Big Attendance Expected for June Reunion

The Old Timers' Reunion of 1967 will be a highlight of the UND campus during commencement week. A large number of alumni are expected for the events.

The reunion, which will be held June 2 and 3, will honor the 45 and 50 year classes. Old timers from the years 1916 to 1919 and 1922 have received special invitations for the reunion.

Reservations have already been received from alumni throughout the United States.

A special alumni luncheon is scheduled in the University Center on June 2 for the old timers, faculty, students, and the Alumni Board of Directors. All UND Alumni are invited to the event.

Arrangements for the Old Timers' Reunion are being made by Mrs. Milton Kelly, chairman of the committee that is planning the events. Registration will begin at 10 a.m. June 2 in Twamley Hall followed by a coffee hour. The Alumni luncheon will be at 12:15 p.m.

The Alumni Board of Directors will meet in Twamley Hall between 10 and 12 a.m. Friday morning. During the afternoon there will be tours of the campus beginning at 2 p.m.

The Old Timers' Banquet will be held Friday evening at 6 p.m. in the University Center.

On Saturday, June 3, an Old Timers' Brunch will conclude the reunion. The brunch will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Lloyd Stone.

Old Timers who have already made reservations include: Dr. John Lundy, '17, Seattle, Wash.; William Boyce, '17, Manhasset, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Hulteng, '18 (Margaret Thorgrimson, '19), Mentor, Minn.; Dr. Lindon Seed, '18, Oak Park, Ill.; Dr. Burton Ford, '17, Marshall, Minn.; and V. H. Sprague, '16, Fergus Falls, Minn.

GREAT, GREAT, GREAT!

Sioux Win Championship Honors; Sweep 3 Conference Sport Titles

LEN MARTI
... athletic director

MARV HELLING
... wins football title

BILL FITCH
... wins basketball title

BILL SELMAN
... wins hockey title

It's the Mona Lisa, the no-hit game, the 300 bowling game, the Taj Mahal, and the hole-in-one.

It's the University of North Dakota athletic record in major sports for 1966-67.

It all began last fall. Under Coach Marv Helling, the UND football team roared back after a loss to the Bison and went on to gain conference honors, then topped the season with a victory over Parsons College in the NCAA Pecan Bowl.

Taking a cue from the grid-ders, the UND hockey team buzzed through the conference to win the championship. And the triple crown of major sports became assured when the Sioux basketball team won their third straight conference title.

This was a "golden year," and will long be remembered. The hockey team, heavily stocked with young sophomores, developed quickly under new coach Bill Selman.

Coach Bill Fitch relied on three seniors to guide his basketball team, and the unit soon became a high-scoring machine that mowed down the opponents.

All three teams are stocked with little All-Americans. Many alumni will be seeing UND stars performing for professional teams in the future.

There's a glow of victory on the campus this spring. And there's a hint of sadness as many of these great athletes complete their eligibility.

But there are young athletes in the wings, ready to take their place as the stars of tomorrow. It's a great year: great teams, great coaches, great fan support.

How do you follow an act like that?

Slate Lignite Symposium on Campus

Recent developments in utilization and technology of solid fuels, with emphasis on low-rank coals will be featured at the fourth biennial Lignite Symposium April 27-28 at UND.

Sponsored by the U. S. Bureau of Mines and UND, the program will include papers on electrical power generation, combustion, gasification, air pollution, pulverization, chemical and specialty uses, and leasing of coal lands and mining.

Sessions will be held at the University Center, with attendance expected from throughout the United States and Canada. Last year the symposium drew persons from 30 states and five provinces.

University of North Dakota ALUMNI REVIEW

The University of North Dakota Alumni Review is published monthly, except July and August, by the University of North Dakota, Grand Forks, N. BULLETINS AVAILABLE

Bulletins listing courses and other information about the 1967 Summer Session at UND are now available. Dates for the eight-week sessions are June 19 to August 12. Last year, 2,305 students were enrolled for the summer classes. Bulletins may be obtained by mail or in person from the UND Summer Session office, Twamley Hall.

