Rushing Named 12th Dean Of Law School

Robert K. Rushing, associate professor of law at Washington and Lee University, has been appointed dean of the UND Law School, effective July 1. He succeeds Harold D. Cunningham, Jr., who has accepted a full-time teaching position in the UND Law School. Rushing becomes the 12th dean of the Law School.

Fritz Creates Fund for Annual Tiffany Awards

Chester Fritz, international investment banker and UND alumnus, has established a $50,000 scholarship fund in perpetuity at the University in the name of his former high school principal and aunt, Mrs. Kathrine B. Tiffany.

The gift will be used to award three annual scholarships, one of about $1,000 to a graduate student majoring in English, and two of approximately $625 each to students of sophomore, junior or senior rank, one majoring in English and one in history. Applications for the Tiffany Scholarships to be offered for the 1969-70 school year are now being accepted.

Fritz said these scholarships are being given in the name of Mrs. Tiffany to honor a UND alumna and to recognize her long-time interest in the University.

In addition to the Tiffany Scholarships, Fritz has been generous in other support, including the UND swimming pool and other projects. In 1956, he established the Chester Fritz Scholarships in perpetuity, providing $5,000 annually toward the education of six students.

In 1958, he gave one million dollars toward the li-

Human Nutrition Laboratory Construction to Begin on Campus

Dr. T. H. Harwood, left, dean of the UND Medical School, and Dr. W. E. Cornatzer, right, chairman of the Medical School's biochemistry department, check a preliminary sketch of the proposed human nutrition laboratory to be built on the UND campus. The staff of the new laboratory will be associated with both the biochemistry department and the Medical School.

Facility to Be First of Kind in the Nation

The human nutrition laboratory at the University of North Dakota will come a step closer to reality April 9 with the opening of bids on the $633,000 facility—the first of its kind in the nation.

Construction of the laboratory is expected to begin as soon as possible, according to Dr. William E. Cornatzer, chairman of the UND biochemistry department. The goal of the laboratory will be to attack the world's critical food and nutritional shortage.

Scheduled for completion about a year after construction begins, the laboratory, a project of the U. S. Department of Agriculture (USDA), will serve as the center of experiment and research in nutrition for a staff of 40-50 that will include 15-20 scientists.

It will be built on the far east side of the campus across from the football stadium on land given to the USDA by the University.

Dr. Cornatzer, who is also director of the Ireland Research Laboratory, said the lab will serve as a focal point for a regional human nutritional program. It will conduct research into:

—the nutritional state of individuals and groups of people;

—nutritional requirements, such as trace elements;

—the most favorable nutrient intakes of humans under stress;

—the nutritional value of foods produced in this region.

The research center will fulfill a special need in providing a program of leadership and training opportuni-

UND 'Alumni Days' Awaits Large Return to Campus

Hundreds of UND alumni, former students and friends are expected on the University campus May 15-16 for the annual "Alumni Days," with several events scheduled during the two days.

An Alumni Days Dinner will open the schedule at 6:15 p.m. at the University Center on May 15. Members of the classes of 1919 to 1923, inclusive, will be honored. Also honored will be members of the UND Alumni Board, both present and past. The presentation of five Sioux Awards and the Stewart Essay Contest prizes will be made during the evening.

The annual meeting of the UND Alumni Association will also be held following the dinner.

May 16 will open with special tours of the campus, including a coffee break with President George W. Starcher. The UND Alumni Board of Directors will hold its spring meeting at Twamley Hall, and will elect officers for the 1969-1970 year.

The Governor's Day luncheon will be held at noon on Friday, May 16, at Wilkerson Hall during which time the West Green Complex will be dedicated. It will be followed by a military review of ROTC and a social hour for "Old Timers."

Reservations can be made through the Alumni Office.

University of North Dakota ALUMNI REVIEW

The University of North Dakota Alumni Review is published monthly except July and August, by the University of North Dakota, Grand Forks, N. Dak., for alumni and former students of the University of North Dakota in the interests of the University. Second-class postage paid at Grand Forks, N. Dak. Change of address and return requested forms should be sent to the University of North Dakota Alumni Review, Grand Forks, N. Dak. 58201.

ties in human nutrition as related to health and environment, he said.

