SUMMER SESSION

UNIVERSITY OF NORTH DAKOTA, GRAND FORKS, N. DAK. — FRIDAY, AUGUST 4, 1967

NO. 7

This tree was felled by 40 mile an hour winds which lashed the campus late Friday afternoon. The 20 minute storm dumped .46 inch of rain. The storm moved in quickly—drenching walkers and pouring water through open car windows. Damage was minor.

Women Lack 'Stick-to-it' So Quit UND Flying Club

"Females don't have as much stick-to-it-iveness" according to Donald Johnston, president of the UND Flying Club. The object is to earn a private license but "a lot of them just want to try it, then loose interest after their first solo flight."

At the moment, there are seven girls working on their licenses, under the instruction of three members of the Club.

The total membership, 120 persons, flies a total of 3,500 hours in a year. The Club owns four aircraft and is planning the purchase of another in the Fall.

Johnston considers the club "very active" during the summer months. Not only are there instructions for students, but many of the members fly to vacation spots. So far this summer, various members have flown to Florida, Oklahoma, Kansas, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Las Vegas and "just about every place" stated Johnston.

Although no will say that learning to fly is cheap, a student taking instructions through the flying club could do so for less than half the cost of learning through a commercial establishment. Also, there is a loan program available to any student by which he can borrow $500 and pay it back at the rate of $27.50 per month.

Membership is rising. Since Johnston joined the club three years ago, the membership has more than doubled. Any student, faculty member, or their families is eligible to join. At present, there is a plan underway to make wives of flying club members associates. Under this rule, the wives would not be charged the initial membership fee.

On an overall basis, the club is geared to instruct the student who knows absolutely nothing about flying right up to his private license.

U Men Seem Satisfied With Draft Deferment

Opinions Vary From 'Call Reserves' to 'End Draft'

UND men seem to be very satisfied with the recent change in draft deferment qualifications.

Richard Harper was of the feelings of many students, "A student should be deferred no matter how far along he is in his education."

Another student was of the opinion that "If you're capable enough to get into college, you should be allowed to finish. I think they should draft non-students first—like high school drop-outs who are just hanging around the street corners."

A student who prefers to remain anonymous viewed the problem from another angle: "I think the reserves should be called out. The people who graduate from high school and don't go on to college beat the draft by joining the reserves. This is inconvenient for the college students. All the pressure of the draft is on the college student and I think this is unfair."

Bob Brooks stated that he "found it hard to understand how the selective service could use higher standards for deferment than colleges set for staying in school."

Duane Radebaugh favored the new draft legislation because "a student doesn't have to worry as much about being drafted. The college scholastic requirements are usually high enough to eliminate students who shouldn't be in college."

However, there are those who still criticize the legislation and deferment requirements. John Brandon believes that "the new draft legislation may allow a more liberal interpretation of a student's standing in college but the fact remains, the present draft laws still discriminate against those incapable of attending college, either by lack of finances or by poor high school grades. It also discriminates against those who wish not to choose college and the present students who may want to drop out of school for one semester for various reasons (travel, work etc.). I'm in favor of the lottery proposal by Senator Ted Kennedy. I feel deferments should only be given to graduate students."

And then there are those who criticize the draft legislation from the other extreme. One student stated "Deferments aren't necessary—I'm in favor of ending the draft and going into an all volunteer army."

Rate Will Increase in Fall

ID Applications Below GF Police Expectations

A month ago Grand Forks identification cards were introduced by the city police department. Since that time about 50 cards have been issued—a number below police expectation, according to Lt. Brown in charge of identification.

"We hoped to have issued more cards by now," Brown said, "but, application rates are slow because it's summer. We expect it to pick up this fall when school starts."

The I.D. cards are a joint endeavor by the police and the Liquor Dealers' Association to eliminate the use of false I.D. cards presented in bars. The cards are not issued exclusively for drinking, however. Police reported numerous complaints from people whose personal identification was not accepted for check cashing.

"Too many young people from town and from the base are using false I.D.'s," Brown said. "The new cards are thorough enough so that it will be nearly impossible to falsify information on them."

Application blanks for the cards are available at any bar in the city and the police station.

There has been no official ruling requiring the cards for admittance to bars, as yet, but it is expected that when school starts this fall the cards will be required by most bar owners, Brown said.

One bar owner is already refusing service to young people whose identification looks questionable and who do not have the city I.D.'s. He plans to require the new cards from all customers this fall.

