PREFACE

One of the major purposes of the Work Papers has been to present in easily accessible form language texts which have been collected by the second year students at SILND. In the present corpus, these texts form the major portion of the volume. It includes texts from Tagalog, Ilocano, Vietnamese, and Tewa. Of course, these texts reflect the varying abilities of the students who recorded them.

The second part which contains several miscellaneous items may interest the reader as well. There are two items about filing language data, a synopsis of the Wonderly, Gibson, Kirk article on Kiowa, and two short pieces on Hebrew.

One who reads this volume must remember that it is not a publication but merely the presentation of preliminary work sheets.

We, the editors, hope that there will be those who find the language texts useful for linguistic analysis.
