New Buildings Change UND Campus Skyline

WORK ON THE $1.1 million classroom building which will join Harrington Hall and Upson Hall is scheduled to begin in April as Phase II of the Upson Engineering Complex. Approval of the $1,127,000 project was given by the State Board of Higher Education and contracts awarded at their January meeting. Two floors of Upson II will house the UND computer center, presently located in Twamley Hall. The building was designed by Foss, Engelstad and Foss of Fargo and completion is anticipated by the fall of 1974.

Construction To Start On Upson II

An $11 million building program is underway at UND, with a large portion of the projects financed by non-state funds, including private gifts, grants and self-liquidating bonds. The state's share of the expense is estimated at about 20 percent of the overall cost.

"These buildings are important to the operation of the University," said President Thomas J. Clifford. "They will help us in our efforts to meet the space need created by the growth in students and programs that has taken place in the last decade."

The $4.1 million Medical Center Rehab hospital is scheduled for December, 1973, completion and will be the first building on the proposed 80-acre Grand Forks medical health complex south of the campus. It will have 88 beds, and is financed by the sale of $2.4 million of self-liquidating bonds, along with sale of the present facility for $750,000 and funds from hospital reserves and federal grants.

State funds are financing the $1 million addition to the 50-year old Law School building, which will be completed by next September. The addition will include more than 25,000 square feet, and provide study space for 150 students. It will be named in honor of Olaf H. Thormodsgard, who retired in 1962 after serving as law school dean for nearly half of its existence.

It is expected that construction of the Edmond A. Hughes Fine Arts Center will start in 1973. The $2.7 million structure will provide 80,000 square feet for UND's new College of Fine Arts. Financing comes from the estate of the late Edmond Hughes of Bismarck.

Crowd Packs Sports Center For Dedication Game

The dedication of the UND Winter Sports Center was described as a "landmark in University history" by L. R. Marti, athletic director and master of ceremonies at the January event.

The Sioux and Minnesota Gophers battled to a 2-2 tie, after the Sioux had won by 6-3 the previous night. A crowd of 5,500 jammed the new building, while the dedication and game were carried throughout North Dakota by television.

Other speakers were UND President Thomas J. Clifford, President Emeritus George W. Starcher, Allen Hausauer of Wahpeton, J. Lloyd Stone, Bill DiBrito, UND student body president, and John Noah, first UND All American hockey star.

Special recognition was given to Al Purpur, assistant foreman for the athletic department and long-time icetender for the hockey team. Stone spoke for Weston Christopherson, Alumni Association president, and brought greetings from Jack Stewart of Scottsdale, Ariz., who donated $90,000 toward the construction costs.

Approximately 1,500 persons, firms and organizations contributed money for the building, which was financed through the sale of student bonds, the Hughes' estate, local fund drives and alumni contributions.

PLAN SYMPOSIUM

Concepts and implementation of reclamation research is one of the topics on the agenda of the 1973 Lignite Symposium on May 9-10 at UND. More than 350 attended the 1971 session.

Job Market Brightens

The employment picture for graduating seniors from UND continues to improve in North Dakota and throughout the nation, ending a slump that began at the start of the 1970's.

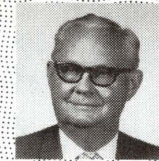

Ron Betts, UND placement director, states that there is a 20 percent increase in the number of companies who are making on-campus recruiting visits this spring, and considers this a good barometer of a better job market.

Last year 104 firms came to the campus for interviews with UND seniors. About 80 percent of the registrants indicated that they would prefer jobs within North Dakota, if positions were available.

REPORT from the CAMPUS

By J. LLOYD STONE

Last fall the Alumni Office received a delightful letter from Karleen Home Rosaaen, class of 1927, who resides at Tucson, Ariz. She had been visiting with old friends from North Dakota, recalling the days of the homesteaders, when families lived "close to the margin," for whose children going to college was only a dream, no matter how gifted they were.

Although Mrs. Rosaaen hasn't lived in North Dakota since 1927, she wonders how things have changed. She writes: "The Alumni News tells of football teams, hockey successes, changes in professorships, fine new buildings, board of directors meetings, etc., but it doesn't tell us of the boy and girl in school."

This is truly an on-target statement, as the Alumni Review is primarily involved with reporting alumni activities, physical changes on the campus, and academic goals and progress. Space does not permit a great deal of reporting on student activities, although these are represented in the "Dakota Student" campus newspaper and the "Parents Newsletter," which is published four times a year and circulated to parents of students enrolled at UND.

Who are the young men and women at UND?

Well, there are approximately 8,000 students attending UND, and the enrollment seems to have leveled momentarily at that mark.

