Problem of Alcoholics Increasing

Caused by Population Increase

By CINDY HACKLER
News Editor

"One of the most famous alcoholics in history was Columbus. Columbus didn't know where he was going; when he got there he didn't know where he was; when he came back he didn't know where he had been. Furthermore, he received money from a woman to get there."

With this light touch of humor, Milton Maxwell opened one of a series of lectures presented by the International School of Alcohol Studies. The school, which ends today, was held on campus.

As in former years, the school is staffed by highly qualified faculty — including nationally prominent authorities of alcohol and alcoholism. Many have served on the staff since the school was started 10 years ago.

The school is open to anyone interested in learning more about alcohol and how to deal with the problems related to its use.

It is especially designed for educators, clergymen, counselors, social workers, nurses, rehabilitation and employment personnel, law enforcers, and all people who are involved with problems arising from the use of alcohol.

According to Bernard Larsen, co-director of the North Dakota Commission on Alcoholism, the problem of alcoholism is increasing. This is partially due to the increase of population.

Also, a larger percentage of the population drinks and one out of every 15 who drink are alcoholics.

It is interesting to note the number of male alcoholics compared to female alcoholics. In the United States the ratio is about five and one-half males to every female alcoholic. England's ratio is two and one-half to one, and Norway's is one to one.

Persons attending these lectures, films, discussion groups, and enrolled for credit are required to take an examination at the conclusion of the School.

The school is co-sponsored by the North Dakota Commission on Alcoholism, Bismarck, and in the Division of Continuing Education at UND.

Lewis to Lecture Tonight

Dr. Charles L. Lewis, former dean of students and associate professor of psychology at UND, will give the summer lecture in counseling and guidance today.

Dr. Lewis, currently vice president for student affairs at Pennsylvania State University, University Park, will speak at 10 a.m. in Leonard Hall.

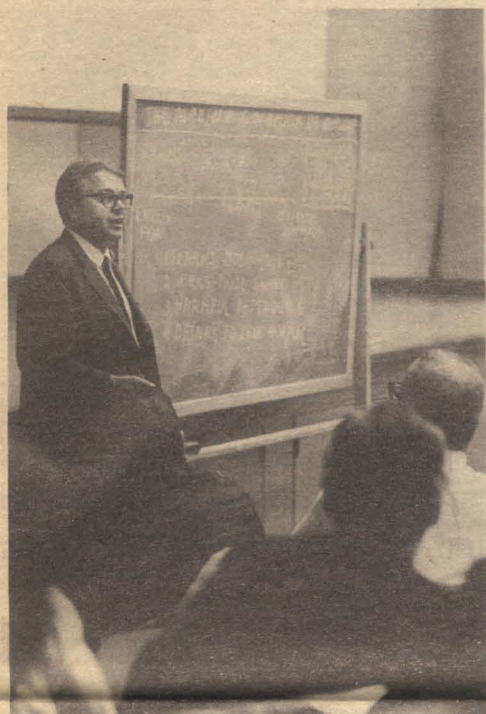

The lecture, which is free and open to the public, is tentatively entitled "Characteristics of College Students Today." A discussion period will follow his talk.

Dr. Lewis came to UND in 1955 as dean of men and assistant professor of psychology. In

4 U Alumni Aided In Apollo 11 Mission

At least four former students of UND played a part in the successful landing of American astronauts on the moon July 20.

They are Capt. Howard C. Johnson Jr., Fairdale; Richard A. Granger, Grand Forks; Dennis A. Holweger, Inkster; and Cortes L. Perry, Columbus, Ind.

Johnson, a development engineer at the Manned Spacecraft Center, Houston, Texas, is one of 150 select Air Force members assigned to duty with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) in support of America's space program. Johnson's role in the Apollo 11 space flight was in the area of mission planning. He helped assure that the mission's operational requirements were attained in such areas as crew safety and compatibility of ground support and spacecraft systems.

A 1961 graduate of Fairdale High School, Johnson attended UND prior to attending and graduating from the Air Force Academy in 1966. He received the M.S. degree in astronomical engineering from Purdue University in 1967.

Granger, employed by North American Aviation, Downey, Calif., has been with the Apollo project since 1960. He was a test engineer in charge of testing the giant engines which were used to propel Apollo 11 on its lunar mission.

