the party before dessert, and we agree with him that "this was unfortunate."

However, the club has had successful meetings all over Manhattan; Odz, Odz, Dzi has been heard from the Battery to Morningside Heights. Meetings are held irregularly, on call of the executive committee. There is always dinner—sometimes the banquet is adorned with toasts and speeches, and other times the amusement consists of dancing and more or less polite conversation.

The last meeting of the club was held on January 29, 1925, in the Faculty Club of Columbia University. The following officers were elected: Harry Nyquist, '14, president; Kenneth Anderson (altho never in U. N. D., Mr. Anderson for several years breathed North Dakota's bracing atmosphere—he is one of us), vice-president; Howard Patmore, '20, secretary-treasurer; Miss Edna Twamley and Mr. J. Bertrand Johnson, additional members of the executive committee. Altho there are seventy names on the membership list, only twenty-six were out for this meeting, as it coincided with one of the worst blizzards of the winter. Some remarked on the home-like weather; others ridiculed New York's climate, and wished they were back in Grand Forks.

The plan of holding informal meetings for dinner in the Teachers College dining room is being tried. If this succeeds, we shall have as a supplement to the big meetings, regular weekly gatherings, always at Teachers College, always informal, at which visiting alumni and friends will find a hearty welcome.

NORTH DAKOTA CLUBS AT MINOT—

North Dakota Clubs have been in existence in Minot for over 20 years. Former Governor R. A. Nestos was one of early presidents of the Minot North Dakota Club and his activity and interest in its work made its success possible at that time. The club, like other organizations of its nature, has passed thru periods of apparent inactivity. Some spirit of life has always remained however, and after such inactive periods there has always been a reorganization and a continuation of the old club. Attorney O. B. Herigstad was for many years the president and while the records are incomplete, it is believed that he succeeded Mr. Nestos to that office.

The North Dakota Club having failed to meet for some time a meeting was called in December 1924 for the purpose of organizing a Nodak club. Such a club was organized on January 6, 1925. The Nodak Club differs from Alumni Clubs in this, that undergraduates, students who have not completed four years of college work, are eligible to membership. With the limited number of graduates in this vicinity it was believed that the membership should not be restricted to only graduates of the University. We now have several members of the club who are not graduates and who are very interested in promoting the welfare of the University, and we believe that this arrangement will work out very satisfactorily.

At the January 6th meeting the following officers were elected, President, Eldon O. Hanson, Vice-president, Halvor L. Halvorson, Secretary-Treasurer, Mrs. C. J. Scott. These officers will serve for one year, election of officers being made on the first Saturday in each year.

The Nodak Club holds monthly meetings, meeting on the first Saturday of each month at luncheon at the Leland-Parker Hotel, to which all visiting Nodaks are cordially invited. The meetings are very informal and of one hour in duration.

At present the club has a membership of twenty, but hopes to increase the number by a membership drive in the near future. The club has among its purposes the encouragement of the young people of Minot to attend "the best University in the country," and the keeping of old friendships new.

DEVILS LAKE U. N. D. CLUB—

The Devils Lake University of North Dakota Alumni Club was organized in the offices of Mack V. Traynor, Friday afternoon, January 2, 1925. The organization was created in response to a request made by the University Press Club.

The purpose of the club organization was to create a closer touch between graduates and former students and their Alma Mater. The primary motive of the club is to influence the graduating students of Devils Lake High School to attend North Dakota University.

Hjalmer W. Swenson, LL.B. '14, was elected president of the organization. Mack V. Traynor, B.A. '14, J.D. '16, was named vice-president, and Ferne Haggen, (ex-'23,) was voted in as secretary-treasurer.

No definite meeting day was decided upon, the president being instructed to call meetings whenever necessary.

A real old time University of North Dakota banquet was held in the dining room of the Hotel Grayson on January twenty-second, marking the first activity of the club.

The president, Mr. Swenson, acted as toastmaster to a North Dakota memory-rousing program. Humorous little anecdotes of the time when the University consisted of two buildings, Main and Davis Hall, were related by Office: Room No. 11, Merrifield Hall, University Station, Grand Forks, N. Dak.

