Association Launches Campaign to Establish University Memorial Field

At Homecoming last fall, announcement was made by the Board of Directors of the Alumni Association, of a plan to raise half a million dollars among friends, students and alumni of the University of North Dakota to build a new Memorial stadium, gymnasium and field for the institution.

Since that date plans have been going rapidly ahead and the drive is known as the Greater University Memorial athletic project with headquarters in the basement of Main building at the university.

Of the $500,000 goal, it is proposed that $50,000 be expended on the new field; that $200,000 be spent on the stadium, and that the remainder be used for the gymnasium. The entire structure, which will cover approximately 25 acres, will be surrounded by a high brick wall.

Paul L. Samuelson, former prominent university student and an alumnus of the class of 1923, is directing the drive for funds. Mr. Samuelson for several years has been a successful newspaper publisher in California, Minnesota and North Dakota. When the idea of the campaign originated Paul was suggested as the one man who could "put it over big," and since his return here in October he has been proving that this was entirely right.

Double Memorial Purpose

The campaign holds a double memorial purpose. It will honor the university's sons who gave their lives in the world war, and that great man, President Webster Merrifield, whose efforts meant so much in the early stages of the development of the university.

The university is at the cross-road

so far as intra-mural and intercollegiate athletics are concerned. At present we have no practice football field, no swimming pools and only about one-third the basketball space we should have. Then for many years we have had insufficient seating capacity for both football and basketball.

These ailments should be remedied if North Dakota is to take the place she deserves in athletics.

Who will place the university in the athletic sun? Alumni, students and friends of the institution. How will they go about it? By subscribing to the best of their ability to the drive.

Mr. Samuelson returned some time ago from a trip to several leading schools in the country, such as Michigan, Illinois, Chicago, Northwestern, Drake, Iowa State, Purdue and Minnesota. While away he studied several campaign plans and from the whole he worked out a method of procedure for the local drive.

Series of Drives Planned

Since November he has been explaining the drive with publicity throughout the state, and in February he will open up the drive on the university campus. Then in a series successive drives will be held in Grand Forks, in the state and in the nation.

Mr. Samuelson sums up the idea for the Alumni magazine, as follows:

"The half million dollar campaign is a mammoth task and it will take the whole-hearted support of everyone interested in the university.

"It is the first opportunity our former students have had to participate in establishing a worthy memorial at our Alma Mater. The University of North Dakota has that fine spirit which makes of everyone who attends the institution a loyal alumnus and I believe all will respond by subscribing in this campaign to show their appreciation of the benefits they derived at good old North Dakota, as well as contributing toward an objective that is badly needed at our university.

"Our Alma Mater is growing fast. It needs the new proposed athletic project. A new stadium, gymnasium and field will be a fitting memorial to our university and it will serve to place North Dakota on a par with any institution in the country."

Directors Named for Memorial Drive

Upon the Board of Directors pictured above rests the amount of success which is to be achieved by the University of North Dakota Memorial corporation in its drive for $500,000, which will go to build a new gymnasium, stadium and field for future Nodaks.

M. B. Ruud, President of the Board of Directors, a graduate of the university in 1907, and now a leading physician in Grand Forks; Philip R. Bangs, assistant state's attorney and a university graduate in 1913, and Paul L. Samuelson, director of the drive, who is serving as an ex-officio member of the board and also as its secretary.

now a prominent banker in New York City; Fred L. Goodman, President of the Northwestern Trust Co., of this city, well known as a prominent banker throughout the northwest; Walter Schlosser, an alumnus in 1913, a former star university football tackle, and now vice president of the Electric Construction Co., of Grand Forks, and Arthur L. Netcher, of Fessenden, who graduated in 1909, a football star while in school, and now a banker and attorney at Fessenden.

Alumni Organize at Dickinson, N. D.

Ten University of North Dakota alumni, who are located in the southwestern part of the state, gathered at Dickinson October 17 and organized the Dickinson U. N. D. Club, "the Club of the Southwest." Organization of the club took place following a banquet held at Villard Hotel.

