1998-99 UND Foundation and Alumni Association Board officers elected in June

THE ALUMNI Association of the University of North Dakota and the UND Foundation Board of Directors have elected new officers for the 1998-99 fiscal year, effective July 1.

Karen Bohn, '75, '76, recently retired chief administrative officer of Piper Jaffray Companies, Inc., has been elected president of the UND Foundation Board, succeeding East Grand Forks, Minn., native Nancy Dunlevy Seifert, '51. Bohn, originally of Grand Forks, lives in Edina, Minn. Seifert, Cedar

Strinden announces plans to Board

UND ALUMNI ASSOCIATION and UND Foundation Executive Vice President Earl Strinden announced to the Board of Directors his wishes to relinquish day-to-day CEO responsibilities effective July 1, 2000. The plan is to have his successor named by July 1, 1999, to work with Strinden for a year. Strinden will continue in specific trustee and contact responsibilities for a period of time after July 1, 2000. 1998-99 Alumni Association President F. John Marshall will chair the search committee which will recommend Strinden's successor to the full Board. Other Board members of the committee include Karen Bohn, Robert Heskin, Lyle Kasprick, R. Doug Larsen, and Thoraine Loyd. Two former Board members will also be appointed to this committee. Inquiries from interested individuals should be directed to Marshall at P.O. Box 8157, Grand Forks, N.D., 58202; fax: (701)777-4054. (See Earl's column on Page 2 of this Alumni Review for his comments.)

A sincere 'thank you' to the loyal members of our UND alumni family

$142 million in 20 years

THE UND FOUNDATION topped $100 million in assets late May. "This is a very meaningful and historic milestone for the UND Foundation and the University of North Dakota," said Earl Strinden, UND Foundation executive vice president. In addition to this historic announcement, University of North Dakota alumni and friends made the 1997-98

From 1978 to 1998, UND Foundation assets grew from $1 million to $100 million. During this time, $42 million has been allocated for the benefit of the University, including student scholarships, faculty enhancement, and other priority projects. Every college and department are the beneficiaries of this alumni and special friends' support.

fiscal year a record one, providing more than $11 million in gifts to UND's official fundraising organization. The UND Foundation was established in 1978 with assets of about $1 million. By 1981, this had grown to nearly $10 million.

Doug Larsen and Nancy Dunlevy Seifert (1997-98 Alumni Association and UND Foundation presidents, respectively) are proud to share this milestone news of reaching $100 million.

Camp Depression: An era of hope and opportunity at the University of North Dakota

The CAMP DEPRESSION TRIBUTE on the University of North Dakota campus was dedicated during Alumni Days '98. Camp Depression was UND's innovative housing composed of railroad boxcars during the 1930s and 1940s. The sculpture, titled 'Persistence,' was designed by Curtis Flexhaug, '95, '98, and symbolizes determination, perseverance, and hope. [Turn to Page 9 of this Alumni Review for more photos and information.]

As the curtain is slowly lowered on the stage of each life, soon all the "boys from Camp" will have been stilled, all the records have been blown away in the winds.

As one generation after another passes by in years to come, many will be richer, stronger, taller, and wiser.

But remember also many men whose names are now unknown, who have passed this corner of life; their lasting footsteps can be heard if you listen carefully...

'There is much work to be done'...

By Earl Strinden, Executive Vice President,
Alumni Association and the UND Foundation

THE OTHER DAY a newspaper reporter asked me what I most enjoyed in my 29 years as a member of the staff of the UND Alumni Association. I didn't need to think long about my answer. It is the people. I have had a wonderful opportunity to meet and know thousands of unselfish, dedicated alumni and special friends who care about the University of North Dakota, and in so many ways, reach back in appreciation to build a stronger University.