As bar owners may require any type of identification they wish, it is probable that the cards will be asked for frequently when the college set returns.

Overflow Crowds Force 'Barefoot' Holdover

More than 1,000 persons attended the three presentations of "Barefoot in the Park" July 27-29. The success of the play has prompted the University Theatre to hold a special performance tonight at 8:15 in Burtneis Theatre.

"It was so well received we decided to run it one more time," said Dr. Donald McCaffrey, director of the University Theatre summer production.

The Broadway hit concerns the trials of a newlywed couple who has moved into a high-rent defective apartment surrounded by unusual neighbors.

Michael Patterson and Judith Heffron, as the young married couple, head a cast of six.

Dr. McCaffrey termed the play "a work of pure enjoyment."

English Coulee is at its lowest point in several years according to long-time campus observers. Water is eight inches below spill level on the dam behind Smith Hall. Since early June, no water has flown over the dam. The stagnant coulee overgrown with algae, has provided a breeding ground for mosquitoes in the past. Last year, university and city health authorities debated the health hazard posed by the coulee. The consensus: no hazard. This picture looks into the face of the Smith Hall dam.

The Sioux will hold daily practice sessions in preparation for their opening game on Sept. 9, at Flagstaff, Ariz., against Northern Arizona University.

The team will play five home games this year with the first three holding the spotlight as far as having a special significance to local and area fans.

On Sept. 16, the 2nd annual Potato Bowl will be held. The event will feature a parade, potato sack races, and a variety of other events, with the big bowl game that afternoon.

The Kem Temple Shrine game will take place on Sept. 23, and the UND Homecoming game will be played on Oct. 14, with the Sioux playing South Dakota University.

The 1966 Sioux team competed in NCC sponsored Pecan Bowl in Abilene, Texas and defeated Parsons college 42-24.

At Poetry Reading

English Department Comes of Age

GUEST COMMENT

By P. D. PIMM

The English Department came of age Wednesday night. In Merrifield 121, between 8 and 10, a poem was read and discussed.

Bernard O'Kelly, English Professor, scholar, and gentleman whose cover, at the moment, is the Deanship of the College of Arts and Sciences, read the poem.

Theodore Messenger, poet, scholar, and dialectician (and a gentleman, too), whose cover as a philosophy professor was blown only Wednesday night, wrote the poem.

It is an excellent poem, and it is entitled "Alexander of Ephesus."

Perhaps for the first time in Merrifield students and faculty met on equal terms. Some students sat in chairs, some faculty sat (groaning) on the floor.

Discussion commenced after Dean O'Kelly's able reading. Professor Henry Lee, representing the Academic approach, led off by stating the Speech Department's position on oral interpretation.

Professor John Hancock, to no one's surprise, disagreed with that position. An irrelevant debate followed until the Rev. Jay Hanson, with an almost religious fervor, suggested a return to the matter at hand.

Prof. Messenger, with a sigh of gratitude, then proceeded to explicate the poem, proving that to understand a poem nothing beats having the poet alive to do it.

Prof. William Borden objected to one crucial step in the exegesis, and Dean O'Kelly attempted a variant reading of the first line, but Messenger, backed by the inimitable erudition of Prof. Richard Hale, drove off the attackers.

Mrs. O'Kelly, a charming wife, mother, and law student, whose cover as a Dean's wife still seems secure, was also present. And so were Prof. Ralph Kolstoe and Prof. Benjamin Ring, and 20 students.

All in all it was an evening to remember, the night lions lay down with sheep, and talked poetry and of poetry, not around and about it.

The event will be broadcast Sunday afternoon on KFJM 1370. Take your transistor to the pool.

$188,010 Grant Finances Health Care Study

A $188,010 federal grant has been approved to carry out a study aimed at providing the people in North Dakota and the surrounding region with the best medical care possible. The announcement of the grant was made Monday through the Fargo office of Rep. Mark Andrews (R-N.D.).

The study will be conducted by the North Dakota Medical Research Foundation, an organization of the North Dakota State Medical Societies. Investigation will be made of presently existing medical care facilities, equipment, personnel, patient referral patterns and methods of making desirable improvements and expansion in those areas.

UND will be the fiscal agent and Dr. T. H. Harwood, dean of the UND Medical School, will be coordinator for the program. The grant covers a one-year period.

