Editorial:

Nation Needs Education

The Korean War has brought forth a seismic belch of problems to the American universities and colleges. In this emergency as in the emergency of World War II, education has been given, time and time again, a verbal beating with cries that it is nonessential and expendable. We have not stopped to realize the potential strength which lies in education and its relative effect to a mentally, as well as physically, strong nation.

Our schools of higher education have not fully recovered from the financial losses they sustained in the Second World War. The Korean War has stepped into their recovery programs and has stripped the colleges of students, dismissed teachers, and has accelerated their curricula. These three points have jelled together to create a financial problem which will eventually force many schools to close their portals of learning and cause dire financial straits in others. The ultimate end will result in the creation of what the president of Yale terms as a "headless monster". That is to say, a nation with only physical capabilities.

In this period of militarism, much depends on the soldier. The times in America call for men of mental stature to match and surpass the mental prowess which the top nations of the world have to offer. This situation can be achieved only after our soldiers, and especially our future soldiers, are educated in a way which is the custom in times of peace.

As far as the government is concerned, the problem is not a financial one. It is simply a matter of careful planning to reinstate and further education in this country. It seems quite ironic that if we can spend $1,000,000,000 a year on the new invention, television sets, as we did last year, that we can certainly afford to spend more than the $1,005,000,000 on education as we did in 1947.

The problem is a critical one and demands urgent action by our country if we are to hold our nation's power, which needs education as its chief instrument of strength.

Most popular campus sport: hiking, to the cafeteria . . . At last summer sessionites have found the place where time stands still: the Student Union.

Now with us: That campus befuddlement, term papers.

The summer session catalog says trips to the lake region. The deans say classes on Saturday. The students? What can they do?

Five North Dakota counties are black sheep as far as the University is concerned. The counties, Adams, Billings, Dunn, Oliver and Slope, are not represented at the University this summer.

Gone but not forgotten: The cool summer weather. Why did we complain?

Notice to Bee Raisers: The bees are still swarming around the top of Old Main in spite of the removal of some from a nearby tree recently. Honey lovers might try to capture some of the insects' produce if they don't mind a few stings.

The Wayward Bus was on campus the other day. It was just a city bus wending its way around the campus in the opposite direction, having entered the exit gate and leaving by way of the entrance.

Enrollees Improving, Clinic Chief Says

Nine members are now enrolled at the University speech clinic reports Prof. Roy Sanford, in charge.

The clinic is striving to help those in the clinic feel more worthy of their speech. The staff is helping the students by increasing their exercises in place skills and socialization skills. Sanford also stated that the class has been studying articulation in pronouncing correct sounds.

The nine members are classified in six categories. Three are stutterers, two are in articulation, and one each are in delayed speech, hard of hearing, cleft palate, and lateral lip.

The nine members have been improving steadily since they started six weeks ago, said Sanford.

Travels 3000 Miles!

Alaskan Takes Masters Here

WILLIAM L. JAHN: HE LIKES IT HERE, BUT . . .

By A. L. MONROE

Juneau who owns that car? No, but Alaska! And after we asked we found out the car belonged to William J. Jahn who traveled 3,000 miles just to take work on his masters at UND this summer. Jahn came from Haines, Alaska, about 90 miles north of Juneau.

Jahn likes this summer session, but he's anxious to get back to his wife and three children, and Moose hunting headquarters of North America.

Speaking as a one man chamber of commerce Jahn described Haines as a lumber, mining and fishing city with a population of 450 nestled in the Chilkat river valley. Adding to the attraction of the Haines location, Jahn reports they have an annual rainfall of about 56 inches, and the snowfall is about 26 feet . . .

but the temperature rarely gets below 50 degrees during the winter because of the Japanese currents.

Jahn serves as superintendent of a high school which has an enrollment of 134, and has been at Haines for the past 12 years. He received a bachelors degree from Valley City teachers college, and was originally from Judd, N. D.

Interested in Alaskan opportunities? Then just call Princeton hall and ask for Bill Jahn, he'll be glad to tell you about the place. "I'll be glad to get back even though I like the University."