An Universities throughout the country have recognized for years the measureless value of a closely knit alumni body, not only for the good of the University but also for the good and in the interest of the alumni themselves. It has been found wholly impracticable, and even impossible, in the experiences of colleges and universities to maintain any really able association of alumni without a regular and dependable means of communication, a publication.

Recognizing North Dakota's need for such a publication and with a realization that it lags far behind other schools in this respect—the University of South Dakota's magazine is now in its twentieth volume—the Alumni Association in April decided to sponsor a first issue, submit it free to all alumni and former students, and through it to secure if possible a 100 per cent alumni subscription list. Seeking rather to secure a large number of subscribers than a high subscription rate from a few, the Association has set the subscription rate at one dollar per year. It is hoped by the time of next issue, should the alumni as a whole make possible by their subscriptions the regular issuance of the magazine, to have arranged a life subscription plan in connection with life membership in the Association.

As for the specific purposes of the magazine, it shall endeavor to keep alumni in touch with their Alma Mater and in touch with one another; to keep them awake to the interests of the institution which has so equipped them for greater appreciation of life and all that life brings, and acquainted with the fortunes and misfortunes of all who have passed through its noble halls and tasted of the rich pleasures it unfolds.

It shall seek to communicate things of chief university concern, not only from the standpoint of news, but also in view of other and deeper interests alumni may have. It shall seek to convey personal news about alumni; more than that, to develop articles of interest and importance about the lives and work of alumni. It shall seek to record and promote the activities of U. N. D. Alumni Clubs over the state and nation. To summarize, it shall seek always to include in its pages those things of chief interest and concern to alumni as alumni, and to be an instrument for the greatest possible service both to the alumni body and the University they love.

The Lack Of Appropriations Last January and February the state legislature stamped a cruel heel onto the progress of the University, a heel which will grind deeper and deeper as the biennium rolls on. Not until 1927 is there hope for relief, and, then, even provided relief should come, it will take another twelve-months to put that relief into reality in the shape of a building.

It is no purpose here to attack with all the vitrol of bias the state legislature. Members of such a body know an extensive responsibility and, ever present human tendencies aside, seek to the best of their knowledge to fulfill their obligations. The explanation of the University's meager allowance lies in the fact that the legislators did not understand the situation. Members of the state budget board, who visited the campus and saw something of the need, made recommendations that would have alleviated conditions.

Despite their recommendation, however, the University was denied a building to substitute for the condemned and half-torn-down Merrifield hall. The University was handicapped for class-room space before Old Main was condemned. Accommodation has been provided this year only by use of a temporary insulite shack. Next year and the year following and a third year, will see the lack of appropriation become the iron of an ancient Chinese shoe, shamefully crippling the development of the University.

But one thing can be done. That is to seek to acquaint the legislators with the work of the University and the thorough menace that will result from stunting its growth. This can best be accomplished only by alumni, familiar with the University and at the same time leading and progressive citizens of the state. It is for each alumnus to guard in his territory the interests of and appreciation for the University, holding ever in mind the wealth of contribution toward real progress and real happiness that such an institution makes.

Growth Of Our Alma Mater Alumni who left the University in its first and second decades scarcely would recognize the campus now. The University has grown until now fifteen buildings besides Merrifield hall (and the shack which is substituting for its upper stories) have place on the campus.

But, not only materially has the University grown. Its greatest growth has been in its recognition and standing among institutions of the country. It is rated "Class A" by the United States Commission of Education; all its professional schools are recognized as standard; the Law School is a member of the Association of American Law Schools and has been given a chapter of Order of the Coif; licensing boards of every state and the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of England give full recognition for the work of the School of Medicine, which is a member of the Association of American Medical Colleges; graduates of the School of Education can teach anywhere in the United States without examination; Eastern business concerns send men here each year to pick commerce students for responsible executive positions, and the School of Commerce recently was admitted to full membership in the American Association of Collegiate Schools of Business; students in the College of Engineering are in wide demand and are in a majority of cases, located in positions before they leave the University; all the leading honorary and professional societies have been established on the campus; and fourteen of the largest national academic fraternities have chapters at the institution.

