"WHEN EVERY SATURDAY comes around, I could almost cry. Look at the wonderful football weather we've had since Homecoming." That's the lament of "C. A." We really did get a lousy break from the weatherman on Homecoming. They recently flooded the hockey rink in the winter sports building to get the intermural program started—but no go—the water wouldn't freeze.

BUT DESPITE THE snow and wind, Homecoming was a success. The wind raised the devil with the house decorations and floats, but nevertheless, the parade was the biggest in history. Bernard Smith, now practicing law in Bismarck, wrote: "I thought a new high had been attained in relationship between the lettermen of the University and the athletic department when arrangements were made at Homecoming for a gathering of lettermen after the freshman football game, not to mention the complimentary tickets they received for the Homecoming game."

WHILE MENTIONING ATHLETICS, let me give you a tip about this year's edition of the Nodak basketball squad. The varsity is mostly sophomores—they have ability, but lack experience and polish. Their record in the first games of the season has been very poor—but watch them. Letich always makes the most of his material, and the squad may become a threatening, smooth outfit.

RECEIVED A COMPLAINT at the office recently charging us with deliberately coloring, distorting and "stretching" the news merely to make some insignificant item into a story. The "complaintee" went on and pointed out several errors that we had made in a news item. In defense—we admit that there are errors in the magazine—sometimes glaring errors. But—we do check every news story as best we can; we try to be sure that each is correct. But we are hampered by our method of obtaining news. Besides the letters sent us by alumni, we religiously clip from North Dakota newspapers. Sometimes these items come from a friend of a friend who has heard from a friend of Ted Whozit, '76, of Puddlejump. So the avenue of news is long and tortuous—and we do make errors.

THANKS TO EVERY alumnus who has written us since we asked for news. Each and every letter helps us fulfill the purpose of this magazine—to establish better alumni relations. As a matter of fact—response to our request was so good that this news has pushed some of our feature articles right out of the magazine.

THE DEMOCRATIC Thanksgiving caused quite a furore here at the University. The fact that North Dakota followed President Roosevelt's suggestion while Minnesota and South Dakota did not, caused 194 students to miss Thanksgiving. One Minnesotan lamented, "No turkey—no dresen'—no nothin'."

IN VIEW OF THE present state conditions I do not think it's out of place to present some statistics concerning the present proposed cut of 18 per cent in the University budget. According to the report of the state treasurer, Berta E. Baker, made in 1929, the University and the School of Mines spent for the biennium $932,336. Now we will compare that figure and others presented in the report to the appropriations made for the years 1939-41. Most of the state departments are now running at 100 per cent of the 1929 budget, i. e., their expenditures are about the same as that in 1929. The present appropriation for the University and School of Mines is $688,107, a drop of 26.2 per cent. And in this same period of time, enrollment at the University has increased about 150 students. With the added 18 per cent cut now proposed, the school will be operating with 39.5 per cent less funds than it did in 1929 and with an increased enrollment. It is not my office to comment on the situation—I just dug up some interesting statistics—there they are.

Forty University Students

TAKE TO AIR

By Leslie Gruber, '41

Forty University of North Dakota students are proving that while Darius Green's wax wings were insufficient, wings of metal and silk are strong enough to make them conquerors of the air.

Soaring skyward for the first time, November 21, went 20 of these 40 students, to test their wings. Since then the peace of Grand Forks has been badly dented by the roaring motors, zooms, and bounces that these student pilots have inaugurated.

This project was launched on a national scale last summer by the Civil Aeronautics Administration at Washington, D. C. The program has as its aim to teach a large number of qualified young men to fly fairly well. Students successfully completing the course receive a private license. The CAA is civil in nature and requires no military or other obligation.

In September it was announced that the University would have a quota of 40 students. Dean L. C. Harrington of the engineering school is in charge at the University.