SETS NEW RECORD

A second semester record number of 6,141 students have enrolled at UND, breaking the previous high of 5,815 set a year ago. The total includes 4,092 men and 2,049 women.

SPONSOR SEMINAR

UND will sponsor a graduate seminar from July 17 to Aug. 10 involving the Pan American games at Winnipeg entitled Scientific and Cultural Implications of International Sport. It is a three-credit seminar. More information can be obtained by writing Dr. Robert D. Clayton, chairman of UND men's physical education division.

GRANTED STATUS

A new academic department of speech pathology and audiology has been established at UND. The program in speech and hearing, which has been in operation for 19 years, was granted departmental status by the State Board of Higher Education.

REPORT from the CAMPUS

By J. LLOYD STONE

A Visitor in the Alumni Office

Joe doesn't get back to the UND campus very often. He wasn't much of a football fan, and he met his wife after he had finished his studies at the University.

Joe is a member of the Alumni Association. He has been since commencement. He gives $10 a year to the Development Fund, always has.

Joe stopped in our office recently. He feels fine, although he's added a bit to his middle, lost a bit of his hair. And his family is fine, too. Almost as an afterthought, he remarks that Joe, Jr. will be graduating from high school next June. How about that!

Joe, Jr. is a great boy. Nothing's too good. The wife's always said that. The boy has applied at a couple of schools in the East, and one on the West Coast as Joe has some business friends out that way. But, if all things fail, Joe, Jr. can always go to dear old UND!

There's enough truth there to pinch. Half of all high school graduates now go to college, and the percentage is increasing. Private schools limit the number they take, but state-supported institutions have the obligation to make higher education available to all who can profit by it.

About one-third of America's collegians will be attending universities by 1985. At least 65% will be in public institutions. Many junior colleges, but not many new universities, are being founded. Many of the older private ones fear size, shy away from a "monster" label.

Joe got in to UND without a high school mathematics requirement, passed a no-credit course without tutoring. His parents, though, didn't inspire him much. But, take Joe, Jr., what a transcript! Already has some calculus. Still, it's tough with top schools.

Well, it's not just a formality to enroll at UND. High school seniors who are in the upper half of their class or score over a certain level on a nationally used college entrance test are automatically accepted. But those who fail to meet one or the other of these requirements must take preliminary testing before getting the "green light."

UND freshmen are getting brighter all the time. Joe muses a moment about placing 86th in a class of 122; then wonders aloud if the trouble Joe, Jr. had with Victorian literature will dissuade an Ivy League committee. There's always UND, he thinks—but he heard about one state school that turned away several hundred qualified in-state applicants.

Joe went to college four years. Joe, Jr. may go to college longer. Many universities today are seven and eight-year institutions. There's simply more to learn now. Professional life is more competitive. Business is more complex. And everything else!

Classes begin early in the morning. There are some at night. There are some on Saturdays. The truth is there's little time any more, if there ever was, for loafing. Some students go to college all year long, study everything from conversational Tibetan to aerospace engineering. Some can graduate in two years and eight months. With honors programs, a truly excellent student can go faster, absorb more, tackle tougher material now without academic penalty.

Special recognition ceremonies for academic achievement, honors and awards are almost as common as Homecoming parties. All foolishness has not vanished from UND, as it has yet to vanish from society. Some is even preserved in the hallowed name of tradition.

In fact, Joe admits he's seen more pictures of students in telephone booths than in heat-transfer labs. More columns devoted to queen contest winners than Rhodes scholars.

Taxpayers sometimes grumble about that sort of thing. After all, he philosophizes, it is their money! Yet the state actually puts up, often, little more than one-third of the operating expenses.

Joe is happy he can send his boy to college with his own money, and more than one suit. He may even take his convertible. This causes Joe, feigning anguish, to reminisce about working for meals in the Commons, living in Camp Depression, and shipping the laundry home by bus to save date money. (And giving up dates to cover card game losses!)