Tabulation of the advances might continue indefinitely. However, the above will serve to give some understanding of the institution's development.

Interesting Sidelights From the Association Minutes

By J. Douglas Leith, B.A. '20

A black, battered notebook, whose flyleaf is inscribed "Secretary's Book: Property of The Alumni Association of the University of North Dakota", rests in the Alumni Office in Old Main. In fading ink, on its opening pages, appear the Constitution and By-Laws adopted by the first organization of graduates of the University. The minutes of the first meeting follow, and then the records of annual and other meetings continue page by page, year by year, to the present day. The elegant handwriting of the '90's has given way to the typing of the '20's, on inserted pages. But the volume is still in use as the permanent record of minutes of all meetings of the Association.

It is interesting to leaf over the numbered pages of the old book. Names of graduates who have since achieved wide prominence appear in these records of past alumni meetings. To some items, matter-of-fact enough when written into the minutes, Time has given odd turns. The changes of forty years, undreamed of in the beginning, are recorded here.

Buy Secretary's Book

The first meeting of North Dakota alumni was held, with engaging promptness, immediately after the commencement exercises of the first class to graduate from the University. A Constitution was drawn up providing for, among other things, the offices of President, Vice-President, Secretary, Treasurer, Historian, and Toastmaster, for the new Alumni Association. There were, it may be pointed out, just six members in the graduating class of 1889. The By-Laws attached to this Constitution provide that "the regular meeting shall be held annually at the University building", and further that "three members shall constitute a quorum". The Secretary, Cora Smith—now Dr. Cora Smith King of Pasadena, Calif.—records the motion for an assessment on all the members of the Association "to cover the expenses of the Secretary's book, 75 cents."

The First Annual Alumni Dinner, it is written, was held on June 18, 1891. The menu shows eight courses; the program lists seven toasts, with "Our Young Alma Mater" responded to by President Webster Merrifield.

The chief business of the annual meetings seems to have been the election of officers and the amendment of the Constitution. But other matters came up from time to time. Extracts will indicate the nature of some of these. It was moved (1894) "that a recommendation be made to all the (graduating) classes to present their pictures to the Faculty. Which motion prevailed." "Upon motion (1899) the following committee was appointed by the chair (Emma Crans, '96) to ascertain the feasibility of supplying a 'coach' for the University Foot Ball Team: B. G. Skulason, '95, H. A. Bronson, '94, and Wm. Nuessle, '99." The following year another 'committee on football' was appointed, Mr. Nuessle becoming President of the Association.

"Jim Hill Committee" Named

A note on the Commencement program for 1905 announces "The street car will leave Third street at the close of the exercises (Metropolitan Theater), returning immediately for a second trip if necessary". "It was moved (1906) by W. F. Lemke, seconded by O. B. Burtness, that the chair appoint a committee to be known as the 'Get After Jim Hill Committee' who shall endeavor to obtain a donation from Mr. J. J. Hill for the purpose of constructing a gymnasium. The motion on being put was duly carried." The committee appointed was composed of W. F. Lemke, Thos. D. Campbell, P. D. Norton, H. A. Bronson, Victor Wardrope, B. G. Skulason, R. A. Nestos, Gudmundur Grimson, and W. L. Nuessle—surely a notable group. However, according to the minutes, at the next annual meeting "the Jim Hill Committee reported no progress" and was instructed to continue its work; nor is there, it must be noted, any record of its discharge.

There is much more of interest to an alumnus, in a reading of the earlier minutes, than can be given in a short space. Of the later period, the same can be said. Of chief present interest, perhaps, is the story of the long agitation for the establishment of an alumni periodical, culminating in the present publication. Decision in this matter was the chief item of business at the latest meeting of the Board of Directors of the Alumni Association. That meeting, with all the meetings of the past, is now written into the battered, black "Secretary's Book" that records the minutes of forty years.

U. N. D. CLUBS ACTIVE

Mrs. Elsie Mooers Powell; the oldest member of the club.