Nearly seventy University men and women applied for training. Forty were accepted, including one woman. Each student is considered to have received a scholarship from the national government valued at $310. The course is granted three hours University credit and the student receives a flying course, including ground school which would cost at least $300 if taken privately. As the program is arranged the fees are $30 per student. This amount takes care of a physical examination, insurance and minor health corrections. North Dakota State at Fargo is the only other school in North Dakota which was assigned a unit.

Instruction is carried on by regular University instructors in their spare time. Classes are held for two hours on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday nights. The night classes were necessitated by the varied activities, and schools of the students. Instructors are: E. L. Lium, associate professor of civil engineering; Dean Emeritus E. F. Chandler; A. J. Diakoff, professor of electrical engineer-

KEYSTONE OF A COLLEGE

Every University of North Dakota engineering college graduate is a former student of Dean Emeritus E. F. Chandler (left) who this fall retired to part-time teaching. A University instructor since 1899, the veteran educator, shown (right) and his father, William Robinson, Williston city engineer and one time center on the UND football team.

The Williston engineer was one of the first students to take a course from Dean Chandler. His son, George, a freshman last year, was a member of the last surveying class taught by the veteran professor, who was North Dakota's first state engineer in 1904. Aviation will be the newest venture of the pioneer teacher who "still feels like working." He conducts a class in meteorology and navigation, which is now under way, and taken by students enrolled in the Civil Aeronautics Authority flight training project.

Former students of the dean reside in practically every state of the union and in a number of foreign countries. Among them are Charles Boise of London, leading British mining engineer; Evan McIlraith, operations director of the Chicago street car lines; Terrence Quirke, University of Illinois geology department head; Thomas Campbell, once known as the world's biggest wheat farmer; Daniel Bull, general manager of the Cream of Wheat corporation, and Jorgen Nomland, foreign explorations chief for the Standard Oil company of California.

ing; and Dean Harrington, general supervisor of the ground school work.

Students will receive approximately 72 hours of ground school with classes in various engineering and aeronautical problems. The work began October 27. Classes and the number of hours required are: Civil air regulations, 12 hours; navigation, 15 hours; meteorology, 15 hours; aircraft and theory of flight, 15 hours; engines, five hours; instru-

Critic's Report On

THE HULTS' WORKS

The following account of publication of Dr. Hult's and Mrs. Hult's recent works is taken from the book review section of the New York Times.

This month is to see the publication by the same publishing house of two volumes of verse which stem from one family. Both the leading members of this family are writers. Dr. Gottfried Hult, one of these, is publishing a four-hundred page volume bearing the title "Inverted Torches" and consisting of two five-act plays, "The Messiah" and "Galileo" respectively. The former, in eleven scenes dramatizes the emergence as prophet and the life as teacher of Jesus of Nazareth, not by placing him in person as protagonist in the play but by indirectly depicting his character and influence by the way he affected his home environment and by the manner in which his personality challenged his contemporary world. The latter play dramatizes in fourteen scenes the life and career of Galileo, the father of modern science.

Both of these plays are colorful and thrilling presentations of adventure and character. The publishers, Bruce Humphries, Inc., Boston and New York, are interested in them not only as closet dramas, but feel certain that they have stage and movie possibilities, and are publishing them with this end in view.

Dr. Hult is already widely known because of his previous authorship—his two earlier volumes of verse, and his Ibsen translations, especially his translation of "Peer Gynt," a Norwegian masterpiece. His wife, who now takes her place beside him as a poet in her own right, has already published much verse in magazines of the highest quality and standing, but this being her initial volume, a somewhat more extended account of her life and literary antecedents are not out of place.

When the author of "Shadows on the Wall" was two years old, her parents left their home in New York and came to Minnesota.

To the keen delights of her free reined childhood on these broad rolling prairies, Mrs. Hult attributes that banked-up zest for living that later strove for outlet in story and verse. Long rides through the new country beside her father, days of fishing with him on some hushed wooded lake, hours of entranced companionship with new kittens in the big barn loft—breath taking pleasures, these, but hardly more intense than those snatched in quiet corners with the every ready book.

