Conference To Explore Lignite Use

A conference about one of North Dakota's most current issues will bring 200 persons to the UND campus on November 8-9 to explore how the utilization of lignite to provide fuel for the nation will affect the state's land use, economic development and population patterns.

Invitations have been sent to legislators, county commissioners, news media representatives, scholars from the humanities, fuel industry leaders and coal technology experts.

The program format involves presentations by 18 speakers in the two-days of sessions, followed by response panels and discussion groups.

The conference will be opened by Gov. Arthur Link and is sponsored by the UND Engineering Experiment Station, the UND Division of Continuing Education and the North Dakota Committee for the Humanities and Public Issues. The project is supported in part by a $11,600 grant from the North Dakota Committee for Humanities and Public Issues, an agency of the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Alan G. Flecher, dean of the UND College of Engineering, stated that "the conference is based on the premise that the humanities can join the sciences, business and government in contributing to an understanding of this public policy concern of major implication to North Dakotans."

North Dakota's lignite reserves represent nearly one-fourth of the nation's total coal reserves. In recent months, the state has been experiencing a "land lease rush" with large interests seeking rights to land and water so that lignite could be converted to electrical energy, pipeline gas, crude oil and other valuable products.

New Scholarship Provided

$10,000 SCHOLARSHIP ENDOWMENT ESTABLISHED: Mary Elizabeth Hetherington, a 1926 graduate from UND, has provided a $10,000 scholarship endowment for the College of Fine Arts in a deferred gift to the UND Development Fund. Known as the Alpha Phi Pi Chapter of Alpha Chi Omega Scholarship, the merit awards will be given each semester thru the UND Alumni Association in consultation with the Fine Arts College dean. Now a resident of Saginaw, Mich., Miss Hetherington is a native of St. Thomas and has had a teaching career in journalism. Presenting the gift above is Miss Hetherington, flanked by (left) Dean John Rogers of the College of Fine Arts and (right) Earl Strinden, alumni director.

UND Aviation Department Is Unique in Nation

The University of North Dakota is unique in many ways, including an aviation department in the College of Business and Public Administration that is the only one of its kind in the nation.

John D. Odegard, chairman of the department, has noted a remarkable growth in the past six years with 550 students registered for aviation courses, 170 of them as majors.

For students interested in the business aspect of the aerospace field, the department offers a series of courses with an applicable aviation sequence to familiarize the students with the industry at all levels.

Other programs feature airline industry speakers who teach airline management. All graduates of the UND Aviation Department are equipped with a private pilot license and a commercial pilot license with an instrument rating as part of the required training.

Odegard indicated that the excellent quality of students in the program is reflected by the large number of job offers from the aviation industry. Job offers were running about four to one more than the number of graduates last year.

The department utilizes 26 airplanes in the flight school at the Grand Forks International Airport, with ground training facilities helping stu-

U Medical Program Moves Ahead

Another major step in the efforts to develop a degree-granting medical program in North Dakota was taken on October 17 when contracts with two Minnesota medical schools were given final approval by a committee of the North Dakota Legislative Council.

The Medical Education and Government Administration Committee voted unanimous approval of contracts between UND and Minnesota schools to provide one year of training for North Dakota medical students.

Thirty-five students will spend their third year at the University of Minnesota while five students will pursue a similar course at the Mayo Medical School in Rochester. All will return to North Dakota to complete medical degree work.

North Dakota will pay the University of Minnesota $11,500 per student, while $11,600 will be paid for each student at Mayo.

Dr. John Vennes of the UND Medical School stated that the contracts are part of a plan that includes medical training at four area health education centers and residency programs at North Dakota hospitals and clinics.

The contracts had been previously approved by the State Board of Higher Education and the program will be implemented next year. A provision of the contracts is that the Minnesota schools will not accept any of the UND students they train as transfers for their own fourth-year programs. This assures the return of the medical students to North Dakota for completion of training, hopefully to remain in the state after receiving their M.D. degrees. In

REPORT from the CAMPUS

By J. LLOYD STONE

Homecoming/73 is history. And if I were to go back and read other year's post-Homecoming columns I have written, I suspect that I would find statements like "the best ever," "beats them all," etc.

Yet Homecoming/73 was the greatest in many ways.

The Sioux won the football game over South Dakota State, but not many fans left the stadium until the final gun, as it was a close and exciting game and the outcome was in doubt until the fourth quarter.

There was an excellent turnout at all the events. There were 529 alumni and friends at the Thormodsgard Law Library Dedication Luncheon to hear the address of Tom Clark, retired U.S. Supreme Court justice.

The attorneys of this area, and from many other parts of the nation, were well represented and 180 registered for the Continuing Legal Education Seminar.