Echoes of the past greatness of their classes were recalled by Fred J. Traynor, B.A. '03, LL.B. '04, and Mack V. Traynor. The members of the committee in charge of the banquet, Marie Daeley, Sam K. Fisher, B.A. '20, and Howard Maher gave short talks. Another banquet is being planned for the near future.

The University Women's Glee Club were the guests of the club when they appeared in concert in the Presbyterian Church of Devils Lake, Easter Monday, April 13. The Glee Club was entertained with two luncheons at Wineman's Tea Shop and a dancing party at the Grand Roller Rink. While in the city they were entertained at the homes of friends of the club.

During the summer, when the present University students are home for their vacations, several social affairs are being planned.

The Devils Lake Club is a live one and, entertaining an excellent status in the city, will send many of the High School graduates to North Dakota University.

N. D. CLUB IN SEATTLE—

Organization of a University of North Dakota club of Washington was perfected when fifty former students and associates of the University met for a dinner in a private dining room of the Olympic Hotel, Seattle, Wednesday evening, January 28.

The meeting was attended by students living in and near Seattle and according to the constitution which was adopted, former students, professors, graduates and their families, living in the State of Washington, are eligible for membership in the club. The gathering had been called by Dewey V. Fischer, B.A. '23, who, assisted by W. Doyle Watt, B.A. '20, formulated the plans. Major J. Francis Douglas, B.A. '96, was elected president; Arthur B. Comfort, B.A. '06, Tacoma, vice-president; and Dewey V. Fischer, secretary-treasurer. (Mr. Watt is now temporary secretary since the removal of Mr. Fischer to Portland, Oregon.) Judge Henry G. Vick, B.A. '93, Seattle, presided.

Following the dinner, many of the former students related past experiences and anecdotes concerning their university life. All stages of the history of the institution were represented, the first student enrolled in the University being among those who spoke.—Dakota Daily Student.

EVAN J. McILRAITH
ONE OF FOREMOST
AMONG ENGINEERS

Evan J. McIlraith, M.E. '07, is at present staff engineer of the Chicago Surface Lines. Mr. McIlraith is known as one of the foremost street railway engineers in the United States. His rise has been meteoritic in the profession, and he has today one of the highest positions which is available to a man in engineering without becoming an officer of the company.

Mr. McIlraith started to learn the street railway business in Seattle in 1912. He was employed by the Puget Sound Traction, Light and Power company as a motorman; then served a period in the shops and car houses on car maintenance. He went then into the general office where he handled statistical matters until he was appointed Superintendent of Way and Structures along in 1915 and 1916. He had charge of this Department until the property was sold to the City of Seattle in the spring of 1919.

In February, 1919, he was sent to Chicago to assist Stone and Webster in the appraisal of the Chicago Surface Lines.

In July of the same year he was employed by the Philadelphia Rapid Transit company as Engineer of Way on the Elevated and Subway Lines and at the end of the year was appointed Operating Manager of these lines. He held that position for the ensuing year, when he was made Superintendent of Rolling Stock and Buildings. He continued in this position until December 1, 1922. He then took up valuation and appraisal work in Cincinnati in connection with an investigation being made by Stone and Webster of the street railway property in that city.

In April, 1925, he went to Chicago in the position of Staff Engineer and has held that position to date.

U. N. D. MINING
GRADUATE GOES TO TOP IN WORK

Burt Knapp, formerly of Lisbon, and a graduate of the School of Mines, in the University of North Dakota engineering college, of 1911, has attained prominence in Canadian mining work within the past dozen years. It is learned from a communication recently from Kirkland Lake, Ont.

When Mr. Knapp was graduated from the university he went immediately to the office of the Dome mine in northern Ontario, where he engaged in assay work. Within a few months he was placed in charge of the office with five men under him. Going from one gold mine to another and constantly advancing, he passed through the superintendency of the Schumancher mine, and then to the manager's position of the Lake Shore mine, where he is at present. Besides supervising the mill and assay office, he has personal charge of the underground surveying.