This enchanted season ended with the close of high school days. The family's removal from the town of Litchfield brought within reach the eagerly desired advantages of the state University at Minneapolis.

Here the romantic and book-hungry girl met one of like leanings, the young Scandinavian poet, Gottfried Hult—at this time just completing extensive post-graduate work. Their many brimming letters, and the passing back and forth of magazines including his poetry and the slender volume containing her early verse served to deepen their first mutual recognition. Following their marriage, they sailed for Germany to carry on their studies in Leipzig. In two years Gottfried Hult accepted a fellowship from the University of Chicago. In this city the little family, now increased, spent a fruitful 12 months.

Followed strenuous years of college teaching for Mr. Hult, at times shared by his wife. This close application of the energies was relieved, after a few years, by some months of leisurely travel and lingering in the various countries of Europe. And again, upon return, Mrs. Hult experienced—from this romance of strangeness and intriguing glimpse into the lives of other people and their ways—a heightening of consciousness and pressure of the story impulse. Her stories appeared in the "Century;" others followed written for young people in "St. Nicholas," "Youth's Companion" and other juvenile publications.

Midway in this preoccupation, the pursuit of health for the little daughter and herself drew her to the beaches of southern California, where their recent years, with some exceptions have been passed.

No doubt such companionship with the ocean—so unregardful of the human, so suggestive of mysteries beyond our ken—has served to divorce thought from the colorful story and call back the verse-writing of her early youth. For more than fifteen years Mrs. Hult has found her leading interest in this form of expression.

Looking Back In Our

SIoux SPORTS SUMMARY

By Guy Campbell, '41

AL RASCHICK
... co-captain ...

Coach C. A. West has given North Dakota fans another conference championship football team. The veteran mentor successfully piloted Sioux gridders through another campaign which found them in a three way tie for the conference title at the end of the season.

The Nodaks, given only an outside chance of winning but three games at the start of the season, up-set all predictions by winning five out of eight battles. They won four out of five conference tilts to share the conference championship with South Dakota State and South Dakota University.

The record of this year's football machine is impressive when one stops to consider the prospects at the start of the season. When 36 candidates reported for early drills on September 4 it was a striking contrast to the material on hand in previous years. The squad had been hard hit by graduations in 1938 and most of the candidates to report were inexperienced. Coach West had only ten lettermen about which to build a team. The weight and size of the team as a whole was far below the standards of other years.

One thing the team didn't lack, however, was spirit. Realizing that little was expected of them, the entire squad set out to prove to the critics that they could play football—the brand of ball taught by Coach West. They worked hard during those first few weeks. Harder than any Nodak squad before them in the few short weeks before their first game.

Facing Omaha in the first game of the season, North Dakota went into the game as the underdog. Omaha had a more experienced team and outweighed the lighter Nodaks at least ten pounds to the man. Pflaster and Dutcher, ace backs for the visitors, were expected to run rough-shod over the Sioux.

To the surprise of the fans, the Nodaks went after Omaha with a smashing brand of ball from the opening kick-off and didn't let up for a minute. The game uncovered such sophomore stars as Walter Dobler, speedy left halfback, Mike Doyle, pass snaging end, and Bud Monnes, brilliant defensive center. Final score: North Dakota, 13; Omaha, 0.

The following week the Sioux met a strong Luther team from Decorah, Iowa. Again North Dakota faced a heavier and more experienced team, and again were rated as the underdog. That game produced new stars. The Sioux unleashed a passing attack which baffled the Luther team and amazed the fans as well. Dobler pitched the ball all over the field and Doyle, Brenkus and Leafe caught enough of them to score three touchdowns. Final score: North Dakota, 19; Luther, 0.

"It can't last," everyone said.

NORMAN LEAFE
... co-captain ...

