1 When I was living over there at Cass Lake 2 the big boss wanted to translate his gospel of Mark. 3 There was one woman there who was taught by Wycliffe and they started to write it. 4 One Indian woman helped her and I also helped. 5 We finally got eleven chapters done 6 and only this much we finished. 7 It did not turn out that we should do any more work on it. 8 After eight years we again started to work on it. 9 Thus we finished it.

Explanatory Note

Most of the word breaks in this data were obtained directly from the informant's interrupted discourse. The pauses (/ and //) were mostly determined by the meanings involved rather than by any final versus semi-final pauses.

KEY to symbols and several abbreviations:

-	separates morphemes
uncrt ()	uncertain with a possible meaning enclosed in the ()
.	marks length on vowels
//	final pause
/	semi-final pause
pt	past tense

The symbols pp, p, tt, t, etc. were used in much the same way as Bloomfield used them, i.e., to show fortis and lenis respectively. In my own phonetic recording, I recorded the lenis phonemes with the corresponding voiced symbol, and the fortis phonemes appeared to freely fluctuate between a lenis voicing and a fortis unvoicing.

At the edge of town there lived an old lady. She lived with a little boy whose name was Pikuci:kwi:wi:sens. There was a city there, and the king from this city often comes to visit the old lady. One time when he came to visit, he saw the boy lying there all covered up with blankets. So he says, "What's the boy doing?" "Oh he's fasting." So many days after that the king went and visited again and he saw the boy standing around there, so he says, "So you fasted?" Then he said, "Yes, yes I have." Then the king said, "What is it that you know now that you have fasted?" "Oh that I will be able to steal." "Well, then you come over and steal ten of my sheep." "All right," he said. So the king went home, then he warned his shepherds to be careful to guard his sheep so this boy could not steal them. They said they would do that. In the meantime this boy was busy making a dummy to look like himself. Then he went over to the place where the shepherds passed through with the sheep.

1 The Mink and the Muskrat
 2 Once there lived a Muskrat and a Mink. 3 Once they went hunting and killed a bear. 4 And they were afraid to eat it. 5 The Muskrat grabbed a little piece of the gut and they went home. 6 The Muskrat was so hungry that he fell asleep. 7 And the Muskrat started to roast the gut. 8 The Mink was awakened by the smell and he said to his roommate, "What is that you are roasting?" 9 The Muskrat answered that the bear tastes good. 10 And so they went to look for their bear. 11 When they got near the Mink said,
 "What is that that is shining?" 12 And so when he grabbed it he got trapped. 13 And that also happened to the Muskrat.

1 Rice Harvesting

2 Now it is going to be rice harvesting. 3 A little canoe is used,. 4 not that kind which is used when fishing with nets. 5 This canoe is smaller and has lower sides. 6 And a big long stick for "poling" or moving the boat along and two ricing sticks (are used). 7 A group leaves and goes over to the lake where the rice is. 8 Now arriving over there the canoe is taken into the water, gotten into, and then it is "poled" on out. 9 Arriving at the rice (they) start knocking it into (the canoes). 10 This continues. 11 Gradually the canoes are filled. Now (they) go home and on getting to shore pull the canoes out of the water. 12 Now the rice is put into sacks and then (they) go home. 13 First the rice is dried and then it is parched. 14 A fire is built there and a wash tub is used to heat and brown it. 15 The rice is continually being stirred. 16 It gradually becomes all brown. 17 When finished parching (they) now thresh (the rice) by rubbing it at intervals with their feet. 18 That man doing it is wearing buckskin shoes. 19 Over there where there is a little pit in the ground is where he is doing it. 20 When all finished this (they) now winnow (the rice). 21 A winnowing tray is used. 22 And so it (the harvesting) is finished.

One time, so the story goes, as Enabusho was walking near the shore he saw some ducks on the water. He wanted them very much, so the story goes. He thought, "How can I kill them?" He gathered some hay and lifted it up on his back and he went back to where they were on the water with his pack. He spoke to them, "My brothers, I'm carrying songs in my pack. Come! I'm going to have a dance for you." And sure enough they believed him. Now he started the dance and he sang, "Don't look around. If you do you will have red eyes." And so they danced with their eyes closed. As they danced by Enabushu, he cut their heads off. The hell diver thought he heard something. He opened his eyes a little bit. He saw Enabushu cutting the heads off of the ducks. He hollered, "Enabushu is getting all of us." And then according to the story, they ran away. The hell diver barely escaped. Enabushu stepped on his back. That is why the hell diver still has a flat back to this day.

SYMBOLS: p t k c s š ? m n w y i e a o u i: e: a: o: u: ~ . c is an alveo-palatal affricate, : is vowel length, ~ is nasalization of the word final vowel. Other symbols have, in general, the same values as those used in Pike's Phonemics with the following exceptions:

- (1) p t k c s š are voiceless and strongly articulated when occurring in geminate cluster; alone they are often somewhat voiced between vowels and especially after a nasal.
- (2) i and u and their long counterparts are slightly lowered; a and its long counterpart is from slightly to considerably raised and sometimes backed.

Hyphens in the text mark word medial boundaries of morphemes or suspected morphemes. Hyphens and word spaces in the literal translation correspond in general to those in the text. Groups of two or more English words referring to one morpheme or unanalyzed sequence are enclosed in parentheses. ? in the literal translation refers to a morpheme whose meaning or function has not been identified, and (?) to a preceding suggested but unchecked morpheme meaning.