Purposes of the organization as set forth at the meeting are to create the spirit of U. N. D. fellowship among all graduates, to "sell" the University to the people of southwestern North Dakota, helping remove the misunderstanding and prejudice which too often exist. Meetings of the club are to be held annually whenever teachers reunite and at such other times as may seem desirable.

No special officers were named, Duane Squires or someone whom he designates to call the group together next year. Since the organization took place on Homecoming Day, a telegram was dispatched to Pep-King Oliver Peterson wishing the best of good luck for the football game.

Charter members of the club are: Rose Pathmann, Harold Boe, Leanna Gibbens, Roland Harding, Allie Dickson, Lester Steig, Frank Richards, O. J. Lakkin, Jette Munkeby, and Duane Squires.

Anderson Recognized as Leading Dramatist

Heading the Sunday, Sept. 13, drama section of the New York Times, is a review of Maxwell Anderson's (B.A. '11) new play, "Outside Looking In."

"However much opinion may differ as to the merits of Maxwell Anderson's comedy, 'Outside Looking In,' now on view at the Greenwich Village," the review begins, "most playgoers will agree that it is drama worth considering seriously. For it is drama, not merely off the beaten track, but displaying a sincere endeavor to portray a group of real characters in the midst of their real environment. Like 'What Price Glory,' of which Mr. Anderson was one of the authors, it places emphasis less upon story than character—group character as well as individual; the form is amorphous; the humors, a matter of dialogue. In the last act the author concedes something to sentimentality, withal well crusted over with the shyness of the ruffian ashamed of himself. Letting his play ramble as much as it chooses, spicing it with incidents which have slight dramatic value apart from themselves, Mr. Anderson has nevertheless kept his team of characters well in hand.

"The chief merit of 'Outside Looking In' as stuff for the stage," the review further states, "is the sardonic humor of the dialogue . . . Whether Mr. Anderson has written a play or not, the playgoer must decide for himself . . . But surely the stuff of drama is here."

Burns Mantle, syndicate writer, whose material is made available to Grand Forks through the Grand Forks Herald, "recently has had reviews of both 'Outside Looking In' and the Maxwell Anderson-Laurence Stallings new drama, 'First Flight.'"

Excerpts from each of the reviews follow:

"The first of the super-realistic plays to startle the trade is one called 'Outside Looking In.' It is a dramatization of Jim Tully's autobiography of a tramp entitled 'Beggars of Life.' It was prepared for the stage by Maxwell Anderson who helped Laurence Stallings write 'What Price Glory,' and it is both profane and verminous. But it is, as the war play was, drama with a large and defiant 'D.'"

"'Outside Looking In' introduces its audience to a gang of hobos cooking their slum in the lee of a railroad trestle in North Dakota. They are of the type of vagrant migratory for whom I. Eads Howe bespeaks your human sympathy as the unfortunate unemployed. They include the romantic type of 'imaginative young vagabond who quickly loses the social instincts that help to make life bearable for other men.' And the frankly unregenerate type that is mentally deficient and morally debased."

A decree of the hobo court in one part of the play is "a masterfully written satire on our organized courts of justice," the reviewer says.

Mr. Mantle states further of the play, "It is vivid and striking melodrama. With or without a censorship of its profanity, I expect it to run the season through."

Of the joint-authorship play, Mr. Mantle writes as follows:

"The disappointment of the week was the second Laurence Stallings and Maxwell Anderson drama, they being the already widely celebrated authors of last season's sensational war drama, 'What Price Glory?'"

"This one is called 'First Flight' and resolves about an unpublished incident in the life of Andrew Jackson the time he was sent into North Carolina to straighten out the matter of the seceding free state of Frankland.

"It is a talkative, sluggish and never very interesting play. The love scenes are nice!"

A volume of poems, "You Who Have Dreams" by Maxwell Anderson, has recently been published by Simon and Schuster. Joseph Auslander reviewing the volume in the New York World states that "Maxwell Anderson, as 'Outside Looking In' makes manifest, is a poet with plenty of dark fire in his belly . . . In this, the first volume of his verses, the poet that is Anderson ranges indisputably and melodiously over a varied terrain."