Money is no object now. Nothing but the best for his kids. They're going to have all the things Joe never had. But, for those who are financially flat, though, UND is mighty fine. Mindful of the monetary, Joe says that he's been in the Alumni office an hour, and no one has asked him to fill out a pledge card.

Joe looks over a map of the campus, just in from the publications office. It has to be re-published often, as the scene is constantly altering. The campus map might just as well be a blue-print for a shopping center to Joe. He can't find many old landmarks, and he doesn't know the new ones. He doesn't get back very often.

Joe hasn't looked around the campus much. The English coulee is about the only familiar scene he can find, and even that has changed with a new bridge.

Joe can see a great change on the campus face, just by looking from the Alumni office window. And, the constantly soaring enrollment will require many more buildings.

How big is Joe's town now? It's grown. Probably 30 per cent bigger than when he first moved there. He's proud of this growth. Served on the city council one term.

How big is the University? It's grown. It has triple the enrollment it had when Joe was on the campus. In fact, it is a community about the same size as Joe's town. The dormitories, the University Center—they compare well with any hotel or restaurant in Joe's town.

The University is individually big, but collectively small. There are 97 state universities and land-grant institutions. They represent less than five per cent of some 2200 colleges in the United States, and enroll about 30 per cent of degree-credit students.

Somehow, Joe had never thought about UND in an exclusive way. He squinted some in learning that state and land-grant institutions are the chief suppliers of talent to the nation. They award more than half of all doctoral degrees—8,536 out of 14,494 in a recent year.

State universities have graduated more than half of all living American Nobel Prize winners, nearly half of the members of the National Academy of Sciences, half of the nation's governors, senators and congressmen, half of the nation's school teachers, more than one-third of the nation's leading corporation executives.

It's the schools like UND that supply the teacher, the doctor, the lawyer, the engineer, and the scientist, whatever may be his field. Physicists, mathematicians, chemists—even Joe, now that he has thought about it, can name others. Just about all the professional training indispensable to society is provided at Joe's Alma Mater. Somehow, he never really noticed it before.

UND is closer today to the heart of the state, national and global concerns than it has ever been. It is a beautiful place. It is an exciting place. It is a vital place of teaching and learning, of searching and finding, of thinking and creating, of high challenge to youth, of profound stimulations and satisfactions for the scholar, the artist, the curious mind, the imaginative spirit.

The Alumni Review has been saying this sort of thing for years. Joe gets it, and enjoys it. He turns to the class notes, keeps up to date on the athletic teams.

Joe's old school is no longer a cluster of buildings, mothered snugly around "Old Main." UND today is the bulwark of democracy; the vehicle for economic growth and development. Could its greatness be more inevitable? Ahead is a rapidly growing population, and the greatest market in the history of free enterprise—a trillion gross national product.

Back in 1880, UND was a dream that only a free, imaginative society dared to possess. Since, it has been a miracle in higher education. Today, it is yet without parallel anywhere... founded by the people, unhampered by past tradition, unimpeded by set demands.

State institutions are as independent and as restless as at birth. Students from abroad come in increasing numbers, no longer for science and technology alone. Joe recalls that they used say "the state was the campus." Today, the world is the campus.

There's a sign in the Alumni office that catches Joe's eye. It reads: "The children of the children for whom we dreamed brave dreams and in whom we invested our faith and treasure are now your sons and daughters. You are at once the legatees of the past, guardians of the present, and trustees of the future."

The message is indestructible. Yes, the University has changed. People like Old Joe need to change, too. They need to come back more often to the campus, take a closer look; visit the communications center, the University Center. Tarry in the Fritz library; discuss as seriously the problems of automation and space with researchers as they do the nostalgia of Old Main.

Old Joes need to quit apologizing. And start bragging. They need to stand up and be heard. Everybody knows about the bonus quarterback who signed with the pros. They need to talk about medical research, nutrition studies, and radio-telescopes that record the collision of galaxies 200,000,000 light-years away!

