

2021

Fate

Madelynne Deshler

Follow this and additional works at: <https://commons.und.edu/floodwall-magazine>

Part of the Fiction Commons, Nonfiction Commons, Photography Commons, and the Poetry Commons

Recommended Citation

Deshler, Madelynne (2021) "Fate," Floodwall Magazine: Vol. 2 : Iss. 1 , Article 26.

Available at: <https://commons.und.edu/floodwall-magazine/vol2/iss1/26>

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by UND Scholarly Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Floodwall Magazine by an authorized editor of UND Scholarly Commons. For more information, please contact und.common@library.und.edu.

Fate

Does Death await me
or, simply,
am I awaiting Death?
Unceasing darkness
of a life cut at youth
seems to haunt me.
Is it fate though,
or simply my desire?
Weights of slumber
pull me into constant comas
through the shine of both sun and stars.
But is this a heaviness of physicality
or, rather, the deterioration of my mind?
My mind must be going insane because no physical sickness holds me down.
So, through the dusk of both sun and stars,
I am pulled into constant comas
by weights of slumber,
simply by my desire,
not by fate.
Yes, I am haunted
to cut my life at youth
from unceasing darkness
for I am awaiting Death,
but, surely,
Death doesn't await me.

About Madelynne Deshler

I am from Woodbury, MN, so my life growing up strongly revolved around adventures in the Twin Cities. During those years I fell in love with traveling, photography, history, and the art of writing. In the fall of 2017 I began to attend UND. During this time I received the Robert J. Hagen Memorial Scholarship for journalism, and by spring of 2020 I will receive a B.A. in Communication with a certificate in Writing and Editing. From there, the plan is to simply explore the world and write about those experiences.