At the dedication of the Olaf H. Thormodsgard Law Library, Tom Clark remarked, "The library is a living symbol of not only Dean Thormodsgard, but of those who study here and of those who come to study."

Arley Bjella, who represented the Dean, received the following message from Dean Thormodsgard: "On October 12 you will be dedicating the Law Library. I am happy and thrilled to know that this beautiful building carries my name. My years at the University were the happiest and most productive of my life; the students and other friends with whom I associated are still close to me in memory. To all of you who remember me from days gone by, my good wishes; to all my students who made life so happy for me, my love. To all of you, God's blessing and sincere thanks and appreciation from Marie and me."

A complete account of the day, including pictures, newspaper clippings and tape recordings has been sent to "Thormy," who was unable to attend the ceremony; he lives with his wife in retirement in Bordeaux, France.

The dedication ceremony was held in the Joe and Wilma Baker Moot Court Room, another part of the Law School renovation; the furnishings were provided by a gift of $22,000 from the Bakers, who reside in Alexandria, Va.

Grace and I were honored by the Bakers, who presented a plaque to us which contains the names of all Alumni Board members who served the Association during the past 25 years. The plaque is now on display in the Alumni Office, and you are invited to view it on your next visit!

We had an excellent turnout for the fall meeting of the Alumni Board of Directors, with members returning to campus from far-away points in Montana, Michigan, Illinois, Virginia, Wyoming and California, as well as from Minnesota and North Dakota.

During the meeting a certified public accounting firm presented the annual audit report of the Alumni Association financial records, and several other important business matters were also on the agenda. You can be very proud of the capable business executives who serve on the Alumni Board.

One of our outstanding Alumni Board members is Thomas C. Barger, former president of Aramco, the Arabian American Oil Co.

Tom returned to the campus for the Board session and Homecoming. He is presently serving as a consultant for the National Estimates Board; he makes his home in Southern California.

He made many interesting observations about the energy crisis and the role being played by Arabia and the Middle East nations, and was quoted in a series of interviews in the Grand Forks Herald.

The Sioux Awards banquet drew a large audience which enjoyed the presentations. Besides the Sioux Awards, there were faculty awards given to David Beach, director of KF-JM, and Jerome Tweton, chairman of the history department.

There were more than the usual number of anniversary reunions at fraternities and sororities. The Advisory Committee of 120 spent a hard-working day, and we appreciate their interest and loyalty to UND.

The Saturday night All Alumni party again proved to be a popular meeting place, with an estimated 800 alumni and friends attending.

The weatherman cooperated by providing very pleasant, sunny, North Dakota fall weather for Homecoming/73; in fact, this has been one of the better weather years for agriculture in North Dakota, and the economy looks very bright.

Even though football was the highlight of the Homecoming/73 sports calendar, there was an added attraction for hockey fans who wanted to view the new Winter Sports Center. The Sioux and Minnesota-Duluth Bulldogs held four scrimmages on the UND ice for hockey team candidates, which provided another enjoyable part of the Homecoming agenda.

Homecoming/73 will hold one sad memory for me. We learned that Bob Eddy died that week-end in Mesa, Ariz., where he had a retirement home.

Bob was one of the greats on the UND Alumni Board, serving so ably as president and doing so much for his Alma Mater. The complete story of all his contributions to the University of North Dakota may never be fully related.

He was a man who stood tall—for his University, for his state, and for his nation. We will miss him so very much.

In late October Joy Rohde joined Grace and me for a trip to Colorado where we attended Winnie Pau's wedding. A native of Hong Kong, Winnie made many friends while she attended UND. After completing her education, she became a stewardess.

From Colorado we drove to Phoenix to spend some time with Louise Stewart, who shared a great love for UND with her late husband Jack.

The fall season is moving so briskly that we will soon find the curtain dropping on the year of 1973. It will certainly be a busy time—on the campus and wherever UND alumni and friends are.

If your travels bring you back to Grand Forks this fall, the Alumni Office welcomes your visit.

INDIAN STUDY GRANTS

Sixteen American Indians have been awarded fellowships for specialized graduate study in educational administration at UND. Funded through the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, the year-long project is one of 23 in the nation designed to develop future school administrators.

BAKER MOOT COURT ROOM: Wilma and Joe Baker of Virginia (center) gave $22,000 to furnish a moot court room in the former Law School Library. Expressing appreciation are (left) UND President Thomas J. Clifford and (right) Robert K. Rushing, UND School of Law Dean.

NEW LAW SCHOOL LIBRARY: dedicated at the UND Homecoming/73 was this addition to the Law School building; the library has a unique zig-zag pattern north wall, with windows for natural light creating an appearance of openness. The library has room for 141,000 volumes and currently contains 70,000 volumes.

