

2021

The Bump

Maiken Møller-Andersen

Follow this and additional works at: <https://commons.und.edu/floodwall-magazine>

Part of the Fiction Commons, Nonfiction Commons, Photography Commons, and the Poetry Commons

Recommended Citation

Møller-Andersen, Maiken (2021) "The Bump," Floodwall Magazine: Vol. 2: Iss. 5, Article 34.
Available at: <https://commons.und.edu/floodwall-magazine/vol2/iss5/34>

This Fiction is brought to you for free and open access by UND Scholarly Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Floodwall Magazine by an authorized editor of UND Scholarly Commons. For more information, please contact und.common@library.und.edu.

The Bump

Maiken Møller-Andersen

My grandmother blamed it on me being on the phone too much, my spine shaping badly because I had my head down. I do not think it is only the phone's fault, I did not have it glued to my hand like others.

Still, I pawned my phone, but the lump did not disappear. I began removing items that made me bend my head down in hopes of fixing my fucked-up bump. This included not using the lower shelves and some rather uncomfortable sleeping without a pillow to keep myself completely straight.

I had just booked my first chiropractic appointment to get it looked at. That night, though, I found myself staring at it in the mirror. Suspecting it had grown even larger. Taking a deep breath, I watched as the pulsating lump crept down my neck and spine, two eyes peering out and looking back at me.

Maiken Møller-Andersen is a graduate student at UND studying English. Born and raised in Norway, they loved the ocean as a child, growing more and more curious about what they could never see from the surface. Maiken took a huge interest in folklore and storytelling at a young age, and their favorite fairytale is King Valemon. They also really like scary stories, which is one of the inspirations for their flash fiction.