A recent study indicated that about 80 percent of the students were from North Dakota, with a substantial number from Minnesota and Canada, our good neighbors.

Coeds were in the minority, with 60 percent of the enrollment being male.

A pleasant statistic is that more than 40 percent of the freshmen ranked in the top fourth of their high school classes. The University accepted about 95 percent of the students who applied.

The top enrollments were in the University College, Arts and Sciences, Graduate School, Business and Education, Engineering, Law, Medicine and Nursing all had individual enrollments of less than 5 percent of the total.

The profile indicated that the top two religious preferences listed were Lutheran and Catholic. About 20 percent were members of social sororities or fraternities, with 80 percent having no Greek affiliation.

More than 2,000 were married, with 1,000 living in campus family housing, the other 1,000 residing off campus. There were about 3,000 students in residence halls, about 1,200 living at their homes in Grand Forks, and more than 1,500 renting in Grand Forks.

About 250 commuted daily from the Grand Forks Air Force Base and other nearby communities.

More than 40 percent of the students were in the 21-23 age bracket, followed by 31 percent in the 18-20 year range. Seventy-five percent of the students were single.

Perhaps it will surprise some to learn that about 60 percent of the University students have part-time jobs during the school year. Considering all summer employment, the figure jumps to the 90 percent range. There are three areas of part-time student employment: college work-study, institutional employment and off-campus work, all directed by the Student Financial Aids Office.

Dr. Gerald F. Hamerlik, director of Student Financial Aids at UND, says that college work-study includes full-time summer work and employment of not more than 15 hours a week during the school year on campus and at non-profit organizations in Grand Forks. College work-study is financed by the Federal government (80 percent) and institutional supports (20 percent) and is based on financial need.

Although work-study is available to all students who need to work to attend school, preference is given to those from low income families, or with no families. The pay depends on the nature of the work and individual qualifications, but a student can expect to earn $500 to $700 for an academic year.

Figures on off-campus jobs are difficult to enumerate, as many students obtain work on their own. They average about $1.65 per hour, working 15 to 20 hours a week off-campus. And, the jobs are of a wide variety: lab assistants, mowing lawns, car rental clerks, nurse's aides, salesmen, waitresses, clerical, ad infinitum.

If a student has a low grade average, it is recommended that he improve his grades before taking employment.

What is the young man or woman student at UND like in 1973?

You'd have to return to the campus to see for yourself. We think that you'll be proud to visit with these young women and men, who are here for one basic purpose: to obtain an education.

The campus of 1973 has changed, and will continue to do so. The more than 470 acres with more than $50 million in buildings, equipment and grounds are tangible evidence of a growing University, providing the best possible facilities and faculty.

But, the students of 1973 haven't changed. They may be wearing longer hair styles and their clothing may be more casual, but the young men and women are not much different than their parents or grandparents of past decades.

Perhaps they do have a greater opportunity to obtain a college education, because times have changed; there are more sources of help for those needy students than were available in yesteryears.

And part of this increased opportunity for today's young girl and boy is made possible by the generosity of loyal alumni and friends of higher education. Contributions to the UND Development Fund have provided scholarships over the past 25 years that have helped many students at UND.

But, the need for more help still exists, as the cost of an education increases right along with all other living costs. That is why the UND Development Fund asks for private support in aiding the University beyond the limitations of budgeted state support.

Mrs. Rosaaen, I'm glad you wrote us and asked about the young men and women students at UND, and that we could devote this column as an updated report. As you wrote in your letter, "it might help where help is needed."

OBSERVES BIRTHDAY

UND observed its 90th birthday on February 27 with the traditional Founders Day program, with Earl Strinden, assistant alumni director, as chairman of the planning committee.

WE ARE SORRY

Through oversight, the name of LeRoy M. Hausauer, '42, was not included in the list of former University students and graduates who are serving in the North Dakota legislature.

ALUMNI REVIEW

University of North Dakota

The University of North Dakota Alumni Review is published monthly except February and July, by the University of North Dakota, Grand Forks, N.D. 58201, for alumni and former students of the University of North Dakota in the interests of the University. Second-class postage paid at Grand Forks, N.D. 58201. Address correction forms should be sent to the University of North Dakota Alumni Review, Grand Forks, N.D. 58201.

addition will begin this spring with completion in 1974. The $1.1 million building is named for Maxwell M. Upson, late UND alumnus who established the Upson Foundation, which financed $400,000 of the original Upson building and $320,000 of Upson II. Other monies for Upson II include $440,000 of state appropriations, $300,000 from the Hughes estate and $60,000 in pledges and gifts from the UND engineering alumni.