1 One time, so the story goes, Hiawatha was walking along near the shore. He saw some ducks, it is said, on the water. My, how he must have wanted them! As he looked at them, he wished for them. "I wonder how I could kill them," he thinks, so the story goes. He went and gathered together some hay. He lifted it up on his back and there by the water again went by with his pack.

9 He spoke to them. "My younger brothers! I am carrying songs on my back. Come! I am going to have a dance for you." And so, sure enough, they believed him. 15 First he started them dancing, and then he sang like this, "Don't keep looking all around. You have red eyes." And so, sure enough, they danced with closed eyes. And, so the story goes, as they went dancing by the place where was sitting, he chopped their heads off.

22 The helldiver heard something, they say, and he peeked a little bit. He saw Hiawatha, they say, cutting the ducks' heads off. He hollered like this, they say, "Hey, watch out! It's Hiawatha. He is killing us all!"

28 And so it was, they say, that all of them ran away. The helldiver just barely got away, they say. Hiawatha, so the story goes, stepped on his back and flattened it a little. And so it is today, they say, that the helldiver has a flat back.

1 The Animal and the Indian

2 So the story goes the animal and the Indian lived together. 3 And sometime ago they went hunting. 4 They wandered very far. 5 They were very tired. 6 When they had killed game they went home. 7 As the Indian was walking, his hands started to get cold. 8 And having cold hands, he blew on them. 9 Then the animal asked him, 10 "Why do you do that?" 11 The Indian said, "I'm warming my hands with my breath."
12 Now when they got home, 13 they made soup so that they could eat.
14 Since the soup was so hot, the Indian blew on it. 15 Then the animal asked him, "Why do you do that?" 16 He said, "I'm cooling it." 17 And now the animal started to get scared. 18 He thought, who is this? 19 What kind of god is he whose breath is so hot and yet so cold. 20 Thus he ran away. 21 The animal will never live with the Indian anymore. 22 And today he fears the Indian.

Explanatory Note

This data transcribed directly from the informant's interrupted discourse lacks the continuity of a taped text.

The phonemes employed correspond to those used by Bloomfield in his Eastern Ojibwa with these exceptions: no distinction is made between fortis and lenis consonants, and the vowels u and e, which Bloomfield terms "reduced vowels," are here given full phoneme status with vowel qualities similar to the vowels in boot and ate, respectively.

Explanatory Note

This story is told in three versions, in which Version a) is the version as it was told the first time Version b) is the repetition of the story Version c) is the version as told by the animal, one of the participants in the story.

Phonemics: Due to reading Bloomfield's Ojibwa, I have no voiced stops, but the voiceless ones have not been identified as to whether they are fortis or lenis (due to much uncertainty)

Version a)

It was that the animal and the Indian were living together. And so it was that they went hunting. They wandered far. Getting cold hands, that Indian blew on his hands. The animal asked him, "What (why) are you doing? (why are you doing that?)" The Indian said, "Because my hands are cold, I am warming them with my breath." So it was now that they went home. When they arrived there at their home, they made soup that they could eat. The soup being so hot, the Indian blew on it. The animal asked him, "Why do you do that?" He said, "I am cooling it." And so it was that the animal started to get scared. He thought, "Who is this kind of God, whose breath is hot and whose breath is cold. And so he then ran away. Not ever will it be, that the animal and the Indian will ever live together. So that's why the animal runs away today when it sees the Indian.

Version b)

It was that the animal and the Indian dwelt together. And so it was that they went hunting. They wandered very far. And so that Indian got cold hands. And he blew on his hands. The animal asked him, "Why do you do that?" The Indian answered, "My hands being cold, I am warming them with my breath." So it was that now they went home. They were very hungry. And so they made soup so that they could eat. The soup being so hot, the Indian blew on it. The animal asked him, "Why do you do that?" The Indian answered it, "I am cooling the soup with my breath." And so it was that the animal started to be afraid.

So it was he ran away, he thought, "What is this anyway, he that has hot breath and cold breath. And so it was that he was much afraid. And so that's why he runs away today when he sees the Indian.

Version c)

At one time the Indian and I had a home together. And so it was now that we went hunting. We wandered far. Seeing the Indian blowing on his hands, I asked him, "Why do you do that?" "Oh, my hands are cold," he said, "I am warming them with my breath." And so it was that now we went home. When we arrived at our home, we made soup so that we could eat. As we were eating now the soup was very hot. And I saw him blowing on that soup. "Why do you do that?" I asked him. "Oh, the soup is so hot, I am cooling it with my breath," he said to me. And so it was that now I got scared of him, I thought, "Who is this, this kind of person?" And so I decided I ran away. And so that's why I am afraid today whenever I see the Indian.

On Saturday I went to Cass Lake. I got on the bus here in Grand Forks and got off in Bemidji. I tried to find my mother and younger sister there, but couldn't find them anywhere. So I went in a store to get me a little something to eat, and went over near the lake and sat on a bench to eat it. I watched some white people taking rides on two airplanes. There were motor boats going back and forth on the lake.

Then I went into the store again and met a woman from Redby, We talked for awhile. Little while later I met her again and she said she had seen my mother and my sister.. I looked for them again, but still didn't find them so, as it was six o'clock, I took a bus to Cass Lake.

I went to the Tonsis, but they were busy making hay, so I waited for them to come home. Their children, who were home, said that my mother and sister had stopped in looking for me earlier. The Tonsis asked me to eat there before I went over to the "Sunrise Indian Bible School."

It was a joy to see all the young people who had come that Sunday afternoon to listen. I listened too.

Then after eating there, I went to Bemidji and took a bus from there back to Grand Forks.