"The food crisis of the world is catching up with us," Dr. Cornatzer noted. "There are no longer any surpluses."

A great need for an expanded program of research in nutrition exists, according to the UND biochemist. An expanded program needs to be carried out on the food and nutritional requirements of persons of different ages, effects of environmental conditions, and other factors on metabolic processes, he continued.

"There is a need for more consistent study of the biological quality and the biochemical content of food as it passes from the farm to the table," Dr. Cornatzer said.

He pointed out that research to be conducted in the nutrition laboratory will result in continued advances in nutrition and benefits to the farmers.

"We are very fortunate to live in such a great agricultural area as the Red River Valley—the breadbasket of the world," Dr. Cornatzer observed. "The Valley was selected as the site of the human nutrition laboratory because of its importance as one of the major food producing areas of the United States."

North Dakota Senator Milton R. Young, a leading proponent and author of the bill which established the facility, called the laboratory a "vital link in an expanding program of human nutrition research which has lagged far behind the advancement of knowledge in other fields.

"The University of North Dakota was selected as the site for this facility because of the importance of this research being correlated with medical research of the type conducted at the UND Medical School, and the availability of biochemists, physiologists and physicians on the Medical School staff for supporting research," Young added.

The laboratory will be operated by the USDA Agricultural Research Service, which estimates the annual operating budget at about $500,000.

Staff members will have University appointments in the Medical and Graduate Schools and will participate in graduate teaching. UND graduate students will conduct research in the facility.

"Graduate students will be employed as technicians," Dr. Cornatzer said, "which will stimulate new knowledge and give them the benefit of working with top men in the field."

He added that the laboratory will help to build the local scientific community as well as the UND Medical School and the natural science and home economics departments.

The two-story brick structure will have approximately 16,000-17,000 square feet of floor space and will be fully air conditioned.

The first floor of the building will house four biochemistry labs, a lipid laboratory, a radio-chemistry lab, a microbiology lab, administration and research offices, a photographic darkroom and receiving, chemical storage and reference rooms.

The second floor will contain a health laboratory, a sample collecting room, walk-in refrigerator and freezer, a staff lounge, staff offices, and the superintendent's apartment. The second floor of the building will house 10 bedrooms with bath and dining facilities for volunteers on whom nutrition research will be conducted.

Individual laboratories will be equipped with distilled water, compressed air, steam and vacuum.

FACULTY HONORED

Three UND faculty members were honored as outstanding teachers at the UND Founders Day-Honors Day banquet during February. Winners of the three $1,000 awards were Ronald Bzoch, professor and chairman of mathematics; Ludwik Kulas, professor of accounting and business law; and Stephen C. Markovich, assistant professor of political science. The awards were given to UND by Standard Oil Foundation to "honor three members of the faculty in undergraduate school who were doing outstanding teaching during the current school year."

brary building that bears his name, and in 1965 he gave another million toward an auditorium at UND, plans for which are now underway.

A retired school teacher now living in Wheaton, Ill., Mrs. Tiffany received an A.B. degree from UND in 1902 and an A.M. in 1908; she did three years of graduate work in other universities, and taught in Valley City, Seattle Pacific, Whitworth and Wheaton colleges.

A native of Buxton, Chester Fritz began his education in a one-room school in Trail County and in 1908 was graduated from Lidgerwood high school. At the age of 16, he entered UND, studying there in 1908-1910, and completed his work for a baccalaureate degree in economics plus a year of law at the University of Washington.

In 1915, the Fisher Flour Mills sent him to the Orient and for 34 years he had headquarters in China. In 1928, he became a member of a newly organized investment banking firm having offices in both hemispheres.

Chester Fritz returned to UND in 1951 to receive an honorary Doctor of Laws, and came back in 1961 to help dedicate the new library building bearing his name. He is expected to return for the dedication of the new University auditorium.

FINANCIAL AIDS

A brochure outlining the various financial aids available to students who wish to attend UND has been published by the UND Financial Aids office.