Work Progresses On U Buildings; 1 Dorm Stymied

By VENOY DRAPER

Work is progressing steadily on three buildings while one project is at a standstill due to a material bottleneck.

Crews are working on permanent seating at the new field house. Some exterior brickwork also remains to be completed, Leonard Marti, U athletic director said this week.

Workmen are preparing to erect third floor framework in the Engineering building, Timon Vigen, foreman, reported. Other work in progress there is installation of conduits for electricity. Vigen said some brickwork may start next week.

The building on which there has been no progress is the men's dormitory across University Avenue from the new women's dorm. Vigen said lack of building stone was the reason no work is under way there.

The women's dormitory is completely enclosed except for a wing of the building facing the U dispensary. Brickwork for the wing is nearing completion, the building foreman reported. Progress inside the building is fairly rapid with concrete flooring about two-thirds finished, the foreman said. Plumbing and steam lines are also being installed.

Capacity Audience Thrills to Music By 'Rhythm Kings'

The Rhythm Kings proved themselves worthy of their title in their presentation of ballads, negro spirituals and rhythm numbers at convocation Tuesday. The large audience which overflowed the ballroom into the Student Union lounge were literally thrilled with the entertaining gestures and artistic presentation of the white dinner jacketed group.

Swaying with the rhythm of their songs, the quartet not only showed their ability as a group but also their individual talent through solo parts of the selections. Their version of "Dry Bones" was something new and highly entertaining while James Riley, bass, showed himself to be the Bob Hope of the group with his humorous antics.

Howard Scott, tenor, with his rhythmic solos in "My Baby Said Yes" and "Why My Darling Why" proved to be an outstanding number of the group. Other members of the quartet were Cecil Murray, tenor, and Leonard Thomas, baritone. They were accompanied by Isaac Royal except for "Shall I Wasting in Despair" which they sang a capella.

In answer to the vigorous applause of the audience, the Rhythm Kings sang "Love Me Baby Tonight" and "Sentimental Journey."

U Brings Nursing Education To Truly College Standards

The public's demand for better educated nurses has spurred the University to reactivate the nursing program and bring it to a truly collegiate level, Miss Beatrice M. Horsey, director of the division of nursing, stated.

Miss Horsey, appointed in 1949, with the aid of her assistant, Miss Miriam L. Keller, the deans of the various schools and the heads of many departments is working toward a sound program of nursing.

The four-year course offered integrates the general and professional education. The first two years, Miss Horsey said, consist of courses in science, social science and psychology given on the campus. The third year the student is given clinical experience in diet therapy, operating room technique, medical, surgical and obstetrical nursing at Deaconess hospital. The fourth year is spent at the University of Minnesota where the student receives clinical experience in pediatric, psychiatric, out-patient, and rural nursing.

Upon completion of the course, the student is granted a degree of bachelor of Science in nursing and

Big Field Competes In Golf Tournament

If one of your instructors gave an impossible drop quiz this morning or looked unusually sullen, it's probably because he lost the summer session golf tournament yesterday. It was reported that only a few of the faculty members broke clubs on trees.

The all-campus golf tourney held Thursday got under way at 1 p.m. and brought a big field of entries. Drawings were taken for handicaps in the blind-bogey tourney, and the hackers went to work on the first tee. Results of the tournament will be published in next week's Student.

Frank Zazula, UND head football coach and summer session student was in charge of arrangements for the meet.

is eligible to take the licensing examination given by the North Dakota State Board of Nurses Examiners which qualifies her as a Registered Nurse.

It is hoped that within the next few years affiliations in tuberculosis and psychiatric nursing can be developed in the state hospitals in North Dakota. This step, said Miss Horsey, will help make the nursing program comparable to other major courses offered by the University.

Flights Scheduled For UND Personnel

The University will "take to the air" next week when special demonstration flights will be staged here to take approximately 150 graduate students, school administrators and teachers aloft.

The flights originally were scheduled for Wednesday, but last week-end's storm at the Minneapolis airport damaged the transport plane scheduled to come here. Definite time of the rescheduled flights will be announced later. They will operate over Grand Forks and vicinity.