Once, like Joe, they sense and believe that UND is great—and they helped make it so—it's easy.

Joe leaves our office. He walks slowly toward the parking lot. He looks back up at Twamley Hall. He pauses to wave.

We know that Joe will take a new look at his campus as he drives away. He'll come back more often now. He may even give to a scholarship fund someday. Will Joe, Jr. go to UND?

Joe hopes so. Where could he do better?

(Note: Joe, of course, is an imaginary visitor. Yet, he may typify many of the average alumni. Whether your name is Joe or Bill or Tom or Dick, we hope that you'll be a visitor on the campus soon. You'll gain a new concept of higher education and feel a greater pride in your Alma Mater as it meets the challenges of today and girds for the horizons ahead.)

APPROPRIATION

The North Dakota State Legislature adjourned after its 60-day session, and made a provision of $17,305,476 for the UND general operating fund for the biennium. There were three UND buildings listed on the State Board of Higher Education priority schedule: general classroom building, auditorium, and engineering.

ACCREDIT MEXICO STUDY

UND has approved for accreditation the summer school program at the Instituto Tecnológico de Monterrey, Mexico. UND students will be given full credit for courses taken in the summer at the Mexican University. The program starts July 10, ends Aug. 18, and courses include beginning Spanish for high school students through graduate work. Further information may be obtained from Dr. Channing Patterson, UND professor of Spanish, Merrifield Hall.

ROWAN TO SPEAK

Carl T. Rowan, nationally syndicated newspaper columnist and former director of the U. S. Information Agency, will be the featured speaker at the 31st annual Honors Day convocation at UND on April 19.

Ex-Nodak Featured In Finance Magazine

F. P. "Pete" Barnes, a native of Grand Forks who attended UND in 1924, is featured in a recent issue of THE PLAINSMAN, a bi-monthly publication with a circulation in the mid-west area.

The article is titled "Warming Up the Cold Investor," and traces the career of Barnes in the investment field, beginning with his arrival in Kansas City in a boxcar of potatoes. Barnes was given the job of keeping a coal fire going in the boxcar so that the "darn potatoes wouldn't freeze."

Today he is managing partner of H. O. Peet and Company, the largest securities firm in Kansas City. For 40 years as a member of the New York Stock Exchange, his philosophy of "creating warmth so that the smaller potential investor won't freeze up" has been his trademark. The story points out that Barnes is "just a country boy," and about the down-to-earth approach in a complex field.

After attending UND, Barnes was graduated from Dartmouth. He joined the H. O. Peet firm in 1943 and became senior partner in 1958, on the retirement of Mr. Peet. Under the guidance of Barnes, the Peet firm has added three branches in Kansas City.

while he is overseas . . . Capt. Peter F. Peterson, '61, has been selected as Pilot of the Quarter at Mather AFB, Calif.

TO INTERPRET INDUSTRY

An eight-week summer institute entitled "Interpreting Industry in the General Shop" will be conducted by the UND Industrial Arts Department on the campus starting June 19. The program will emphasize instructional materials, techniques and methods which can be utilized in secondary school industrial arts programs to interpret modern industrial organization, processes, materials and products. The Institute will be open to 25 industrial arts instructors from throughout the nation and is supported by funds from the National Defense Education Act.

AUTHORIZE NEW CPA'S

Ten persons have been authorized to practice as certified public accountants in North Dakota by the State Board of Accountancy. The new CPA's qualified by passing examinations at UND.

SORRY, SENATOR

The March ALUMNI REVIEW pictured several legislators who had attended UND. One of those pictured was Senator Edwin C. Becker Jr. of Willow City. Mr. Becker did not attend UND, but was graduated from St. John's University in Minnesota. His father, Ed Becker Sr., now deceased, did attend UND in 1923-24.

Howell Heads Puget Sound Alumni Club

Keith C. Howell was named president of the Puget Sound chapter of the UND Alumni at their 1967 reunion this spring at Seattle. Harold D. Drevecky was elected vice-president, with Lyle E. Wood as secretary-treasurer.

