UND University Senate Budget Committee

Meeting of 20 February 2018 – DRAFT

Minutes

Present: John Shabb, Duane Helleloid, Brad Myers, Richard Wise, Paul Todhunter, Sarah Abentroth, Terra Jorgenson, Jeff VanLooy, Bill Caraher, Jeff Holm, Tom DiLorenzo, Ryan Zerr

Absent: Chris Petschen, Hannah Carlson, Kathy Smart, Ken Flanagan, Cindy Fetsch

Guests: None

Meeting called to order at 4:30 pm. John Shabb presided.

No objections were made to the minutes from the January 23, 2018, meeting -- as distributed. As such, the minutes were approved.

An update was given by the Provost, including mention of the start of budget meetings with the deans (starting next week). Also, planning for budget requests to the legislature has begun, hitting full stride in April. Mention was also made of the campus facilities master planning presentation recently given at a campus forum. The idea of asking for a presentation of the master plan to the SBC in the near future was discussed.

John Shabb noted that the service agreements for the support units have recently been made public on the Resource Planning & Allocation website. There was general agreement that this should be a topic of discussion at an upcoming meeting.

Discussion of the motion tabled at the previous meeting resumed. The motion is: To forward the following to the Senate Executive Committee:

At the request of the Senate Executive Committee, the Senate Budget Committee reviewed data regarding travel policies and expenditures, and discussed various recommendations regarding university travel funding and policies. The committee believes that expenditure decisions related to faculty development and productivity are best made at the department and college level, as different departments and faculty may have very different needs relating to equipment, software, research assistant support, physical space, travel, and other resource requirements. Thus, the committee does not believe it appropriate to re-establish university-level travel funding sources such as those allocated through SSAC or FIDC, as those funds are best left under the control of colleges and departments, and considered just a small part of the overall resources provided to faculty and staff.

That said, colleges and departments must have travel support policies that are consistent with expectations for tenure, promotion, merit, and continued employment. If expectations for tenure, promotion, merit, and continued employment explicitly or implicitly require that faculty travel to present their work, gather data, or work with colleagues, travel policies must provide financial support for these activities. Just as faculty and staff are not expected to use their personal funds to secure physical space or capital equipment that are necessary for their research and teaching, they should not be expected to use personal funds for travel that is part of job expectations. All travel support policies should support and advance the strategic plan and be shared with the Senate Budget Committee initially and when any changes are made.

In the context of this discussion, mention was made of recently-available information provided to the committee: information on presentations given by faculty pulled from Digital Measures (for calendar year 2017) and information on recent expenditures for travel, broken down by funding source, type of travel (foreign/domestics, in-state/out-of-state, etc.), and by college. A prolonged discussion about the data, what it might mean, the large number of difficulties in interpreting it, and how to interpret it.

An amendment to the motion was accepted, leading to the following:

At the request of the Senate Executive Committee, the Senate Budget Committee reviewed data regarding travel policies and expenditures, and discussed various recommendations regarding university travel funding and policies. The committee believes that expenditure decisions related to faculty development and productivity are best made at the department and college level, as different departments and faculty may have very different needs relating to equipment, software, research assistant support, physical space, travel, and other resource requirements. Thus, the committee does not believe it appropriate to re-establish university-level travel funding sources such as those allocated through SSAC or FIDC, as those funds are best left under the control of colleges and departments, and considered just a small part of the overall resources provided to faculty and staff.

If expectations for tenure, promotion, merit, and continued employment explicitly or implicitly require that faculty travel to present their work, gather data, or work with colleagues, travel policies must provide financial support for these activities. These policies should be in place by the start of the 2020 fiscal year.

The amended motion was voted upon and carried with one dissenting vote.

Meeting adjourned at 6:25 pm.

Committee Recommendations

Primary Recommendation:

1. Develop New and Enhance Current Online and Distance Educational Opportunities at the University of North Dakota

- UND's strategic plan includes several goals relevant to online and distance education. In particular, Goals 1, 2, 3, and 6 were frequently discussed in committee meetings. Most relevant to the charge of this committee is Goal 3—to deliver more educational opportunities online and on-campus. The primary recommendation from the committee is that as UND moves forward on the strategic plan, the administration should provide the committee with consistent updates about strategic plan goals related to online and distance education. Additionally, the administration should take into consideration feedback from students and faculty, and efforts should be made to include faculty in decision-making – both things the committee can facilitate.