Four types of financial aid are available for deserving students who might not otherwise be able to attend college. They are scholarships, loans, educational opportunity grants and employment. The publication is available from the Student Financial Aids Office, University of North Dakota, Grand Forks, N. D. 58201.

ENGINEER GRANT

A $3,500 grant from the 3M Corporation of St. Paul has been received by the UND chemical engineering department.

Ruth Noren Appreciation Dinner Set

A Ruth Noren Appreciation Dinner is being planned for May 6 to honor the woman who has been a "mother" to thousands of past and present UND students.

Miss Noren, supervisor of the Student Health Center, will retire this year after 28 years on the job. The dinner is being sponsored by the North Dakota Medical Center and will be held at the UND Student Center.

"We hope this will provide an opportunity for Miss Noren's many friends and former patients to show their appreciation for all she has done over these years," said Dr. T. H. Harwood, director of the Medical Center.

Reservations for the dinner, which will cost $2.25 per person, may be made by writing or calling the Dean's Office, UND Medical School.

"We'd appreciate a letter even if someone is unable to attend the dinner," said Dr. Harwood. "Miss Noren has always enjoyed her contacts with students."

Kenneth Gilchrist, '57; Dr. and Mrs. G. G. Hoffman, '54 (Elaine Arnason, ex '54); Mr. and Mrs. Tom Rodgers, '52; J. P. Melberg, '50; Kay Klockner; Mr. and Mrs. Ted W. Nuss, '58 (Buzzy Williams, ex '57); Mr. and Mrs. Don Steiner, '57; Mr. and Mrs. Chuck Johnson, '48; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Beam (Hope Squires, '37); Mr. and Mrs. Alex Pollak (Judith Papermaster, '46); Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. Dorsher, '51; and President George W. Starcher.

NEW YORK

UND Alumni in the New York City area held their spring meeting on February 14 at the Overseas Press Club and elected M. James Robertson as president.

Other officers named were Lambert Huppeler, honorary president; Aaren Sternfield, first vice president; Glenn Geiger, second vice president; and Lois Wilde, secretary-treasurer. J. Lloyd Stone, executive vice president of the UND Alumni Association, was the featured speaker.

Those attending included:

L. O. Aasen, '47; Lois Wilde, '44; Aaron Sternfield, '46; Emily Ann Wolff; Mr. and Mrs. John Holmes, '60 (Betty Sonderland, ex '63); Ruth Sowle; Mr. and Mrs. Ron Keating, '59 (Jean Erickson, '61); Mr. and Mrs. Charles I. Wharton (Terryll Tvedten, '62); Mr. and Mrs. Erling Balstad, ex '47; Carol Erickson, '63; Ina Luadtke (Ina Lommen, '60); Hjerdis Braaten, '67; Mr. and Mrs. Edward R. Carrough, '58; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gilbert, ex '60;

Emil C. Toelle, '56; Linda M. Juhala; Mr. and Mrs. Zdenek Marek, '51; Mr. and Mrs. David G. Rognlie, '56 (Marjorie Letnes, '56); Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Duncan, '43; Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Kishpaugh, '12; Mr. and Mrs. Gary Maddock, '63 (Janice Millar, '66); Mrs. Roland Read (Marion Wilder, '22); Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Weisser, '50; Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth P. Torgerson, '31 (Olga Holien, '31); Lois M. Johnson, '64; Harold A. Holmes, '27; Marcia Howland, '67; and J. Lloyd Stone, '30.

NEWS NOTES

Patrick J. Clifford, '43, has been advanced to vice president with Sentry Insurance Co. of Stevens Point, Wis. A member of the company since 1947, he is responsible for the firm's underwriting, actuary and operations functions.

Warner Brand, '56, is with Lehigh Portland Cement. He and his wife, the former Vorry Johnson, '56, now reside in Wichita, Kan. after living in Birmingham, Ala. for four years.

James A. Nowatzki, '60, has moved from New Jersey to Northridge, Calif. He is a senior engineer with Bendix Corp.

Sandi Wicklund, '67, is a member of a singing ensemble called "Just Us" which performs at supper clubs in Minneapolis and St. Paul. The group was recently auditioned and invited to perform on the Johnny Carson "Tonight" show.