In closing his review, Mr. Auslan-der writes, "Maxwell Anderson, despite his predilection for the orthodox forms, despite an occasional suspicion of dexterity, possesses a haunting melodic power, a subtle secret of melancholy repetition, a skill in implicit drama, a terse, intense, packed lyrical vigor."

Leroy F. Jackson Wins Attention As School Director

In the September 15 issue of "The Survey," pages 626-627, is an article concerning the work of Leroy F. Jackson, B. A. '02, as director of the Stanley McCormick school at Burnsville, N. C.

"Our program at Stanley McCormick school," writes Mr. Jackson, "began four years ago with the taking over of an established secondary school of the standard type, located at Burnsville, in the mountains of western North Carolina. It had a fair plant and equipment for accommodating about 100 boarding and day students. The project was initiated by the country life department of the Presbyterian Board of National Missions under the direction of Warren H. Wilson. Mrs. Cyrus M. McCormick of Chicago, provided the plant, erected new buildings and in large part undertook the support of the institution. Since her death two years ago the support has been continued by her daughter, Mrs. Emmons Blaine and her two sons, Cyrus and Harold McCormick.

"This is our present status: We are neither a standard high school nor a college but merely an institution devoted to giving young people, especially the young people of the southern mountains, a 'liberal education' in the light of modern needs. We have a very modest plant and equipment and a faculty of fourteen persons chosen for their human sympathy and outlook as well as for their scholarship. We are small in numbers and have little ambition to grow in that direction; our plans look to an ultimate enrolment of not more than 250 students and twenty-five teachers.

"We have a definite course of training leading to graduation, not because we believe in graduation, but because American society today looks askance at a man without some sort of scholastic imprint. This course proceeds through four phases—a preliminary or preparatory training and a basic, a special and a correlating phase of a regular five year course.

Memorial Campaign to Have 4 Drives

RUTH HANCOCK

OLIVER PETERSON

HAROLD GOLBERG

There are four individual drives in the University of North Dakota's half million dollar campaign for a new gymnasium-stadium and field, according to Director Paul L. Samuelson.

The first will start on the University campus on February 22 in connection with the Founders' day program, running for two or three days. Six weeks later the drive will commence among the alumni and businessmen of Grand Forks, and alumni in North Dakota, and the nation will not be solicited possibly until next fall.

Three of the most outstanding honors conferred on University students in recent years were given to Oliver Peterson and Harold Golberg of Minot, and Ruth Hancock of New York City, in connection with the campus drive.

Mr. Peterson was chosen by a committee of seven prominent University officials to act as Campus Campaign Chairman of the drive. On the committee were: President Thomas F. Kane, Capt. Lawrence Quinn, Dean Beatrice Olson, Frank Webb, J. W. Wilkerson, Coach P. J. Davis, and Professor Nell Martindale. Miss Hancock was appointed by the committee to act as chairman of the women's all-campus committee, and Mr. Golberg was given the same title among the men.

The drive on the campus is to be worked on the Army system so far as the workers are concerned. Mr. Peterson, as campus campaign chairman, will be in direct supervision of all the campus workers, while Mr. Golberg and Miss Hancock will be respectively in charge of the men and women. Under Mr. Golberg will be six division commanders, who in turn will look after 24 captains. The captains will have charge of five lieutenants, who will do the active work of soliciting the student body. Miss Hancock's committee will be arranged in the same fashion.

The work of solicitation will be so highly centralized on the campus that each pair of lieutenants will know just where to find the eight people they are supposed to solicit. Canvassing in pairs, with one man and one woman, working on a student, has been decided upon as the most effective method of raising subscriptions.

"One hundred percent subscription on the campus" will be the motto of the drive. This means that each student is expected to give something, no matter how little. The standard pledge has been set at $100.00 for the entire drive, but undoubtedly many alumni, and some of the students, will top this figure by a good margin. One hundred dollars, with five years to pay the total, in either quarterly or semi-annual payments every year, has been deemed a very reasonable figure. Dividing a $100 apportionment it is found that each student would have to pay $5.00 every three months during the five year drive; thus making but $20.00 a year.