INTERESTED IN A SPRING TOUR?

Plans have been formulated for a UND Alumni-sponsored special "Round the World" tour in March, 1974, and indications are that is filling fast.

For the past 12 years the Alumni Association has planned and sponsored tours for UND alumni and friends, and the excursions have proven very popular.

Alumni interested in details on the 30-day Round the World tour should contact the UND Alumni Office, P.O. Box 8157, University Station, Grand Forks, ND 58201.

dents prepare for the job market in aviation.

There are three full-time faculty members, approximately seven part-time faculty and nearly 40 other employees involved in maintaining aircraft and staffing flight operations at the airport.

The air traffic control course is also showing rapid growth, training students for a career as air traffic controllers. Another course now being readied is in the area of training pilots to control such weather conditions as hail suppression, rain cloud seeding and thunderstorm flying.

Odegard was graduated from UND in 1966 and received his master's degree in 1967. Last June, he was appointed to the Aeronautical Commission by North Dakota Gov. Arthur Link.

A past president of the University Aviation Association and a member of the national board, Odegard was honored last summer with the William A. Wheatley award for outstanding contributions to aerospace education.

Sioux Hockey Team to Play at Bismarck

Alumni and sports fans in the Bismarck area will have a WHA college hockey game as a highlight for a November 24 reunion in that city.

The UND Sioux meet the Michigan Tech Huskies in the Bismarck Civic Auditorium at 8 p.m., enabling alumni and fans to see the Sioux play a home game away from the campus.

Chairman of the Capitol City reunion is Evan Lips, former Alumni Board president. The reunion will be held at the Holiday Inn starting with a pre-game social hour at 5 p.m. and followed by a buffet at 6 p.m.

Tickets for the hockey game can be secured by contacting the Bismarck Civic Center, P.O. Box 1075, Bismarck, ND 58501. Reserved seats are $3.50 with non-reserved seats priced at 50¢ for children and $1.25 for high school students.

ARCHAEOLOGICAL FIND

An archaeological expedition from UND excavated a group of ancient tepee rings west of Harvey, N.D., during the summer of 1973 and concluded that Indians predating current tribes probably occupied that site about 1100 A.D. Frederick E. Schneider, assistant professor of anthropology at UND, established the occupation date on the basis of styles of artifacts, chiefly arrowheads.

ART EXHIBITS SLATED

The works of young professional artists from the Dakotas will be on display at the UND Art Gallery from November 6 to 30. The artists are between the ages of 18 and 30.

SCHOLARSHIP DEADLINE

December 1 is the deadline for high school seniors to apply for U.S. Army Reserve Officer Training Corps college scholarships at UND. Nine students are currently attending the University on Army ROTC scholarships.

CONSTRUCTION RESUMES

Construction of transmission facilities on KGFE, Channel 2, a Grand Forks educational TV station, has been resumed after a compromise was worked out on overlapping transmission problems with a Canadian television station. KGFE is expected to begin broadcasting early in 1974 and will operate from an existing studio on the UND campus. It will tie in with KFME-TV, a Fargo educational television station, and provide potential coverage of 42 percent of North Dakota's population.

STUDY ABROAD

More than 70 UND students studied abroad this summer in a program sponsored by the University, spending approximately five weeks in Europe in several countries.

ENROLLMENT INCREASES

Fall semester enrollment at the UND-Williston Center is 585, an increase of 96 over the total of a year ago. The UND Grand Forks campus enrollment is 8,274, a decrease of eight from the total one year ago.

DEPARTMENT PROPOSED

The UND Senate has approved a proposal that would establish a Department of Anthropology and Archaeology at the University. It would be the only one of its kind in North Dakota, and reflects the growth in anthropology majors from 17 in 1971 to 41 in 1973, with about 1,000 students enrolled at UND in 16 anthropology courses.

INSTITUTE GETS AWARD

The Summer Institute of Linguistics, Inc., which has held 22 annual sessions at UND, has received the Ramon Magsaysay Foundation's Award for International Understanding. The Institute, which conducts courses at UND and four other campuses in the U.S., prepares students to convert the spoken languages of preliterate people into writing. More than 100 students attended the 1973 UND Summer Institute, which was directed by Dr. John Daly of Mitla, Mexico.

RECEIVES MEDAL

Edward J. Franta, '27, was presented with the University of North Dakota President's Medal on October 2, 1973, by President Thomas Clifford. The medal is the highest award that the UND president can confer on his own authority. Franta served on the UND Alumni Board for nine years, was a long-time editor of the Cavalier County Republican, and has been very active on a state level in a number of leadership roles. He received the Sioux Award in 1970.