Sidney F. Bateman, '59, has received an appointment as assistant national bank examiner for the Ninth National Bank Region. He had been on the staff of the First National Bank in Grand Forks and will be located in Wisconsin.

Arnold P. Monteith, '34, has purchased a small residential grocery store in Scottsbluff, Neb. He had been a sales representative for "Hi - Plains Harvestore Systems."

Juliana Marie Phelps, '68, was married February 15 to Paul G. Kierstein. They will make their home in Denver.

Dewel E. Viker, Jr., '65, has opened a law office in Hillsboro. He practiced law for one year at Ashley and was associated with a law office in Grand Forks for three years. He is married to the former Geraldine Swalstad, '63, and they have two children.

Gamble Hall Features Latest in Equipment

DEAN
THOMAS J. CLIFFORD

Gamble Hall, UND's sprawling, $1.8 million, 88,000 square-foot College of Business and Public Administration headquarters, offers the latest in modern equipment. According to Dean Thomas J. Clifford, the real importance of the structure lies beyond the tangible facilities.

"Morale—of both faculty and students—has been stimulated immeasurably," said Clifford, B&PA dean since 1949, "and that's the greatest value of the move." "Not only does Gamble Hall provide equipment to facilitate instruction, but the building has inspired everyone to do a better job," he said.

Three stories tall, Gamble Hall is designed to accommodate 2,300 students simultaneously and will function at near-80 per cent capability in 1969, according to Clifford. The building houses: 60 individual faculty offices, arranged by departments; a 12-sided lecture bowl; several "pit classrooms"; and numerous circular seminar classrooms.

"Most of these new classroom designs provide a more intimate academic environment," Clifford said.

Clifford said a class of 60 students would feel "more at ease" in a pit classroom than would a class of 30 in a standard classroom.

"We're also proud that ours is one of the first general classroom buildings in North Dakota designed to accommodate handicapped students."

Gamble's modern facilities allow full-scale utilization of audio-visual aids, closed circuit television courses, video tape recorders and especially computers. While the University's computer center remains in Twamley Hall, Clifford said, the Gamble building contains invaluable computer and data processing apparatus.

"Availability of such computer equipment has enabled us to expand our programs in many areas," Clifford said.

He pointed out new studies in such areas as computer programming should attract a larger percentage of transfer students to the College.

"The full capabilities of the computer world are just starting to be tapped," Clifford said. "The reason business has changed more radically in the last decade than it had in the previous 50 years is simply—the computer."

Clifford said the rapid changes in the business world demand constant updating of applications. Faculty and students alike, he said, must always be aware of new developments. "The resiliency of our faculty to adapt to new techniques, new methods, has indeed been amazing," Clifford said.

Future areas Clifford and his faculty plan to explore include a master's degree program in business administration. Similar programs are now offered in accounting, marketing and economics.

"In former years," Clifford recalled, "we were known as the 'suitcase faculty' because we conducted classes in 14 different buildings.

"Now, finally, we are situated and ready to tackle the great wave of the future—the computer world."

Don Brooks, ex '36, is president and general manager of the Continental Telephone Corp. for their Washington and Alaska properties. A native of Hazen, he has been with the firm for eight years. Continental Telephone serves areas in 42 states and three foreign countries.

Signal Honor

DR. GEORGE A. ABBOTT

A signal honor has come to Dr. George A. Abbott, professor emeritus of chemistry at UND, with his election to the British Blue Book of Science. It will be published in 1970.

Seek Sioux Award Nominations

Each year the UND Alumni Association honors a limited number of outstanding alumni with the Sioux Award presentation. The final selection of the alumni being so honored is made by the UND Alumni Citations Committee.

Five outstanding alumni are being honored at Alumni Days. The next presentation will be made at the UND Homecoming in the fall.

The Citations Committee is seeking nominations for these awards. A form for that purpose is included in this issue of the ALUMNI REVIEW. It should be mailed to: UND CITATIONS COMMITTEE, c/o UND Alumni Office, University of North Dakota, Grand Forks, N. Dak. 58201.