Alumnus Raises School Funds By Unique Method

Faced by a serious situation in the lack of equipment for his school at Oakes, N. D., Larry B. Slater, B. A. '22, conceived a plan which, because of uniqueness, has won him press attention throughout the northwest as well as in the larger eastern cities. Altogether through his plan, Mr. Slater has been able to raise $1,200 for seating equipment for the auditorium of his school.

"Seeking 3,800 generous Johnsons, the city of Oakes, N. D., turned to Minneapolis today," writes the Minneapolis Journal, "and L. B. Slater, youngest school superintendent in the state, took a Minneapolis directory in one hand, a telephone book in the other, and the name of 'Johnson' for his keynote, in a drive to put seats in the school at Oakes.

"He needs 3,800 Johnsons at $1 each, or 7,600 by the 50 cent piece. And," he said, "there ought to be enough Johnsons in the northwest to raise $1,000,000.

"He wants the 3,800 to contribute $1 each, to furnish seats for the school auditorium at Oakes, N. D.

"A Minneapolis directory, bearing the names of 7,000 Johnsons, gave Mr. Slater the idea of sending a letter to every Johnson in the northwest, asking donations to help furnish what will be known as the 'Johnson Memorial Auditorium' at the school.

"Mr. Slater addressed letters to 'Dear Mr. Johnsons' all over the northwest. Telephone directories, lists of Johnsons compiled by clubs and commercial organizations, city directories, trade lists, gave him his Johnson mailing list."

As stated by the St. Paul Sunday Pioneer Press, "Mr. Slater informs the Johnsons that 'a financial report to all donors, telling of the disposal of all funds received' will be made, all duly 'signed and notaried at the bank.'

"The names of all Johnsons who contribute, together with their addresses shall be placed in a large glass-enclosed frame properly engraved and placed in a conspicuous position in the auditorium," his letter states."

Both the New York Times and the Washington Times contained articles about Mr. Slater's plan as well as many other papers of the country at large.

FOUNDERS DAY PROGRAM

The Founders' Day program, Feb. 22, commemorating the forty-third anniversary of the University, will be given in the theme of "An Epoch in the University's Growth." The program will initially launch the Alumni Memorial Campaign for $500,000.

It is expected that all alumni in Grand Forks and many from throughout the state will attend the festivities, which will be conducted as follows:

WOMEN GRADUATES

Their Accomplishments and Achievements

DEAN BEATRICE M. OLSON, B.A., '09

By Margaret A. Beede, '17

There are few positions more truly representative of the broadest, the highest and the finest in education than that of dean of women in any college or university. So many and varied are the qualifications for such a work that it seems as if successful deans must be born and not made. Sympathy, tact, wisdom, resourcefulness—all these are surely attributes of a dean of women. Even more than these, however, are courage and idealism, a courage which quietly and steadily hews itself a path, an idealism which expresses itself in a practical, working faith in the college man and the college woman.

Such qualities, those alumni who have known her for many years have found in Beatrice Olson. Because of this they are conscious of a feeling of pride, pride in that institution to which Dean Olson is giving her service, and pride in her who is thus spending herself for her Alma Mater.

Beatrice Olson is a genuine North Dakota product. She was born in the town of Buxton, thirty miles south of the university, a town in which, as in many others of the Mid-West, the prairie steals up into the door yards; and yet a town where the intelligence and initiative of its inhabitants are not measured by the number and size of its buildings. The date of her birth, too, is significant, for it marks her as being one of the youngest women in the country to hold such an important position as that of dean of women, this youth enabling her to come close to the college women of to-day, to understand them, and to sympathize with them in their problems.

This state, moreover, was not only her mother; it was also, to a great extent, her teacher. Her grade work, she took in the public schools of Buxton; her college training, in the University of North Dakota, where she graduated as a member of Phi Beta Kappa. Later she obtained her degree of Master of Arts from the University of Chicago. She also spent three years as deputy county superintendent in Traill County; was principal of the high school at Rugby; taught in the high school at Fargo; taught in the State Normal School at Ellendale, where she was head of the Department of English; became secretary in the Extension Division of the University of North Dakota, in this capacity having charge of the correspondence courses and the lyceum work; taught English in the university. These activities gave her valuable experience—gave her a sympathy with, and a knowledge of, human nature, especially human nature as expressed in the young people of North Dakota—an experience which has proved exceedingly helpful to her in the greater work in which she is now engaged.