"They are playing above their heads. Coach Starbeck always has a good team at Iowa Teachers and he has a good one this year." The Sioux again kicked over the dope bucket as North Dakota backs ripped the Iowa line to shreds and passed them dizzy. With Richards, Sioux tackle, and Raschick, left guard, bolstering the light Nodak line, the Iowa Teacher's running attack couldn't function. Final score: North Dakota, 19; Iowa Teachers, 6.

After that third victory of the season the Sioux were beginning to come in for some of the credit due them. A formidable Toledo team, coached by Clarence "Doc" Spears, was the next team on the schedule. Superior power and reserves told the tale and a lighter North Dakota team had its first taste of defeat this fall. They were outplayed but not outfought. Midway through the third quarter the score was tied, 7-7, but North Dakota couldn't play 16 men against a team like that. Final score: North Dakota, 7; Toledo, 26.

FOR CONFERENCE TITLE

In 1939 Season

South Dakota State at Brookings the following week-end and the Sioux found an inspired "Bunnie" team too much for them on State's annual "hobo day." The beating that the Nodaks had taken at Toledo was only too evident that day and North Dakota suffered the second straight set-back. Final score: North Dakota, 13; South Dakota State, 14.

With cries of "I told you so" ringing in their ears, the Sioux settled down to serious practice for the big homecoming game against the A. C. Determined to avenge the defeat of a year ago, they worked grimly all that week with only one thought in mind, to beat the A. C.

On a snow covered field and in a raging snowstorm, North Dakota gave the heavier Bison one of the worst beatings that has ever been administered by a "West" team. The Nodaks pushed over a touchdown early in the third quarter after a scoreless first half and came back to pound over two more in the final period. Brenkus and Dobler were the spear-heads of the Sioux attack that afternoon. Final score: North Dakota University, 18; North Dakota State, 0.

A two week rest and the Nodaks were tripped up by an inspired St. Thomas eleven in one of the biggest upsets of the season. The Tommies vaunted passing attack was too much for the Sioux secondary. North Dakota outgained their opponent in total yardage and scored 12 first downs to only eight for St. Thomas. Final score: North Dakota, 7; St. Thomas, 28.

Iowa Teachers' rout of South Dakota university suddenly put the Sioux back in the conference race after all hopes for the title had vanished following the defeat earlier in the season by South Dakota State. North Dakota had only to beat Morningside in order to share a three way tie for the conference title with South Dakota university and South Dakota State.

It was a determined Sioux team that took the field at Sioux City, Iowa, against a fighting Morningside eleven in the last game of the season. The Nodaks ran and passed their way to the most decisive victory of the season. Final score: North Dakota, 28; Morningside, 7.

North Dakota earned every right to a share of the conference title and the praise of all loyal fans. They had the best offensive and defensive records of any school in the conference. They scored 91 points to only 21 for their opponents in the conference games this fall. They made up in spirit and determination what they lacked in weight and experience.

With the return of most of the squad for next season, prospects will look much brighter than they did this fall. Norman Leafe, Marrionette, Wis., who has been one of the outstanding ends in the conference for the past two years, will captain next year's Sioux eleven along with Al Raschick, Grand Forks lad, who played such a great game at guard this year.

FROSH FOOTBALL

The 1939 North Dakota freshmen, under the guidance of Coach Clem Letich and Jack West, were one of the best Yearling elevens in recent years. Winning all three of their games by decisive margins, the frosh come in for their share of the credit.

The first freshman game of the season found the Sioux Yearlings winning over Wahpeton Science. It was the first time in three years that Wahpeton Science has lost a game and it spoiled another perfect record for them this year. The Frosh won the game easily.

In the first of the annual two game series with the AC freshmen, the Sioux Yearlings again had things pretty much their own way and won 18-6. The second game of the series, which opened the University's homecoming celebration found the Yearlings breezing through the last game 34-13.