Nursing School Graduates Scattered Throughout USA

DEAN MARGARET HEYSE

When Margaret Heyse, dean of the UND College of Nursing, says her former students are everywhere, she makes no reservations. "We have students in practically every state, including Alaska and Hawaii, even three doing missionary work in Camerouns, Africa," Dean Heyse said.

When Miss Heyse became dean in 1959, 78 students were enrolled in the College. She expects to graduate 71 seniors in 1969. "Our growth in the past decade has been phenomenal," she said. "Last year our enrollment jumped about 25 per cent and we were relieved this year's figure stayed close to 67-68."

Currently 215 students are enrolled in the College of Nursing. Each receives a broad background in theoretical as well as practical knowledge in nursing and public health.

"A nurse of today must be able to use her head as well as her hands, and our program is designed to combine theory with a deeper level of general and practical knowledge," Dean Heyse said.

Dean Heyse is particularly proud of the College's use of surrounding clinical facilities, which serve as working laboratories for students and instructors and provide valuable aid to community hospitals and health agencies.

As sophomores, nursing students work with the aged at Valley Memorial Home in Grand Forks. In the junior year, students work with children at the St. Joseph's Hospital in St. Paul, Minn. Several other hospitals and clinics in the Grand Forks area participate in this clinical teaching program.

"Our program has been so successful," Dean Heyse said, "because students and faculty both realize their great responsibility to hospital and patient."

The close working relationship between nursing students and faculty has always been an integral part of the college, she added. Student-faculty convocations are held frequently, and students serve on most faculty committees.

The College of Nursing is financed through the Medical Center's mill-levy fund. Dean Heyse said faculty expansion has not kept pace with enrollment growth, and money for more faculty and modern facilities is urgently needed.

"If we're to increase students indefinitely, we either have to expand faculty or branch out to other clinical facilities — outside Grand Forks," Dean Heyse said.

Future areas of College activity include recruiting men and working with the Division of Continuing Education on state workshops and clinics.

"We shall continue to teach our students in both smaller and larger hospitals throughout the community," Dean Heyse said. "This background, we feel, allows our graduates to function in almost any public health or clinical situation — anywhere in the world."

RECEIVES GRANT

Dr. Demetrius J. Georgacas, professor of classical languages at UND, has received a $10,000 grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities to support work on a Greek-English dictionary. The funds are for the salaries of two research associates. The dictionary was launched with a large grant from the U. S. Office of Education, and involves nearly two million index cards. When completed the dictionary will be 2,000 pages in length.

Sioux Wrap-Up Season Of Hot-Cold Success

Sioux winter sport teams enjoyed a fair amount of success in five winter sports and were in the running for conference championships in basketball and hockey.

In hockey the Sioux missed winning the Western Collegiate Hockey Association championship by one game. Coach Rube Bjorkman's warriors battled their way to a 15-7 WCHA record, good for third place behind NCAA and WCHA champ Denver, which had a 15-4-1 league mark. In all games the Sioux skaters had a 18-9-1 standing, including four wins in five contests against arch rival Minnesota.

Coach Bjorkman's scrappers swept season series from Minnesota Duluth, Michigan State and Colorado College.

It was a veteran team that averaged 4.5 goals per game. Six seniors—Co-Captains Bob Munro and Bob Tuff, Dave Kartio, Roger Bamburak, Terry Abram and Larry Dobson —have played their final games.

Munro again was named to the coaches All America team at center and junior defenseman John Marks earned the All America honor. Abram was an All American as a junior. Munro and Abram were named to the All WCHA first team and Marks and Kartio to the second team.

Coach Pete MacKenzie, '68, had a fine freshman team that lost only three games of the 16 played. His crew topped Minnesota's frosh, 6-4.

Coach Jim Rodgers and his basketball team were in the thick of the North Central Conference fight until the final week of the season. The cagers tied for second in the NCC on a 7-5 record and overall had a 11-15 mark for the toughest schedule ever undertaken.

Coach Rodgers will have a young team next season, anchored by 6-8 sophomore center Chuck Dodge. Evan Lips, son of former Sioux football captain Evan Lips, '40, earned a starting guard assignment in the latter part of the season and played excellent ball in the late season Sioux surge. Lips is a junior.