Supporting Recommendations:

1. Goal 3 communication

- A considerable amount of time was devoted to Goal 3 of the strategic plan. We would like to thank Jeff Holm, Lynette Krenelka, and Margot McGimpsey for frequent and timely Goal 3 updates. In particular, the committee discussed OPM partnerships, changes to session lengths for online courses, the expansion of non-credit course offerings, and professional development for online instruction.
- The committee expressed concerns about the partnership with Pearson or any OPM partnership. To elaborate, concerns were expressed about a lack of faculty governance in the decision-making process, potential threats to academic freedom, the possibility of students perceiving online vs. on-campus programs as “separate” if a third-party entity is involved in online education, a reduction in effectiveness of programs currently performing well, predatory marketing to students who may not be ready or committed to online education, the potential for misinformation in recruitment efforts, and the degree to which faculty will retain responsibility for content and degree requirements. These concerns were expressed to the Goal 3 team members.
- The committee recommends that as the university moves forward with the Pearson partnership, the administration provides SODEC with updates at monthly meetings about this partnership and that the university continues to solicit feedback from faculty to ensure that faculty are included in the decision-making process. In particular, the committee encourages the Goal 3 team and other decision-makers to consider how online program management may affect budget allocations, other online programs, retention, the reputation of programs, and the reputation of the university as a whole.
- The committee further recommends that the Goal 3 team continue to disseminate information to the committee and to faculty members directly. The newsletter crafted by the Goal 3 team last fall was particularly helpful, and we would like to encourage similar frequent, timely, and transparent communication to the members of the university.

2. Professional development

- Our committee recommends continued investment in training and professional development related to online education. In particular, we encourage TTaDA to continue to expand professional development options that are tailored to online education. We also encourage colleges and departments to incentivize these training opportunities to increase faculty participation.

3. Infrastructure

- As the university continues to expand online and distance education offerings, we strongly recommend a detailed assessment of infrastructure needs, including but not limited to course management systems (e.g., Blackboard), tech support, and instructional support.

Summary of Committee Activities for AY 2017/2018

The Senate Online and Distance Education Committee (SODEC) met six times during AY 2016/2017. Dr. Heather Terrell served as Chair of the committee this year, Dr. Jeff Holm served as Past Chair, and during this year Professor Eric E. Johnson was elected and served as Vice Chair. This year our committee focused on the following topics:

1. We discussed the need for investing in infrastructure for effective online and distance education. In particular, the committee noted that the transition to a statewide Blackboard system was rough for faculty and students alike. The committee also discussed a need for technology upgrades as UND expands online education and offerings.
2. We added a standing agenda item for strategic plan updates relevant to the charge of the committee. The goals that were identified as most relevant were Goals 1, 2, 3, and 6. With regard to Goal 1, the committee noted every effort should be made to ensure that distance students have access to High Impact Practices. With regard to Goal 2, the committee considered how to best examine retention data for online students in order to track retention moving forward. The committee noted that students who are solely online/distance students represent a different student population than more traditional, on-campus students. With regard to Goal 6, the committee is pleased with the addition of Air University articulation agreements. A considerable amount of time was devoted to discussing issues related to Goal 3, and these issues are discussed in the recommendations section of this report.

Plans for AY 2018/2019

In addition to continuing to focus and address the three areas above, the committee has identified the following goals for the coming year:

1. Continue to consider the role of this committee in relation to strategic plan goals. In particular, the committee requests monthly updates from a Goal 3 representative, as well as consistent updates about the development of online program management partnerships.
2. Develop strategies for tracking and retention of online students—better define what “successful” retention means for distance students.
3. Assess infrastructure needs related to online education.

Meetings: 3 Sep. 2016, 21 Nov. 2016, 28 April 2017, and 22 May 2017

Major accomplishments:

This year (2016-2017) we have had 4 meetings and discussed various issues, including Employee Assignment, Royalty Distribution discussion, and NDUS Royalty Matter. Please read the following summary for detail.

1. Employee Assignment

Issue: A significant percentage of new employees for this fiscal year have not (or refused to) signed the Employee Assignment of Inventions form. Approximately 70 out of 220. The issue for UND is that these employees were still hired and present a potential assignment of invention issue for the institution. Motion (Murphy, seconded by Moore), “IP Subcommittee recommends that all new employees must sign the Assignment of Inventions form as a condition of employment. This form is not optional.” Motion passed unanimously.

2. Royalty Distribution discussion.

Issue: The committee had a discussion with the EERC seeking alignment of their income distribution with the University. Significant discussion (particularly, whether EERC should keep 60% or less) ensued. EERC distributes 40% (consistent with State Board IP policy). They retain 60% to fund the patent activities within the EERC Foundation.

3. NDUS Royalty Matter

Substantial discussion ensued concerning a proposal, brought forward by NDSU, to the NDUS board to impose a sliding scale for IP royalties thereby allowing a University to retain a higher percentage of royalty income, should it decide to do so. The NDUS board asked for faculty input. The faculty members of the UND Senate IP committee represent all colleges and it was agreed that this faculty body (UND Senate IP committee faculty members) would provide faculty input on behalf of UND, which will be further discussed in future meetings.

Respectfully submitted,

Min Wu