Dean Beatrice M. Olson

While in college she was especially fortunate in enjoying excellent opportunities to develop natural qualities of poise and leadership. She was a member of Adelphi literary society, a participant in the freshman oratorical contest, one of the speakers in the Main declamation contest and in the Gansl debate, a member of the debating board of control and the class play committee. She spent one summer school at the Emerson College of Oratory in Boston. All of this training and experience she has been able to combine effectively with the duties and privileges appertaining to her deanship. She is in much demand as a Commencement speaker, where she is able to employ those same qualities of poise and charm and sincerity which are valuable to her as dean of women.

Upon being questioned, however, about the influence of her college life, Dean Olson replied:

"One of the biggest influences was the work done with three of the professors here, Dean Squires, Dean Kennedy, and Dr. Gillette. They showed me the value of learning how to think. They are three of the strongest teachers I have ever come in contact with."

Concerning the possibilities for women in the field of education, she said:

"Teaching needs the best. There is no place in it for mediocre workers. I never encourage a girl to enter this field unless I think she is qualified for it, for an occupation so high in public esteem and so far-reaching in its influence should have within its ranks those who are vitally interested in it, and who really want to make it their profession."

In order to aid women students in their choice of a profession, Dean Olson arranges for sophomore conferences with them, where she endeavors to arouse their interest in vocational information and to stimulate their imagination. She has been instrumental in bringing to the university, the past two years, vocational experts of national reputation, who have given the women information and advice along vocational lines. She has also introduced another new feature, her course for high school advisers, which is offered in the School of Education. Columbia and New York University are two schools offering similar courses. Thus Dean Olson not only aids a student in finding that work for which she seems best qualified, but also helps her to prepare herself for a special field of usefulness.

One who knows Dean Olson well, a former teacher of hers, who is also a graduate of the University of North Dakota, has paid her this tribute, describing her in the words of Van Dyke:

"A certain openness of mind to learn the daily lessons of the school of life; a certain willingness of heart to give and to receive that extra service, that gift beyond the strict measure of debt which makes friendship possible; a certain clearness of spirit to perceive the best in things and people, to love it without fear and to cleave to it without mistrust; a peaceable sureness of affection and taste; a gentle straightforwardness of action; a kind sincerity of speech,—these are the marks of the simple life, which cometh not with observation, for it is within you. I have seen it in a hut. I have seen it in a palace. And wherever it is found it is the best prize of the school of life, the badge of a scholar well-beloved of the Master."

The Greater University's family who laid down their lives Memorial for the cause of freedom in the Great War, and to honor that dearly beloved president, Webster Merrifield, who gave so much of his life so unreservedly to the interests of the University, the Alumni Association seeks to establish a Greater University Memorial. Decision to do so has taken form in a plan to purchase a permanent athletic field and construct thereon a stadium and a gymnasium.

In the interests of this plan there has been incorporated by a number of the alumni the University Memorial Corporation, and steps for the launching of a campaign to raise funds are now actively under way. The goal has been set at $500,000.00 and Paul L. Samuelson, of the Class of 1923, has been made director in charge.

Doubtless questions arise in the minds of many alumni. Not one of us but has the interests of the University at heart. This tendency to ask frank questions about the project is an evidence of interest, decided interest. To you, to me, to the next one of U. N. D.'s loyal family of graduates and former students come questions concerning advisability, practicality, possibility of accomplishment, and the like. We are ones who will shoulder our share when our turns come, but because of our willingness to do that very thing, we wish to question, to become thoroughly familiar with, and to make suggestions for the plans. It is our inherent right to question. Not only that, we wish to do a little thinking in the interests of the mother from whom we gained so much of our understanding and insight, our training for fuller accomplishments and deeper enjoyment in life.