Since taking over the managership of the mine Mr. Knapp has increased the efficiency until dividends have jumped from eight to forty per cent. Up until Sept. 1, 1924, the output of the mine was 100 tons per day, while 300 tons are regularly extracted at present, a 25 per cent excess over the rated maximum of the mine. Four years ago the mine's stock sold at $1.30 cents a share, while today it is listed at $5.00, having increased $1.25 in the last six months.

U. N. D. MAN RESIGNS FROM POSITION AS PATENT EXAMINER

The following item about Francis H. Templeton, LL.B. '16, is taken from the "Journal of the Patent Office Society":

"Mr. Francis H. Templeton, an assistant patent examiner, resigned Jan. 1, 1925. He was appointed on March 16, 1920, from North Dakota and has been examining the class of Stationery in Division 53.

"Mr. Templeton is a graduate of the University of North Dakota and of the George Washington and National Universities of Washington, D. C., having taken the degrees of LL.B., and LL.M., and M.P.L. He also had three years in the engineering department of the University of North Dakota. He is a member of the bar of the Supreme Court of North Dakota, the Supreme Court and the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia, and the Supreme Court of the United States."

Mr. Templeton resigned to become a solicitor of patents and trade marks and has opened offices at 500 Fifth Avenue, New York.

UNIVERSITY HONORS
ALFA EUGENE BYE

With the flag at half mast, with the R. O. T. C. men uniformed and in black arm bands, and with class work discontinued for the afternoon, the University of North Dakota Friday afternoon, February 6, stood in mourning over the death of Alfa Eugene Bye, who died the preceding Tuesday in Chicago from sleeping sickness. In his honor a military funeral attended by several thousand students and townspeople was observed.

Mr. Bye, who completed his course in 1924, was exceptionally prominent as a student while at the University, having served as colonel of the R. O. T. C., editor-in-chief of the Dakota Student, valedictorian of his class, president of both the Press and Commerce clubs, and in numerous other capacities, and having been elected to membership in six national fraternities, Beta Theta Pi, Phi Beta Kappa, Delta Sigma Rho, Sigma Delta Chi, Beta Alpha Psi, and Scabbard and Blade.

At the time of his death, Mr. Bye was working with the Jewel Tea Company in Chicago, having been selected by the company before his graduation in 1924.

ARTICLE TELLS ABOUT
MILKING SCHEME USED
ON PAGE BROS. FARMS

Hollis Page, B. A., '10 and Franklin Page, LL.B., '15, received mention in a write-up used recently by a number of papers in the state. Two paragraphs from the write-up follow:

"Making the bulls milk the cows greatly minimizes the task of caring for a herd of dairy cattle", declares Franklin Page, of the Page Farms at Hamilton, N. D. On the Page Farms two pure-bred Jersey bulls are kept in box stalls, and one in the morning and the other at night, is led onto a tread-mill which is used to supply power to run the milking machines.

"Both Franklin and Hollis Page, who with their father, William Page, run the Page Farms, are graduates of the state university. Their herd of Jerseys is ranked among the best in the country, their Ibsen's Jubilee Signal being the world's champion senior three-year-old Jersey."

U. N. D. NOW MANAGES BIG BOSTON KITCHEN

Daisy Treen, B.A., '14, is now head of the New England kitchen, Boston, Mass., a department of the women's educational and industrial union, and is also head of the school lunch club maintained by this organization.

The New England Kitchen serves twenty-three high schools in Boston, and cares for 11,000 children. In connection it has a bakery and makes its own bread as well as its ice cream. Also in connection is a food shop.

Miss Treen was at one time in charge of the U. N. D. Commons.

THE ADVENTURE OF WRANGEL ISLAND

By Vilhjalmur Stefansson

The Macmillan Company, New York, 1925. XXVII plus 424 pages with illustrations and map.

Interest in Wrangel Island and its ownership has become general since 1923, when a story of four white men who had lived and died there, survived only by an Eskimo woman, came out of the Arctic. Vilhjalmur Stefansson had conceived the idea of an expedition to occupy Wrangel for the British Crown and had organized this party of picked men to carry out his plan. In this book, with his intimate knowledge of conditions in the Arctic and of the men in the party, and with all the documents of the expedition known to exist finally in his possession, Dr. Stefansson has written the authentic story of the Wrangel Island occupation. The narrative portion of the book is based mainly on the journal of Lorne Knight, an American, who was second in command of the party.