Since completion of engine testing, Granger has been working with NASA as a lead stack engineer.

He received the B.S. degree in chemical engineering from UND in 1959.

Holweger and Perry are both members of the NASA Marshall Space Flight Center, Huntsville, Ala., which played an important role in the Apollo 11 mission development.

The Saturn V rocket which lifted the Apollo craft moonward was developed under the direction of the Marshall Center. Holweger is a project engineer at the Center.

Holweger, a 1963 Gilby High School graduate, received the B.S. degree in civil engineering from the University in 1957.

Perry received the M.S. degree from UND in 1959.

U Junior Tells of Life in Yugoslavia

EDITOR'S NOTE: Beverlee French of Salinas, Calif., a UND junior, is a community ambassador to Yugoslavia under the Experiment in International Living. She was among six local students, four from UND and two from Grand Forks high schools, chosen as 1969 Experiment in International Living participants to travel to other countries this summer. The 1967 graduate of Grand Forks Central High School relates her experiences in a letter dated July 12.

SPLIT, Yugoslavia—Official greetings from Yugoslavia, compliments of the Experiment in International Living.

Living has indeed become an experiment filled with unknowns, but the Experiment is not only my stay in Split, Yugoslavia, with my Yugoslavian parents, my two sisters and brothers; the hours on the Adriatic beach, and my sometimes humorous communication in Serbo-Croatian.

While immersed in Yugoslavian culture, I am not so far removed that I have lost sight of America and its complex problems, both internal and in the realm of foreign relations. My constant reminder is the broad applicability of Experiment philosophy.

Having satisfactorily survived the culture shock, I am adjusting to a vastly different life style, observing carefully, and attempting to discern values, ideas and motivations.

In spite of assumed tolerance on my part, the familiar cultural cues, even language, with which we are accustomed and on which we base our judgments, are conspicuously missing. It is perhaps natural and common to react to the resulting frustration with derogation.

Much more empathy is required to realize that different is not inferior. Although most Americans have not this somewhat unique experience, I believe we all have a similar opportunity and challenge—it is empathy that is necessary and lacking in the United States.

We must experiment with empathy in order to understand different ethnic groups, interest groups and age groups. It can be done by Americans living in Yugoslavia—perhaps there is even hope for Americans living with Americans.

I have been living with the Vrdoljaks in Split only 12 days. There has been much that is interesting and exciting, but in spite of all that I have observed and experienced, judgments and generalizations at this time are premature. With not quite two months in Yugoslavia, I think they will never be justifiable.

My experiences and conversations have been with only a few people in Split, a city of 120,000, and it is one city in a very diverse country. I feel it is important to emphasize that anything I may say about Yugoslavia is based solely on my limited impressions.

As an indication of the pace at which we live, it is exemplary to explain what I consider to be the most common words in Serbo-Croatian: sutra, prekosutra and ceklati, which mean respectively, tomorrow, the day after tomorrow and wait.

With my goal oriented background, the switch to leisure was probably the greatest single adjustment. A common American conclusion, or rather, hasty generalization, in the face of such impressions, is an inference of lack of incentive in Communist countries.

It is not completely unfounded because we know only a few people, most of whom are not students, because Split is a hot, coastal city, because life styles are not post-World War II products, but results of centuries. Furthermore, Yugoslavia is developing at a tremendous pace.

Split, on first impression, could perhaps be any United States coastal city. But there is no smog, no traffic jams, and supposedly no discriminate affluency.

I am told that everyone eats well in Yugoslavia and that class differences between perhaps three classes are small, made apparent only by such things as automobiles, apartment suites and appliances.

I fear such oversimplification, and, unfortunately, in spite of such equality, it seems that people, except for perhaps some of the more ardent party members, are impressed by material things.

The longer I am here, the more confusing and fascinating Yugoslavia becomes. Many of my impressions are totally unexplainable by my frame of reference acquired by reading.

Therefore, my questions continue about the economy, the party, the workers' councils (all Yugoslavian workers make the decisions that affect them and their work), education, Josip Broz—Tito.

However, by the nature of our experience, my political and sociological insights will be limited.