First comes the question as to whether the University is yet ready for such a memorial, whether the alumni body is sufficiently large. While this may seem a minor point in that smaller schools than ours have sponsored similar and greater memorials, yet the question arises. There comes to the mind of the writer, however, a blunt picture from the pages of history, namely, that of Columbus. Decidedly, the earth was not yet ready in Columbus' day for several ships and crews to sail out to the edge of the earth's flat surface and tumble off. Yet had Columbus waited for a suitable time, the earth would probably still have been flat.

Second is the question of method and whether or not the bite is too big to chew. The question of method bothers not so much, for the association sent the director first of all to a number of other colleges and universities for a survey and study of means already employed and found successful. The question of the size of the bite remains longer in the mind. It looms enormous. Despite the fact that other schools with no better means of mastication than we have, did chew, swallow, and digest bites as big, can we accomplish the chewing, swallowing and digesting of our bite? Will it bring about too great a straining of muscles and cause lockjaw and indigestion? Therein method counts a great deal. We can always spew out a portion of it. But, the strongest point of it all is that it affords us a big test and gives us certainly a huge opportunity to do something for our school.

Third stands the question of the memorial itself, the form it should take. A permanent athletic field, a stadium, a gymnasium. Why create a memorial of this type? Though there may be other possibilities, the present athletic field will in a few years be demanded for other of the University's needs and the purchase of a permanent field will be necessary, the legislature will hesitate to purchase more ground for us and will most certainly deny money for a stadium, and the present armory should be turned over to the R. O. T. C. without the imposition of housing, whether it can or no, the athletics and physical education for sixteen hundred and more students. The officials in charge of the campaign are boosting "Athletics for All;" they want a memorial from which the entire student and alumni bodies and the University as a whole will benefit. It is with these things in mind that they have decided to establish a permanent athletic field, a stadium, and a gymnasium.

Other questions may arise in the minds of alumni, but such questions, like the above, are only questions, not obstacles. We sincerely believe that the campaign being launched by the Alumni of the University of North Dakota is a most worthy one and should have the support and cooperation of every one interested in the University; we believe that the time is ripe; that we have sufficient alumni to accomplish the feat, just as well as other institutions who are making similar attainments; that the goal is not too large but can be subscribed with no hardship on any individual if all will "put their shoulders to the wheel;" that the memorial objective is fitting and will remedy a long felt need at our Alma Mater as well as establish an edifice that will place North Dakota on a par with any university in the Northwest from an athletic standpoint.

Alumni, it is your first opportunity to assist in a great common memorial cause for our good old Alma Mater. Boost and support the half million dollar alumni campaign!

Despite Weather
1925 Homecoming
Real Get-together

Homecoming has come and gone. Despite unfavorable weather conditions, a large number of alumni and friends of the University attended the annual get-together.

From every standpoint, with the exception of the weather, Homecoming this year was a marked success. To cap the climax of a big day's enjoyment, the Alumni Association announced a Greater University Memorial campaign for the raising of a $500,000 fund to establish a permanent athletic field and build thereon a stadium and a gymnasium.

Friday evening, October 16, marked the opening of the 1925 Homecoming. At 6:30 o'clock in the Hotel Dacotah, the Flickertail club, which has for its purpose the boosting of athletics, entertained the football players at a banquet. Talks were given by John M. Hancock, '03, Coach Paul Jones Davis, "Chick" Conmy, '06, Arthur J. Netcher, '09, and Paul L. Samuelson, '23.

Saturday morning, October 17, members of the freshman and sophomore classes battled in the annual class contests, the freshmen winning freedom from the traditional green cap by besting the sophomores in two of the three contests. The first year students won the push ball and tug-o'-war, and lost the sack rush.

At 1 o'clock a mammoth parade of elaborately decorated floats wended its way through the streets of the city and out to the campus. Schools, colleges, fraternities, sororities and other organizations of the university, as well as a number of Grand Forks business firms and organizations took part in the parade. Gamma Phi Beta sorority won the cup for the most

Basketball Now In Sport Limelight

By C. D. Locklin, Ex. '13

Basketball is holding the limelight at the University of North Dakota. At the time this article appears the Nodaks will be well on their way in the North Central schedule.