Marc Olson, son of Gil Olson, '43, Sioux star just before World War II, was a starter on the Sioux freshman team and played well.

We lose six varsity basketball players, but Rodgers feels his freshman crop will make up for some of the losses. Finishing their careers were 6-5 two-time all conference forward Vern Praus, 6-9 Dave Godfread, 6-5 Greg Stolt, 6-5 Joe Grubisich, 6-3 forward Don Tweedie and 6-2 shot-smith guard Al Jenkins, who was named the most valuable player in the North Central Conference. The freshman team lost only three games during a 15-game schedule.

In wrestling the Sioux enjoyed some success but lacked depth to be a serious NCC contender. Top wrestlers were Ron Kettleson, Roger Brist and Chuck Widdicombe. Brist is a junior, the other pair seniors. The grapplers had a 4-9 season.

Coach L. R. Marti's gymnastic team won its last three dual meets with a very young, but thin, squad. Hopes are high for next season when gymnastics becomes an NCC sport.

Our swimmers, competitive on intercollegiate basis for the first time, failed to win a meet, but prospects are looking up. Swimming also becomes an NCC sport next season.

Many alumni must see many standout high school athletes in all sports. It would be advantageous if our coaches were informed about prospective student-athletes.

Next season freshmen will be eligible to compete in all varsity sports, although the issue hadn't been settled in hockey as this was written.

RECEIVES $70,500 GRANT

The UND Medical School has received $70,500 as the third portion of a basic educational improvement grant first awarded by the U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare in 1967. The Medical School expects to receive a similar award next year as the final portion of the grant.

UND Graduate School Rated As 'Bargain for Academic Dollar'

DEAN
A. WILLIAM JOHNSON

If, as UND President George W. Starcher maintains, "North Dakotans are getting a bargain for their academic dollar," then the UND Graduate School ranks as one of the "better buys."

"The output of our school for what the state invests in dollars and cents is unbelievable," said A. William Johnson, UND Graduate School dean. "In student caliber, research activity and service to community, ours far surpasses graduate schools of comparable size and investment elsewhere," Johnson added.

UND Graduate School offers masters degree programs in 36 fields. Doctoral studies are offered in 12 areas: psychology, education, business education, counseling and guidance, English, chemistry, biology, geology, anatomy, physiology, microbiology and biochemistry.

"While changes in graduate school activities are traditionally cautious yet persistent, I feel we have accomplished quite a bit in a relatively short period," said Johnson, who became dean last June. "We have tightened our admission procedures, increased our enrollment and degree production and taken forward steps in revision of several degree programs."

The UND graduate program is the broadest and largest in the state. Last year, the University granted 284 masters degrees and 55 doctorates. Its next closest rival granted 220 masters and 15 doctorates. Still, Johnson said he would rather improve existing broad areas before branching out into new ones.

"We need to provide more support for the fields we are already in and to develop programs in areas closely related to those in which we have programs," he said.

One area he hopes to see developed is physics, Johnson pointed out. Currently, the physics department offers strong undergraduate and masters programs, and Johnson hopes to see a doctoral program initiated shortly, to complement existing UND doctoral programs.

"We are in excellent shape for a physics doctoral program with an outstanding faculty, new building and adequate laboratory facilities, he said. "Now all we need is authorization to accept students who are inquiring and even applying at the present time."

The advantage of such a program in physics or in other fields such as history, Johnson said, would be three-fold. First, a doctorate program puts the University in a position of national repute, aiding faculty acquisition and development of research activities. Secondly, a doctorate program helps maintain an active, competent faculty, which benefits the undergraduate program as well as the graduate one. Thirdly, the University is in a position to provide the education needed by present and prospective members of college faculties in the state and region.

As national reputation accrues, a department begins to generate a considerable amount of its own support," Johnson added.

Other advanced degree areas Johnson plans to explore include the masters degree in business administration, as well as additional programs in humanities, social sciences and engineering. One "significant change" already undertaken, according to Johnson, is the doctor of education degree program.

"We have taken a lead in this country by drawing a clear distinction between the Ph.D., which emphasizes research as its goal, and the Ed.D., which prepares practitioners for teaching in any area," Johnson said. "This clarification facilitates development of new and revised programs especially appropriate for the needs of the time."