In this issue of the Alumni Review there is an announcement about my request to the Board of Directors for a successor to be on board to assume the day-to-day responsibilities as Executive Vice President and CEO by June 30, 2000. I don't intend to change my work schedule at all over these next two years, and I will continue to fulfill trustee responsibilities and have certain contacts when I am no longer the Executive Vice President. Retirement is not high on my wish list, but for the good of the organization, it is necessary to plan for a smooth and productive transition.

Uniquely, the Alumni Association of the University of North Dakota has had only three alumni directors. The Association was founded in 1889 but was rather loosely organized until 1926 when Frank Webb assumed the duties of Alumni Secretary and Editor of the alumni magazine. He became director of Alumni Relations in 1930 and served until his resignation in 1945. J. Lloyd Stone, a former school superintendent and director of the National Youth Administration for North Dakota, was appointed director in that same year. I joined the staff of the Alumni Association in 1969 and became director in 1973.

I owe much to Frank Webb and to J. Lloyd Stone. Frank rallied the alumni during the very difficult years of the 1930s and the early 1940s. The depression and war years were difficult ones, but Frank never wavered in his loyalty and dedication to the alumni, the students and his University.

My predecessor, J. Lloyd Stone, started the UND development fund and made the Alumni Association a non-dues organization. Lloyd brought many outstanding alumni achievers back in contact with their University. A number of the buildings on the campus are named for alumni who were active in the Alumni Association during those years. The years after World War II were dynamic for the growth and development of the University of North Dakota. We build on the foundations laid by others. Frank Webb and J. Lloyd Stone were leaders who worked with alumni and special friends to bring about significant accomplishments for UND.

To take a line from a popular poem, "We have miles to go before we sleep." There is much work to be done. There are great challenges and opportunities in the ongoing building of a great University. This is indeed a noble effort. We do have a proud tradition which started with the few alumni, friends and community leaders who in 1895 raised $30,000 to keep the University from closing, possibly forever. The generations of loyal and dedicated alumni who are part of the unbroken chain of loyalty and support have had such a dramatic beneficial impact on this University. You, the loyal alumni and special friends, can feel very proud and very good about what you have helped to make happen at UND! This is an investment in the future. There will always be a need for builders and UND will continue to produce them.

A special thank you to retiring Board members Darold Rath of Fargo and Lyle Beiswenger of UND. They are exemplary in their loyalty to the University of North Dakota. In the 1980s Darold assumed a key leadership role and his company, Eide Helmeke, made a substantial gift for an endowment which continues to strengthen the department of accounting and make available quality educational opportunities for students. Darold has completed nine years on the Board of Directors including a year as president of the Association. Lyle has served as treasurer and a board member of the Alumni Association and UND Foundation all of the years he has been UND Vice President for Finance. He has served our University and our organizations with distinction and dedication.

We know Lyle and Darold will continue to be actively involved with the Alumni Association and UND. Our congratulations to the two new Board members, Margo Wolff and Norm MacPhee. They will continue a tradition of being part of a strong and independent Board of Directors for the Alumni Association and the UND Foundation.

Also our thank you to Nancy Seifert for her leadership as president of the University of North Dakota Foundation and Doug Larsen for his leadership as president of the Alumni Association. They will continue on the Board. Our congratulations to our new leaders, F. John Marshall, president of the Alumni Association, and Karen Bohn, president of the UND Foundation.

25 years of service

On behalf of the UND Alumni Association, Earl Strinden presented administrative assistant Linda Hussey with a bouquet of flowers in recognition of her longtime service and dedication to the Association. Linda just celebrated 25 years of employment with the Alumni Association. She began working at the Alumni office in 1973. Originally of Minneapolis, Linda grew up in East Grand Forks, Minn., and is married to Tim Hussey. They have three children and live in East Grand Forks.

Rapids, Iowa, remains on the Board, serving on the Executive Committee. Lyle Kasprick, '59, Orono, Minn., is first vice president of the UND Foundation and Morris Tschider, '54, '58, '60, Bismarck, is second vice president.