No one is looking for Coach C. W. Letich to turn out a championship quint, but early indications were that the Flickertails would be stronger than they were last year and that they would win more games. The new mentor had a veteran squad of players report to him for early practice. But one man was lost from the 1924-25 collection, but the material for the past three years has been below the calibre the school has enjoyed for a like preceding period.

However, two additions, one a recruit from the last year's freshman aggregation and another from the campus league, has strengthened the varsity greatly and both are expected to see plenty of service. Don Thompson, of Devils Lake, a sophomore, has showed plenty of class, but Letich had not decided at the opening of the season just where he would fit in best. Merton Jacobson of Churchs Ferry, big, powerful athlete, had landed regularly, but it was a question whether he would do best at forward or center.

Captain Ed Boe has been working at center while Golberg, Edwards, Yoder and Loughin have been the main forward contestants.

The guards, Wilde, Hammerickson, Veigel and Woutat, are about all on equal terms, although Veigel seems to be the only one anywhere sure of a permanent position, and his chances look slim for the second semester, as Lindell, a member of the freshman team will be eligible at that time and seems almost sure of a regular berth.

Freshman Team Strong

A peculiar situation exists in basketball. The freshman team is stronger than the varsity, which in no way is a discredit to the regulars, for the present crop of yearling cage artists is not only the greatest in the history of the university, but the greatest ever collected in the state. The school, while making no great boasts about the present season is not at all backward in saying next year will see the Flickertails sweep everything before them.

The freshman first team is composed of Lee and Eberly of Valley City, Boyd of Boulder, Colorado, Alford Letich of Yankton, S. D. and Lindell of Crookston. Lee and Eberly are all-state cage athletes. Lee holds down center and Eberly a forward. Boyd and Lindell are guards. The former was an all-state guard in Colorado, while Lindell was a star on both high school and independent teams at Crookston. Letich, a forward, comes from the three times state championship Yankton high team, runner-up in the national tournament at Chicago in 1923, when he was selected an all-American high school forward.

There are stars also on the freshman second team in Solberg of Churchs Ferry; Vandersluis of Minot; Sheppard of Bismarck; Farmer of Grand Forks; and Wambach of Moorhead, Minn.

Football a Disappointment

The football season, which closed in November at Milwaukee and which loomed bright last September, was a disappointment. With a fine nuclei of veterans and a great collection of promising stars from the freshman team, the Flickertails were expected to finish next to Creighton, the strongest team in the loop.

In the opening contest Moorhead Normal was swamped. In the second Minnesota's strong outfit was played 25 to 6, then in the first conference tilt South Dakota was defeated 3 to 0 in the mud. The Nodaks continued piling up scores by swamping Jamestown college, then handed Morning-side its worst conference defeat 24 to 0.

The Flickertails entered the game against the Aggies favorites, but suffered a heartbreaking defeat 19 to 10 through loose playing. They never recovered from the loss, for Creighton won 20 to 7 and Marquette took the closing contest 13 to 0.

Loose playing also featured both the Creighton and Marquette games, and caused both losses. North Dakota was most unfortunate in its fumbles. Two in each of the last three games either resulted directly in touchdowns or paved the way for scores. But in practically all cases, scores could have been averted by better tackling. Long runs in the Minnesota game showed early in the season that the Flickertails would have to improve in that department and Davis spent long hours with his men on the dummy, but Miller raced away twice for long runs in the A. C. game that placed the ball behind the Nodak goal, while Fitzgibbons and Hickey broke away for sprints of over 70 yards in the Creighton contest.

Heavy 1926 Schedule

While the memory of the season still lingers, hopes are higher for next fall than they were last, for Steener-son, right guard, is the only regular who will be lost next spring. With the great array of veterans back and bolstered by a dozen freshman stars, North Dakota should have the strongest grid team it ever boasted.

Paul J. Davis, physical director believed this when he arranged the 1926 schedule, for aside from 1923, next fall's grid program is the hardest ever attempted.