Those attending included:

Miss Sandra Askelson, '65; Mr. and Mrs. Harold D. Drevecky, '60; Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Elfelson (Charlotte Paulsen, '43); Dr. and Mrs. Philip E. Fluvog, '53; Miss Lois Garst, '65; Thomas Havig, '61; Mr. and Mrs. Neil Johnson, '50; Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Kruger, '51 (Marjorie McLean, '52); Dr. John Lundy, '17; Mrs. Katherine Allen, '16; Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Lee, '34 (Jean Potterud, '35); Mr. and Mrs. Robert McKenzie, '53; Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Severson, '41 (Bev Schmecher, '42); Larry Snortland, ex '58; Miss Ila Mehtala; Mr. and Mrs. Irvin T. Stiles, '42; Dick Stern, '35; Harold Stratemeyer, '41; Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Torgerson, '55 (Louise Torgerson, ex '55); Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Voak, '41 (Donna Clayburgh, '40); Mr. and Mrs. Edward Wherland, '41; and Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Wood, '57.

HONOR PROFS

Three UND faculty members were honored for outstanding teaching at the UND Founders Day banquet, and each were given $1,000 awards.

Winners were Dr. Omer R. Larson, assistant professor of biology; Dr. John R. Reid, associate professor of geology, and Prof. Playford V. Thorson, Jr., assistant professor of history. The awards were made possible by a Standard Oil Foundation grant.

CAMPUS NOTES

Dr. John L. Rowe, chairman of the UND business education department, was recently elected president of the Catholic Business Education Association at the annual convention in Chicago. He will hold office for two years and heads the group in ten mid-west states.

—UND—

Dr. Robert C. Nordlie, Hill Research professor of biochemistry at UND, and Dr. William J. Arion, former UND graduate student, have written a chapter in the book, "Methods of Enzymology." The book is the ninth volume in a series, and the chapter is based on findings which came about through research at UND by Drs. Nordlie and Arion. Arion is now a post-doctoral research fellow at Cornell.

—UND—

A group of ten persons, most of them UND students, will travel 450 miles by horse-drawn covered wagons from Grand Forks to Medora this summer. At Medora, the members will attend the fourth annual Old West Writer's Workshop, co-sponsored by the North Dakota State Travel Department and the UND journalism department. The travelers will attempt to emulate frontier life in clothing, food and route, and will help finance the trip by presenting a historical musical pageant at stops along the way. Archie Hill, UND assistant professor of journalism and workshop director, will travel with the group.

—UND—

Geraldine Olson of Rockford, Ill., a graduate student in biology at UND, will be one of ten students from across the nation to participate in a marine biology cruise this spring, starting at Acapulco, Mexico, and ending at Monterey, Calif. The combination study and research effort is sponsored by Stanford University and the National Science Foundation.

SPEAKERS AVAILABLE

Thirty-three UND faculty members are available as speakers for commencement or other occasions through the UND General Extension Division.

President Lists Trends Affecting UND's Future

Two major trends affecting the future of UND are outlined by Dr. George W. Starcher in the biennial report of the president for 1964-66 in a 32-page illustrated publication.

Named as the two principal patterns shaping UND's future were:

1. Quantity and quality of students continue to rise. Students now entering are better prepared to undertake more advanced and more rigorous courses than in the past, and the quality of instruction must keep pace.

2. The demand for graduate study is increasing rapidly. The Graduate School experiences an annual growth rate of about 15 percent, and the unit cost per student at the graduate level is about five times the unit cost for work at the freshman and sophomore levels. Enrollment at UND's campuses at Grand Forks, Ellendale and Williston is 7,000 this year and is expected to exceed 8,400 by 1972.

UND Study Plays Role In Water Pollution Control

Research by a UND geologist indicates that clams in the Red River Valley can play important and valuable roles in the areas of water pollution control, conservation, economics and study of geological history.