Everyone tells a different version of the same situation, and, although my father and sister are members of the party, they are not overly concerned with national or world affairs.

I am not experiencing ideology, but rather life. To express my feelings and excitement about it, I must quote Greek novelist Nikos Kazantzakis from his book, "Saint Francis"—"If you weren't with me I would tell it all to a stone, an ant, a tender olive leaf—because my heart is so overflowing, and if it does not open and pour forth, it may break into a thousand pieces."

Stealing Poses Problem

Lockers Broken Open At UND Fieldhouse

By MARGE ECKROTH
Feature Editor

There has always been stealing going on at the Fieldhouse, but this summer the stealing has been a little worse.

Before this summer, when things were stolen they usually were taken from lockers that had been left open. This summer, however, some lockers have been broken into.

The thieves usually don't steal clothes or shoes because they probably wouldn't fit, and who would really want someone else's clothes? What they take most of the time is money. That is about the only thing of any value that has been taken.

No one has been caught and officials have no suspects for the thefts. If someone is caught, though, they risk being turned over to the proper authorities to face charges.

L. R. Marti, UND athletic director, proposed two solutions to the problem.

His first proposal is that a building supervisor be hired to watch the locker area and make it more difficult to steal things.

The second proposal is to let students with identification cards use one locker area and non-students use another one.

Marti said students could play a major role in eliminating the thefts by making sure their possessions are properly locked up.

The Summer Student Directory containing the names, addresses and phone numbers of all faculty and students is now available.

It can be purchased at the main desk at the University Center, the information desk at the Auxiliary Services office or the Summer Session office, Room 304, Twamley.

AFIT Graduation Scheduled Sept. 4

The first graduating class of the Air Force Institute of Technology (AFIT) Minuteman School—Detachment 12—at the Grand Forks Air Force Base will receive graduate degrees Sept. 4 fro UND.

Commencement will be at 2:30 p.m. in the University Center Prairie Ballroom on campus, announced Dr. Christopher J. Hamre, director of special Air Force programs at UND.

Thirty-three of the 154 launch control officers enrolled in the Minuteman School will receive master of science degrees in industrial management. Other officers of the 321st Strategic Missile Wing will be awarded degrees at commencements in December and March.

North Dakota Commissioner of Higher Education Dr. Kenneth E. Raschke will deliver the commencement address. Dr. George W. Starcher, president of the University, will preside and confer degrees.

Expected to attend are representatives of the Air Force and members of the State Legislature and State Board of Higher Education. The state's congressional delegation has been invited.

The School was begun in 1966 under a contract between the University and AFIT as part of the Minuteman missile education program of the Strategic Air Command.

Courses are taught at the base by UND faculty. It takes three to three and one-half years to complete the program.

The University has a similar program at Minot AFB. That program was started in 1964 and had its first commencement in 1967.

Halts Education's Seventh Inning Rally

Upward Bound held off a three-run outburst by the Education Department in the final frame to eke out a 5-4 victory in the championship dual in slow pitch softball action.

In the consolation round the University Press edged Chemistry 5-4.

Upward Bound tallied first in the seven inning battle when Larry Burr and Neil Reuter crossed the plate in the top of the second. The second Upward Bound rally came in the third frame when Dan Ostegard opened with a single, with Miles Ramjford and Doug Heck following suit.

Ostegard, Ramjford and Heck all scored, giving Upward Bound a 5-0 edge going into the bottom of the third.

Education got its first counter in the bottom of the third frame when Lloyd Hendrickson scored after a Don Eshenby single.

The two squads exchanged scoreless innings until the bottom of the seventh when Education scored three times before the side was retired, giving Upward Bound the 5-4 margin.

In the consolation battle, the Chemistry Department jumped off to an early 3-0 lead, but the Press came back with a pair in the bottom of the first, and added another in the bottom of the second, knotting the contest at 3-3.

The Press took command in the fourth when Norm Wyman crossed the plate for the second time in the game on a Dave Weisgram single, but Chemistry tallied in the top of the fifth to tie the game again.

Both units were unable to score in the sixth frame, but in the bottom of the seventh, Ralph Weisgram led off with a single, and crossed the plate on a single by Wyman to bring home the victory.