State funds amounting to $750,000 are requested from the state legislature to partially finance a proposed new nursing building, with matching funds to be asked from the federal government.

April, 1973, will see the completion of West Green Nine, a $900,000 student housing complex financed through self-liquidating bonds. A $230,000 addition to the UND power plant has been completed, financed through state funds.

Construction is scheduled to begin this spring on a central food services building and central maintenance headquarters, with completion in February of 1974. HUD funds have been reserved to allow UND to finance, with self-liquidating bonds, the $400,000 food services building, while the $450,000 maintenance building is financed by state funds.

Nathan "Nate" Cummings, '58, has been honored by the community of Oakes, N.D., where an athletic field has been named "Cummings Field" in his honor. A long-time coach and sports enthusiast, Cummings went to Oakes in 1929, and was coach of football and basketball for more than 20 years; in 1970 he retired as superintendent of the Oakes schools.

Thomas W. Sullivan, '56, is president of a newly created firm in Tucson, Ariz., which deals in title insurance, trusts, real estate escrow and collection.

Dr. Paul Cook, '35, writes from his home at Santa Maria, Calif., where he won a golf tournament with the year 1972 engraved on the trophy; it is placed next to one that has the year 1927 on it. Dr. Cook is a Sioux Award Winner, and a former N.D. State Golf Champion.

William S. Connole, '50, heads a surveying and engineering firm in Homestead, Fla., and invites post-war alumni to visit when they are in the Miami area.

J. R. McLaurin, '52, is practicing optometry at Harvey,

N.D., where he has resided the past 17 years.

Dr. Donald McIntyre, '57, has joined the staff of the Johnson Clinic at Leeds, N.D. He recently completed training at Mayo Graduate School; he was in general practice with the Johnson Clinic from 1961 to 1969.

William L. McGinley, '53, has been promoted to regional sales manager with the Meridian Mutual Insurance Co.; he and his wife, the former Phyllis Henry, ex '52, have four children and make their home at Dayton, Ohio.

Gail R. Sizemore Light, '66, is the public information specialist at the Michigan Office of Criminal Justice Programs in Lansing.

Rosalie Joy Duncklee, '67, is a registered nurse at the VA Hospital in Dayton, Ohio.

Charles A. Johnson, '39, has retired after 30 years as a member of the faculty of Dickinson State College. A native of Cavalier County, he had the longest length of service to the college of any of the current members of the DSC staff.

Approximately 25 UND alumni gathered at Ojai,

5 Selected To Receive Sioux Awards

Five outstanding individuals have been selected by the Citations Committee of the UND Alumni Association to receive Sioux Awards during May on the University Campus.

Awards will be presented to Soren Kolstoe and Valborg Oslund on May 11 at the Commencement Luncheon following the Alumni Board of Directors meeting, while Lyla Hoffine, Herb Jeffrey, and Lillian Witmer were chosen to receive the honor at the Alumni Days Banquet May 24.

Further details on the Sioux Award winners will be carried in the next two issues of the Alumni Review.

Calif., in July to participate in a golfing week-end as guests of Carl and Esther Samuelson, ex '30. IN MEMORIAM

Jack Stewart, ex '29, long-time benefactor and close friend of the University of North Dakota, died February 8, 1973, in Phoenix, Ariz., where he had been ill since last fall. Mr. Stewart was born near Grafton, where he was an outstanding athlete. After starting college at South Dakota State, he transferred in 1923 to UND, where he was a member of Beta Theta Pi fraternity.

Mr. Stewart was the first sports publicist for UND as a student, was credited with organizing the first regular baseball team. He was instrumental in spearheading the campaign for funds to build the UND Memorial Football Stadium.

Camelback Inn, the scene of many UND alumni winter reunions, was created under his development at Scottsdale, Ariz., and Mr. Stewart was host to many returning alumni.

In 1967 he gave $100,000 to the UND Development Fund, with the bulk eventually used for construction of the new Winter Sports Center. Parts of the gift were used to build new press facilities at the Stadium and the Fieldhouse.

A current member of the UND Alumni Board of Directors, Mr. Stewart was presented the Sioux Award in 1963; in 1971, he was elected to the North Central Conference Hall of Fame.

Mr. Stewart sold his Camelback Inn properties a few years ago and had been residing at his home in Scottsdale during the winter and at his LaJolla, Calif., home during the summer.

In 1972, Mr. Stewart was named the "Outstanding Citizen of 1972" by the Scottsdale Real Estate Board, in recognition of his efforts in developing that area, as well as all of Arizona. It was he who was credited with garnering the Fiesta Bowl for the Phoenix area.