Dr. Alan M. Cvancara, UND assistant professor of geology, has studied the larger clams, or mussels, of the Red River Valley, and is now compiling data on his findings for the two-year project which was begun in 1965. Funds were provided by the Office of Water Resources research of the U. S. Department of the Interior.

Dr. Cvancara thinks that clams, by their absence from certain parts of a river, may serve as biological indicators of water pollution. He explains that clams constantly filter several gallons of water per day through their bodies for oxygen and microscopic food; when water is of poor quality, their absence in a section of the river is apt to reflect this lack of water quality.

U Grad Has Distinguished Career in Criminology

James Reinhardt, who earned his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from UND in 1925 and 1929, retired in 1963 from the University of Nebraska staff, and is now Professor of Criminology Emeritus.

He has had a career of more than 40 years in teaching and research in criminology, criminal psychology, personality and social adjustment, and social psychology.

Reinhardt has had more than 70 articles published in professional journals, along with nine books. He is now engaged in a psychological study of teen-age violence and lesser offenses, and a study of schizophrenia among adult offenders. He has been a visiting lecturer on criminology at the University of Omaha, Midland College, and John F. Kennedy College.

Outstanding in his field, Reinhardt has received many special awards, is listed in "Who's Who in America" and "International Who's Who," and is a member of many associations in his field.

RECEIVE AWARDS

Nine UND students who are majoring in French or German have received Arneberg Language Awards totaling $10,000 to study abroad. The scholarships are provided by a trust fund set up by the estate of the late Dr. John G. Arneberg, pioneer Grand Forks physician who died in 1958.

Governor's Day Set May 12 On Campus

The ninth annual Governor's Day is scheduled at UND on May 12, when Gov. William Guy will inspect Army and Air Force ROTC cadets and present awards to outstanding military and air science students. Donald H. Ford, '54, assistant professor of accounting and business law at UND, is chairman of the event.

FACULTY CITED

Dr. Richard Beck and Dr. George Wheeler were presented with $250 Hilborn Alumni Faculty Awards at Founders Day. The awards, with plaques, were presented for "outstanding teaching and distinguished service to the University" by J. Lloyd Stone, executive vice president of the UND Alumni Association.

SPEAKS TO ENGINEERS

Bjorn Bjornson, who was head of the journalism department for two years during the 1930's, was guest speaker this spring at a meeting of professional engineers in Minot.

Bjornson is information manager for Northern States Power Co. in Minneapolis and has had a long career as a former newspaperman and radio correspondent. He was on the staff of the Minneapolis Tribune, then worked as a foreign correspondent for many years for NBC, and later for the CBS staff in Washington, D. C.

TEACHER DEMAND

UND students prepared for teaching can continue to look forward to plentiful opportunities in a variety of teaching positions at good salaries, according to a review of last year's placements by Dr. M. L. Cushman, dean of the UND College of Education. North Dakota salaries for UND graduates in their first year of teaching have risen from $4,636 to $5,077 in the past five years.

SLATE PARENTS DAY

The annual UND open house for parents of UND students has been renamed from Mothers Day to Parents Day, effective this spring. The date for the annual event will be Saturday, May 6, and the change of name was made because the program is designed for both mothers and fathers.

WIN SCHOLARSHIPS

Two UND seniors have been awarded Woodrow Wilson graduate scholarships for 1967-68. They are Dennis L. Byrnes of Devils Lake and James F. Challey of Valley City.

They will receive one academic year of graduate education, with tuition and fees paid by the Woodrow Wilson National Foundation, a living stipend of $2,000, and allowances for dependents. In addition, the Foundation will award a supplementary grant to the graduate school in which he chooses to enroll. Byrnes and Challey are among 1,259 students throughout the United States and Canada awarded the fellowships from nearly 14,000 nominations.

OFFER FOREIGN SERVICE

The College of Education at UND has made the services of its faculty available to assist American-sponsored schools in several Latin American and Caribbean nations. The program is supported by grants from the U. S. Department of State.