About 80 per cent of graduate school graduates move into teaching, according to Johnson. He said this was "particularly heartening" in view of the need and desire to provide quality education in North Dakota and the rest of the country.

"Also extremely gratifying is the knowledge that 60 per cent of our graduate degree recipients intend to continue their education beyond their present graduate degree," Johnson said. "This is indicative of the quest for learning and knowledge they have acquired through graduate experience at UND."

In exemplifying its triple-function of education, research and service to society and community, Johnson said, a graduate faculty serves basically as a "catalyst for scholarship."

"You can't and shouldn't force anyone into graduate education—students must generate and follow up their own interest for it, he added. "We attempt, and I think succeed, in making strong programs with highly qualified faculty available for these students. Such an association produces two products: highly educated graduates and knowledge and ideas—both essential for the state and humanity."

CO-AUTHORS NEW BOOK

Dr. John C. Peterson of the UND faculty is co-author of a text-workbook "Communication Word Power" recently published. The college-level book is designed for vocabulary and spelling mastery. Dr. Peterson holds the M.S. and Ed.D. degrees from UND.

CAMPUS FOOTNOTES

A symposium on controversies in conservation drew approximately 75 soil and water conservationists to the UND campus for a two-day session.

—UND—

Willy Ley, widely recognized authority on space travel and rockets, spoke on the UND campus during March.

—UND—

Dr. Elizabeth Hampsten, assistant professor of English at UND, was awarded a $1,500 stipend by the National Endowment for the Humanities and is one of only 100 scholars selected to receive the summer stipend.

—UND—

Roger E. Hanson, a native of Aneta, has been appointed director of libraries at UND, effective July 1. He has been on the staff of the library at the University of Minnesota. UND's present head librarian, Donald J. Pearce, will assume half-time appointments as assistant professor of oriental philosophy and chief bibliographer in the Chester Fritz Library. Hanson will have direct responsibility for administration of the Fritz Library, as well as coordination of the Harley E. French Library, the Law Library and several departmental libraries.

—UND—

The University of North Dakota will host the fifth biennial Lignite Symposium on May 1-2 which will feature developments in the technology and utilization of fuels with emphasis on low-rank coals. Sponsors of the symposium are the Bureau of Mines of the U. S. Department of Interior and the University. The previous symposium attracted 250 persons from 30 states and five Canadian provinces.

—UND—

Robert Merrill, star of the Metropolitan Opera Association, will appear in concert with the University of North Dakota Choral Union on Sunday, May 11, at the UND Fieldhouse. The event is open to the public and tickets may be reserved by contacting Robert Van Voorhis, department of music, University of North Dakota.

Code to Deal With Disruptions

Serious disruptions are not expected at the University of North Dakota but stern measures will be taken if they do occur, Pres. George W. Starcher assured parents of UND students during Parents Day on the campus.

"We have a clear code of behavior and clear procedures to be followed if any attempted disruption of the normal processes of UND should occur," he said, "and we shall be just as firm with any parents who seek reinstatement of their son or daughter who may have been either the leader or unwitting victim of others who would in any way impair the quality and service of the University."

Dr. Starcher pointed out that those engaged in such disruptions make up but a tiny fraction of the total enrollment of all colleges and universities, and that "there is mounting evidence that the University has never been stronger and its students are able to read better, think better and they are attending school for more serious purposes than any previous generation of students."

He said that "UND has received more inquiries from prospective students interested in admission next year than it received all last year up to September when school opened, and that there is no evidence that enrollment will not continue to increase."

WINS RESEARCH AWARD

The history department at UND has been named the winner of the McDermott Award for departmental excellence in research. The award is based on the amount, significance and quality of published research and creative and scholarly productivity from the department, relative to the number of faculty members with professional rank in the department. The award was donated by the family of the late Lucille B. McDermott of Chicago. Her husband, Edward, is a 1920 UND alumnus and a member of the UND Alumni Board of Directors.

IN MEMORIAM

David Elliott Jackson, '67, died during July of 1968. He was a student at Brandon University, Brandon, Man., at the time of his illness.