"The plan aims at taking every step we can to make sure everyone in the state and regions get the best medical care possible," said Dr. Harwood. He also stated that the grant will provide the means with which to do a job that has been needed for some time.

Zinke Receives First Ohio Scholarship

The first assistantship to be awarded in a new program at Ohio State University has been accepted by Ronald D. Zinke, a senior at UND. The assistantship will lead to a master's degree in communications.

The grant covers full payment of tuition, costs and books for four academic quarters plus practical work experience at a television station in Columbus.

Zinke, a major in speech-radio-television-journalism, is a candidate for a Ph.D. degree at the August 12 commencement.

Dean Bernard O'Kelly (Arts & Sciences) announced the award saying that the assistantship given Zinke is the only one being offered by Ohio State University for 1967-68. "The program is a new one, and it is hoped in Columbus that there will be 10 such assistantships the following year."

While at UND, Zinke was a television assistant with KFJM. He is currently employed by KTHI-TV as a director.

Zinke has worked for radio stations in Wahpeton and Grafton. In 1960 he received a certificate in broadcasting from the Brown Institute in Minneapolis.

Revolting? Here's Cause

By DAN DANIELSON

A bookstore is a bookstore is a bookstore.

I think that means a bookstore is a bookstore.

To tell the truth, I have never been able to figure out whatin theworld people are trying to say when they say things like that.

A rose is a rose is a rose. Yeah.

I figured out it was a rose on the second word.

But I fear I digress. I was talking about the bookstore.

Fellow proletarian students, it is time for the Revolution.

Too long we have watched the capitalist money-mongering imperialists drain our supply of student money.

Too long we have searched in vain for what we sought and found it not there.

Too long we have been slaves to the aristocratic system of hours that they use.

Face it. The only things they really have well stocked are cigarettes. And '69' sweatshirts. And notebook paper and magazines.

I suggest that the students rise and boycott the bookstore for nine months.

This would have its consequences:

(1) The 10% profit would become dire debt.

(2) No one would have books for any courses and the whole student body would flunk all courses (except for those few bourgeois who have old tests) which in turn would cause the entire student body grade point average to drop which in turn would cause the administration to lower required level of grades to get loans, which would mean everybody would get their fingers in that free Federal money. Maybe.

I'm really disappointed in you people.

At the beginning of this summer I listed about a thousand fun things to do.

So what do I learn? * tranquilizer consumption rate is up 3.2 per cent over this time three months ago.

* after checking with the cops, I discover that absolutely no one has even been scribbling on the sewer system walls, much less mapping the things.

* no one has seen those ridiculous movies except the 7,286 nuns. I admire their courage, but hardly their taste.

* the bus depot reports a drop in pay toilet profits, some of which may be the result of a new college sport known as limbo.

We've got a week left. So get out there and try, one more time.

Don't make me feel worthless.

And when Pope John sits in dazzling red and orange in the Center Lounge, I wonder.

Who had the nerve? Painting the Pope in red! That's like painting Reverend Mohammed All in white.

What I really wonder, though, is where they're going to put the rest of the religious leaders of the world.

And who is going to issue apologies to Billy Graham and M. L. King when they don't get in?

Anderson Art Reflects Forlorn Dakota Scene

By BILL HUGGINS

The Dakota Landscape—a rather forlorn-looking art display depicting North Dakota, is now hanging in the Chester Fritz Gallery.

Russ Anderson, in partial fulfillment of a master of arts degree, has on display a number of drawings, watercolors, and oil paintings that depict his impression of the state.

The impression I got from his works was one of dislike and distaste for North Dakota. Perhaps Mr. Anderson is not a native; even many natives dislike the state!

The best part of the exhibition is the oil paintings. He used the oils to represent "Bena's Home"—and did an excellent job. He used realism along with a dash of impressionism to portray the feeling of 'home'.

I enjoyed Anderson's portrayal of Custer. He made him seem almost real—even with his flag. From what I have read about Custer, he pictured him just as would have imagined him—beard and all.

I was especially disappointed in Anderson's drawing. I did not see a trace of North Dakota in his drawings. Though his use of cross-hatching was good, his subject matter wasn't the best.

Maybe I couldn't see past the surface; but I wonder if anyone else could. I think a little more time would have made his drawings more comprehensible.

His watercolors are much better than his drawings, however they lack clarity. I'm not sure what he is trying to achieve, even though the use of colors was fairly good.