Few freshmen teams have shown as much polish as did the 1939 Yearlings. Fans will see a lot of these lads in North Dakota lineups in the next three years.

VARSITY BASKETBALL

The approaching basketball season finds Coach Clem Letich and his cagers hard at work in preparation for their 20 game schedule this winter. The Nodaks will open their season against Wahpeton Science November 30, but will not face their first real test until December 9, when they play Aberdeen Teachers at Aberdeen.

Only five lettermen are back from last year's squad and only one of these, Bernie White, was a starter. The other returning veterans are Homme, Alger, Burich and Simonson. Eide, regular center last year, and Chuck Nelson are not back in school this fall.

However, plenty of good material has come up from last year's crop of freshmen, and Coach Letich should be able to mold a strong team with the aid of this sophomore strength. The material is inexperienced but with such lads as Gran, Olson, Stevenson, Beall, Peterson, Monnes and Caldis, Letich should have one of the best teams in the conference.

In early drills all players showed improvement over last season's form but were still weak on defense. "We need guards who can throw up a stiff defense, but our shots will have to improve greatly. We can set up an offense that will take the ball down, but the frosh missed too many easy ones last winter and they still miss them," explained Letich.

INTRAMURAL SPORTS

With the approach of the winter season intramural basketball and hockey schedules are getting off to a flying start. A strong Sigma Chi team, last year's champion, looks like a favorite to repeat in the basketball race, but will be pushed hard by strong Tcke and Macnie fives. The Delts and A. T. O.'s have strong hockey teams and look like favorites to take the ice race.

The Phi Delts walked away with the touchball honors this fall by beating a stubborn Macnie team. The Independents, however, evened the score by knocking off the Coulee Bankers in the finals for the volleyball crown.

Harold D. Shaft, Grand Forks, a graduate of the University law school in 1922, and a member of Sigma Nu fraternity, was one of the 15 district Red Cross roll call chairmen named in North Dakota

Weber

Describes Trip Thru War Zone

From impersonal, informal, 30-year-old Dr. Neal Weber, Associate Professor of Biology at the University of North Dakota, comes the story of submarines, strained nights, heat, and adventure.

In Africa, hunting big game and continuing his studies on the habits, classification and relationship of ants, Dr. Weber prepared to sail to the United States from Mombasa on the eastern coast of Africa on August 23.

After leaving Mombasa on the British, white, trim, 11,951 ton "Llangibby Castle," the international situation grew tense and war time precautions were taken. "The passengers were not allowed to smoke nor show any light on deck. The portholes of the ship were painted an opaque grey, and shut. Because of the terrific heat in the sealed cabins, we were forced to take our mattresses on deck, and had to sleep there for over a month. The ship itself navigated rather perilously at night without lights."

"At the port of Aden, on the Arabian coast, full military preparations were going on for war. Indian troops were pouring in; the sandbagging of public buildings had begun; a large British cruiser arrived, and on the desert anti-aircraft guns and air bases were being erected and camouflage. Eventually we were allowed on shore, but pictures were forbidden." (Dr. Weber's pictures of the entire trip taken from the "Llangibby Castle," escaped official censorship in London.)

In the stifling heat of the Red sea, probably the hottest sea in the world, and where 26 British seamen were supposed to have died, overcome by heat, Dr. Weber said of when you took a shower it was impossible to dry yourself due to heat and perspiration.

"We arrived at Port Sudan; watched the Cheshire regiment, and the town that was full of military preparations and soldiers."

Furtively leaving Port Sudan at night, the "Llangibby Castle" passed through the Suez canal, and arrived at Port Said on the morning of September 3, the day England declared war upon Germany.

"During the week that we remained at Port Said, the ship was painted a neutral battle-ship-grey, and the vulnerable portions sandbagged for protection against future bombs."

On the ninth, they sailed for Alexandria, where a convoy had converged, and there under the eye of six destroyers, bombing and military planes, the convey zig-zagged through the Mediterranean for England.