The air age conference went off as scheduled Wednesday, however, with Major Horace Gilbert, CAA educational division officer of O'Hare Field, Park Ridge, Ill., as principal speaker. Also here for the session were Major Paul Roel and Lt. Robert Watson of the civilian air patrol in Fargo.

Theme of the conference was "Utilization of aviation resources for air age education." It was sponsored by the North Dakota division of the National Aviation Education Council, as well as the CAP, the CAA, the Grand Forks International airport and interested citizens. Dean Harold Holstine acted as chairman.

Extension Approved On G.I. Education For Some Students

The Veteran's administration has modified the July 25 deadline on educational benefits under the G. I. bill of rights to permit veteran students securing bachelors degrees in 1951 to continue training.

Announcement of the ruling was made by E. G. Marks, head of the V.A.'s regional registration office, Fargo.

"Approval for further education benefits," Marks said, "will be given these 1951 graduates if their applications are received by the V.A. by the end of September, 1951."

The certificates of eligibility issued under the policy interpretation will be for the fall semester, he added.

Most Practical Course!

Girls Study Housekeeping in Modern Home

By MARY ANN HEDER

Perhaps the most practical course being taken by any students this summer is the course being taken by the five girls living in the Home Management house in Davis hall this summer.

Their's is an ideal set-up, with everyone having household duties—including "father." Actually the five girls switch family positions every 9 days and therefore serve as children, mothers and fathers during their stay.

As the mother, Eileen Hoye of East Grand Forks this week, the girl cooks and orders the food, all on a budget. As the father, Lila Lucas of Wahpeton, helps with the cooking, sets the table and cleans the kitchen once a week. The other three girls, Dorothea Thorgrimsen, Helene Wachtler of Bismarck and Donna Boschee, are now children and share the tasks of washing and ironing clothes, washing dishes, emptying the garbage, giving the house a thorough cleaning once a week and doing whatever daily cleaning is necessary.

To carry out their household tasks, a model home with a kitchen, living room, dining room, two bedrooms, a bath and dressing room has been set up as the home management house in the basement of Davis hall. Once inside the "house" one forgets that they are actually in house within a building because of the comfortable and homey atmosphere.

Guests are entertained every week at the house. One week the Holstines and Witmers were dinner guests. Miss Mildred Davis, home economics professor, was also a guest together with a number of personal friends of the girls.

Of course it isn't all a matter of household drudgery as one night the girls took bubble baths as a means of relaxation. Other nights they go to the movies just like one big happy family. Miss Tilda Natwick, home economics professor, serves as instructor for the class and general supervisor.

U Dean Observes ROTC Men In Action

Dean R. B. Witmer, of the college of Science, Literature and Arts, recently returned from Camp McCoy, Wisconsin, where he was the University's representative at the ROTC summer camp.

At the camp representatives of universities and colleges observed the men in drill, inspected facilities, ate with the men, and were briefed on the summer camp program, Dean Witmer said.

One of the high points of his stay, Dean Witmer said, was an artillery firing demonstration.

Madrigal To Wear New Maroon Jackets

The jackets which are maroon and waist length will be worn with black trousers and skirts and a contrasting sash. They are being tailored by Maurice L. Rothschild and Co. of St. Paul.

The Chorus' spring tour is being arranged with present plans for appearances at the Chicago Sunday Evening club, St. Paul and Lake Geneva.

'Can-oo Canoe!'

Paddle Your Own Canoe--- But Watch Out for Sea Serpent

By SAM MEBLIN

Now you can paddle your own canoe—free of charge—at the summer session afternoon playground on the coulee bank. Any student is welcome to canoe himself on the English coulee, providing he knows which end of the paddle to use.

Those who can't swim are asked to bring with them a life preserver, pocket-size gyro-compass, and provisions for a week in case the tide carries them out too far. In case a long trip is planned, lunch can be had at the Armour packing plant.

Before debarking, persons are warned for tidal waves which have been known to come up unexpectedly on the calm waters of the coulee, and for a sea serpent which has been suspected of lurking at the bottom of the crystal-clear stream.

