The College of Education

The College of Education was established at the founding of the University in 1883. On July 1, 1972, it will cease to exist as a degree granting entity in teacher education. During these 89 years the College has granted 6,297 degrees to prospective teachers. Of this number 4,049 have been granted since 1954. This is 64.3 percent of that total.

For the eighteen-year period from 1954 to 1972, the total of all degrees granted by the University was 15,888. The total granted by the College of Education was 4,049. For this same eighteen-year period this was 25.5 percent of the total.

During these eighteen years the faculty of the College have developed more than eighty innovations in teacher education, such as: audio-visual education, state-wide testing programs, annual art exhibitions, an elementary education major, special education, accreditation through the doctoral level, establishment of vocational home economics, counseling and guidance graduate programs through the doctorate, organization of the Upper Midwest Small Schools Project, the Educational Research Bureau, the ERIC collection of microfiche materials, library science major, internships in educational administration, micro-teaching with video tape recording, and the Teacher Corps program for preparing Indian teachers.

The enrollments in teacher education have increased from 9 percent of the University's total enrollment to 15 percent during this period.

Approximately one-third of all bachelor's degrees each year have been granted to teacher education graduates, and 64 percent of all graduate degrees have been granted to school personnel.

On July 1, 1972, the teacher education effort of the University will be assumed by the Center for Teaching and Learning.