Along with the story of The Adventure of Wrangel Island are given Dr. Stefansson's views on the coming significance of the polar regions in the affairs of men—of the day when the "friendly Arctic" will be the crossroads for inter-continental aerial traffic in the northern hemisphere. Then, he points out territorial rights in the North will take on new values. He develops further the proposition, first presented in others of his books, that the reindeer and similiar industries in the Arctic will continue to grow until that region is a primary source of food supply for the world, as well as a storehouse of mineral wealth and furs.

As a stirring story of tragic adventures, this book, Stefansson's sixth, holds the reader from first to last. As an historical record, the volume with its illustrations and appendices is accurate and complete. As revealing Stefansson, the man, his account of The Adventure of Wrangel Island is of particular interest to those who think of him as a former student at North Dakota.

RICKABY COMPILES BALLADS

A volume of logging camp ballads compiled by Professor Franz Rickaby, formerly of the English faculty of U. N. D., who died recently at Pomona College, Calif., is now being published by the Harvard University Press.

Ballads sung in the logging camps of Minnesota compose the book, the words and music being gathered first hand by Professor Rickaby through visits to the lumbering camps and the homes of lumbermen, particularly of those who sang. A feature which sets the book aside from regular ballad volumes is that it contains the music as well as the words for each ballad.

Professor George L. Kittridge, of Harvard, one of the greatest living authorities on balladry in America, praises the collection as a very worthy contribution to the American ballad.

DACOTAH THOUGHTS

In bygone years whose shadows dim
Trace broken words we moderns scan,
An honored name the Red men gave
To those who most were friends to man.

To him who best in strife and peace
Lived Comradeship as life's true end,
They grace the title proud "Dacotah,"
Meaning comrade, brother, friend.

All vanished now, those valiant Sioux;
But still remains their prairie land.
And where once shivering teepees stand,
Our Alma Mater's towers stand.

And we, Dacotah's children all,
From past and present nearer draw
In Friendly trust to those who live,
As once they learned, by light and law.

A few social events have been held this year. There was a luncheon for the University students when they were in Fargo for the A. C. game, and a dance for them the same evening at the Commercial Club rooms.

Besides the regular meetings, the club has a luncheon every Saturday noon.

William Greenleaf, B.A. '11, was the club's first president and a founder; when he resigned to move his residence to Boston in 1923, he was succeeded by John Hancock, B.A. '03; while at the annual business meeting of the club in October, 1924, Thomas M. Chisholm, B.A. '03, was made president. Other officers at this time include: Irene M. Eastman, B.A. '18, vice-president; Glenn Bruce, ex-'22, secretary, and Elmer Grandson, B.A. '21, treasurer.

Dinner meetings are held several times during the club year, September to June, and each November the club attends the North Dakota-Marquette football game at Milwaukee en masse. Following the game, a dinner dance for the members of the football team and boosters and the Chicago visitors is always held at the Wisconsin Hotel.

Each Thursday noon at the Stevens Restaurant informal get-together luncheons for erstwhile North Dakotans take place. Any North Dakota people who are in Chicago on a Thursday are always welcome at these gatherings.

U. N. D. CLUB AT LOS ANGELES—

The University of North Dakota Club for Southern California was organized in February, 1924. Officers were: Paul L. Samuelson, B.A. '23, president; Clyde C. Thompson, president; O. O. Trage-ton, B.A. '11, LL.B. '12, vice-president, and Miss Gosie Cumming, secretary-treasurer.

Meetings have been held about every six weeks, and have been in the form of informal gatherings, the Alvarado Apartments in Los Angeles, of which Mr. Brooks, a former U.N.D. student, is manager, being headquarters for the association.

The club has been very successful in Southern California, it having served to bring almost 100 former U.N.D. students together, which now comprise the membership. The club has a constitution and by-laws and has as its aim co-operation with the Alumni Association of the University and to continue to emulate the fine ideals and spirit that are the foundation of our Alma Mater.