The romantic aspect of canoeing isn't too great as the hours for canoeing are confined to 3 until 5 p.m., but anyone wishing to take his girl out for a voyage during that time can do so. He must furnish his own guitar and moon.

So if the question should come up . . . "Can 'oo canoe?" . . . the place to try is the coulee.

2 Firms Offer Bids To Expand Steamline

Two bids have been submitted for expansion of University steamlines, E. W. Olson, business manager reports. Sornsins Co., of Fargo bid $47,913, and Lunseth Plumbing and Heating of Grand Forks was low with $39,840. The offers have been sent to the board of higher education for further action, Olson said. Purpose of the expansion is to provide high pressure for the mechanical engineering department in Chandler hall and additional low pressure for the two new dormitories and Princeton hall, Olson said.

Shuffleboard Meet Scheduled Thursday

Open to both men and women summer sessionites, a shuffleboard tourney is slated for the Women's Gym, Thursday. Competition will get under way at 3 p.m., according to Clarence Fauskin, in charge.

90 U People Utilize Gardens To Beat High Living Costs

By DON DE KREY

Long before the cost of living was the problem it is today, the University buildings and grounds department set up a system of free gardens for summer session students and faculty.

Five acres of rich, Red River valley land located across English coulee from the campus was allocated for this use nearly thirteen years ago.

The first year the plan was tried, only four gardens materialized; but the idea soon caught on. This year, according to E. J. Buckingham, superintendent of buildings and grounds, about 90 such garden plots are being carefully cultivated by the faculty and students.

The plots measure fifty feet square and the use of them is absolutely free. The buildings and grounds department even takes care of plowing, harrowing and staking of the plots.

All the gardner has to do is furnish the seed, the know-how and the elbow-grease to keep his plot clean and in good shape for the year to come.

Some of the gardners have utilized the plan merely as a hobby; others have found gardening a healthful pastime for afternoons and evenings; and, all have found it a good way to ease the rising cost of summer living.

Minot College Head Meets with U Group

Fourth of North Dakota college presidents to appear on the campus this summer—Dr. C. C. Swain of Minot State Teachers college—met with University groups Thursday and addressed Phi Delta Kappa education fraternity in the Student Union Thursday night.

President Swain discussed professionalization of school administrators. During the day he met with graduate students and faculty members to evaluate courses.

Topics that came up for discussion with Dr. Swain at the various meetings included re-organization of school districts, improvement of teaching certificate standards and areas in which the University and teachers colleges could work together to further educational needs of the state.

Arlene Dippe, soprano, accompanied by Betty Ann Holt, will open the convocation with a musical selection. Miss Thelma Willett, assistant professor of piano at Wesley college, will play a piano solo to complete the program.

'Papa Is All' Well Received On First Night

A large audience is expected to be on hand tonight when the curtain rises for the second and last performance of the summer session play "Papa Is All," at 8 p.m. in West school auditorium.

The three-act comedy written by Patterson Greene is directed by S. Donald Robertson, speech instructor and director of radio station KFJM, and produced by summer session students. Free tickets are still available at the business office or may be obtained at the door tonight by students. Non-students may purchase tickets at seventy-five cents.

Burchard Hayes in the role of Papa Aukamp, a tyrannical Menonite father, as the villain reflects the melodrama. A feeling of hate seems to rise among the audience as they realize the harshness of his words and actions and his effect on his family. The audience literally waits for John Wilmot, in his heroic role of State Trooper Brende, to act. The character portrayal of the hero is weak.

The audience's sympathy goes to Jake Aukamp, played by Howard Osborne, and Emma Aukamp, played by Arlene Dammel, as the pieces of the plot unfold and one sees the real situation. Mama Aukamp, portrayed by Leonora Johnson, is a rather wishy-washy character in the play, not knowing what she wants. Arlene Dippe as Mrs. Yoder is the typical neighborhood gossip who loves to talk and talks too much.

The play on the whole is light and completely entertaining with its funny plot and background of Menonite manners. There are sufficient number of surprises to keep the action in lively motion.

The entire Aukamp family speak in a quaint and amusingly tongue-tied Pennsylvania Dutch which has excellent comedy effect. —M.A.H.