The planes presented an interest-

Lurton

Successful In Magazine Field

A young reporter on the Grand Forks Herald wanted to get ahead, to make more money than the newspaper was able to pay him. The town was small, the paper was small, his salary was small. How was he ever going to make more money?

He hit on an idea which changed his whole life. This was the idea: The way to get ahead is to create something new that is needed.

That's all. Just 13 words.

He realized that the people who made the big money were not the people who did routine work. They were the ones who thought up something new.

COMPLETELY SIMPLE

His specific and concrete working out of his general idea was this: That people would be interested in a pocket-size magazine which helped them with their daily problems. That is, how to get a job, how to get to sleep if you suffer from insomnia, how to cure an inferiority complex. That's all there was to it. Completely simple.

He told people about it. They laughed. The idea was too simple. Somebody must have thought of it before, anyway. But he kept on. Studying, reading, developing the idea.

When the Literary Digest failed, he was assistant editor of the magazine, his inspiration was born. "Now is the time to present my idea. They will probably want a magazine. I'll take my idea to them."

FUNK SAYS YES

He armed himself with ammunition. Got facts and everything available and went in to see Wilfred J. Funk. He talked with enthusiasm and conviction. In exactly 30 minutes Mr. Funk said yes. They shook hands. The deal was made. He had worked all these years for that half-hour. But it was worth it.

This was in April. The first issue of the magazine was on the newsstands in October. It takes the average new magazine three years to break even. This magazine made money on the first number.

Its name—"Your Life." Its editor and originator—Douglas E. Lurton. Lurton attended the University of North Dakota from 1916 to 1918. He was a member of Phi Delta Theta, and of Sigma Delta Chi, honorary journalism fraternity. After his graduation, he worked with several different papers. From them he went to the Fawcett Publications, to the Literary Digest—and finally, fame.

So successful was this outstanding development in the field of periodical literature that two related magazines were launched, "Your Health" and "Your Personality." The idea behind all three magazines is that the most fascinating subject in the world is "YOU"—your life, your happiness, your health, your mind, your personality, your future. The magazines were immediately successful for the theory that most people are primarily interested in themselves proved to be sound and insured the magazines with a large circulation. The initial publication was designed to be, in the words of the subtitle, a "Popular Guide to Desirable Living."

ing sight," said Dr. Weber. "Flying low, ahead of the convoy, searching for submarines, they would suddenly swoop around to the back to guard ships that had gotten behind."

One of the destroyers that accompanied the convoy was from Poland—one of the few that had succeeded in evading the German navy. "It was very sleek looking, and reputed to be the fastest ship afloat," Dr. Weber said.

"One day in the English channel four destroyers former a semi-circle, and bombers flew low in the circle dropping bombs. We could hear the terrific noise as depth charges went off, and see the violent churning of the water. It was on this day that the British were supposed to have destroyed a submarine."

Dr. Weber spent ten days in London accustoming himself to blackouts before he boarded the refugee ship "St. John," chartered by the United States government.

Student Flying

ments, five hours; radio, two hours; and parachutes one hour.

Pilots will receive between 35 and 45 hours of flight instruction, split into one half hour periods. For the first four weeks they receive three hours per week of actual flight instruction. This phase of the course began November 21 for half the students. The remainder will begin as soon as their flight instructors have the opportunity to take their tests, which are given by regular army flyers. Each instructor is assigned 10 students.

Instructors furnish their own planes which are insured by the government. These must pass certain requirements as to airworthiness. The instructor is paid his regular fee as flight instructor, which in turn covers the upkeep of the planes. The four instructors for the University are Titus Richards, manager of the Grand Forks airport; Ed Skroch, Les Jolly and Harry Faleide.

In every University activity there must be a romantic interest and it is supplied in the air course by Kay Lawrence of Grand Forks, a sophomore in education, and the only woman student pilot in the crowd.