The season will open September 25 at Grand Forks against Dakota Wesleyan college of Mitchell, S. D. On October 2 the Flickertails will go to Minneapolis for their annual tilt with Minnesota. October 9 will see the team at Iowa City playing its second Big Ten contest with the University of Iowa. The opening of the conference season will come October 16 at Vermillion when the Nodaks meet South Dakota university. On the 23rd South Dakota State will come to Grand Forks for the Homecoming battle, while Des Moines will play on the home field October 30. The annual battle with the Aggies is scheduled for November 7 at Fargo. The season will end at Milwaukee November 13, with the Marquette tilt.

CHICAGO CLUB HOLDS CHRISTMAS BANQUET

Thomas Chisholm, the president, lost no energy to provide jollity for the guests both as toastmaster and by hiring as his Christmas gift to the club, the services of a five piece orchestra for dancing. Alumni Hotels To Be Designated In All Cities Of Country

The associated alumni of seventy leading colleges and universities in America are designating one hotel in practically every city of the United States and Canada as a member of a nation-wide chain of inter-collegiate alumni hotels. In New York and Chicago three hotels will be designated.

The actuating motive behind the plan is to provide a common meeting ground for college men and women under conditions that will make for social congeniality, thus furthering and strengthening the coordination of alumni interests, upon which every higher educational institution must depend to a great extent.

The alumni magazines of all the participating institutions will be kept on file in the reading room of each intercollegiate alumni hotel. Lists containing the names of local alumni will also be maintained by the alumni magazines.

All college men and women who travel regularly will soon be able to chart their course so that they can move from one alumni home to another, meeting friends wherever they go and resuming old friendships.

A national publicity campaign will inform alumni of the cooperation which will be extended by the designated hotels and an effort made to have all alumni activities center in them.

Anyone wishing to secure information concerning the plan, which involves many additional interesting details, may write to Levering Tyson, 311 East Hall, Columbia University.

FRANZO CRAWFORD HOLDS FELLOWSHIP AT HARVARD

Franzo Crawford, graduate of the University of North Dakota in the year 1920, holds a fellowship in the graduate school at Harvard University.

After his graduation from the University, Mr. Crawford assisted for several months in the Physics department, setting out in 1921 for England as a Rhodes scholar from North Dakota.

During the two following years he prepared for the final honor examinations in Natural Science (Chemistry). During the intervals between Oxford terms, he took a number of very interesting journeys to various parts of England and the continent. He spent a summer in the University of Leipzig.

After the final examinations at St. John's College, Oxford, Mr. Crawford traveled through the Balkans to Greece, Turkey, Egypt and Palestine. A number of interesting and exciting adventures attended his travels. For example, in Jaffa he was arrested by His Majesty's Royal Indian Troops as a deserter. He was immediately freed on the arrival of the captain of the Port.

On another occasion the boat on which Mr. Crawford's party had expected to sail was due to reach Smyrna on the day on which the Turks burned the city and drove the Greeks into the sea. A change in plans at the last minute kept the party from arriving at the time of the attack.

The year following, Mr. Crawford spent in research with occasional trips to Scotland, Ireland and France.

On returning to America he taught a year in the Physics Department at Northwestern University. During that time he was elected to a Harvard Fellowship by the president and fellows of Harvard University. His present address is No. 4 Conant Hall, Oxford Street, Cambridge, Massachusetts.

DESPITE WEATHER 1925 HOMECOMING REAL GET-TOGETHER

beautiful float, and Delta Zeta sorority was awarded the prize for the most unique float.

Football, too, was a big success. In their first conference battle of the season, the Flickertails defeated the University of South Dakota by a 3 to 0 score. Though the N. D. men held the advantage throughout no score was made until the last quarter, when Thomas, newly sent in from the sidelines, placed a perfect goal kick from the 35-yard line.

Organization reunions, a big bonfire, and an informal dance closed the day's program. Decorations made by the various fraternities and sororities in welcome to the Old Grads were the most effective in the history of the university. Kappa Alpha Theta with a farm scene won first place in this competition. Decoration of the city streets with banners and welcome was made earlier in the week.

Largely responsible for the success of this year's Homecoming was the work of the men's student conference, which had entire charge of the event. Fred Yoder, a senior student, was director in charge of the program.
