

2021

Dear Jhon

Joanna Suzanne

Follow this and additional works at: <https://commons.und.edu/floodwall-magazine>

Part of the Fiction Commons, Nonfiction Commons, Photography Commons, and the Poetry Commons

Recommended Citation

Suzanne, Joanna (2021) "Dear Jhon," Floodwall Magazine: Vol. 1 : Iss. 2 , Article 8.

Available at: <https://commons.und.edu/floodwall-magazine/vol1/iss2/8>

This Poetry is brought to you for free and open access by UND Scholarly Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Floodwall Magazine by an authorized editor of UND Scholarly Commons. For more information, please contact und.common@library.und.edu.

Dear John

in dreams, the passing of trains. &i realize i forgot what it was to fuck with open windows. frustration melts like rocks in the glass (like
irides in sun-
light, like hope in wet basements), leaves a bitter fragility in the dregs.
the hours drip. suddenly, it's two in the morning and silent, you seeing my face with your fingers, i flushing your secrets with my skin. the nextday's dawn comes drawn with shards in both eyes:
always end with a jab to the left.

About Joanna Suzanne

Joanna Suzanne Lee has never been formally trained in any kind of writing, thank you very much. She can, however, dissect the brainstem of a neonatal mouse or diagnose your lower back pain. Her first full-length book of poetry, the somersaults I did as I fell, was released in January of 2009. Her work has recently appeared in Right Hand Pointing, Contemporary American Voices and scissors and spackle, among others.