Grand Forks lawyer and businessman F. John Marshall, '59, '62, is the new president of the Alumni Association of the University of North Dakota. He succeeds Fargo businessman Doug Larsen, '53, originally of Casselton, N.D., who also remains on the Board, serving on the Executive Committee.

David Iverson, '70, Redmond, Wash., and originally of Hampden, N.D., has been elected first vice president of the Alumni Association and Leah Manning Stetzner, '70, '73, is second vice president. Stetzner, a Hettinger, N.D., native, lives in Decatur, Ill.

In addition, two new directors have replaced two retiring board members. Beginning their terms July 1, 1998, are Norman S. MacPhee, '70, '74, and Margo Wolff, '82. UND Vice President for Finance Lyle Beiswenger, '67, has retired from the UND Foundation and Alumni Association of the University of North Dakota Boards of Directors, having served on the board and as treasurer since July 1, 1983. He retires from his UND post Oct. 1. Darold Rath, '67, Fargo, has also retired from the Boards of Directors, having served the maximum nine years, including a year as Alumni Association president. Beiswenger is a Fisher, Minn., native and Rath is originally of Pettibone, N.D.

"The Board of Directors for the UND Foundation and the Alumni Association of the University of North Dakota has traditionally been a strong and independent entity," said Earl Strinden, Executive Vice President of the UND Foundation and Alumni Association. "The University is fortunate to have these alumni eager and willing to unselfishly give of their time and efforts to strengthening UND. Since the earliest history of UND, alumni have played a key role in the University's growth. We are confident this will continue into the future."

New Board members Norm MacPhee, '70, '74, and Margo Wolff, '82.

Lyle Beiswenger (left) and Darold Rath, both accounting graduates from the Class of 1967, retired from the UND Foundation and Alumni Association Boards as of July 1.

New UND Foundation Board President Karen Bohn earned her undergraduate degree in psychology and music from UND in 1975 and her master's degree in counseling from UND. After a 22-year business career, Bohn retired from Piper Jaffray in January 1998. She is very actively involved in civic organizations in the Twin Cities, and sits on several boards of directors, including Blue Cross Blue Shield of Minnesota and the Citizen Scholarship Foundation of America.

1998-99 Alumni Association President F. John Marshall, a Mahanomen, Minn., native, earned his bachelor's degree in 1959 and law degree in 1962, both from UND. He is president of the Grand Forks law firm Letnes, Marshall & Swanson, Ltd., and owns Burger King restaurants in North Dakota and Minnesota. The longtime community leader also led the successful effort to save the Grand Forks Air Force Base.

Norman S. MacPhee, who grew up in Underwood, N.D., and Grand Forks, received his bachelor's and master's degrees, both in accounting, from UND. In 1992, MacPhee retired as president and owner of Compass Inc., an accounting and management business in Fairbanks, Alaska. He was also a founder/partner in two businesses in the Russian Far East, the "Alaska Russian Trading Company" and "Shantar Russian Adventures." He lives in Trout Creek, Mont.

Margo Wolff, originally of Grand Forks, is the first individual from one of the 1980s graduating classes to be named a Director to the Boards. She is a 1982 graduate of UND with a bachelor of science in chemical engineering. She joined General Electric after college and worked in various engineering positions at GE Battery Business, Medical Systems, and Plastics. In 1988, she joined Precision Interconnect (PI), now a division of AMP, Inc. She has worked in a variety of positions at PI, including manufacturing engineering manager, assembly plant manager, Business Unit manager - Engineering and Production, director of Customer Services, and is currently Director of Business Planning, Employee Development and Communications. Wolff lives in Lake Oswego, Ore.

The UND Foundation, a private, non-profit corporation and the official fund-raising organization for UND, is recognized as one of the most successful fund-raising organizations for a public college or university of UND's size in the nation. This past fiscal year, which ended June 30, a record number and amount of alumni gifts totaled more than $10 million, bringing the UND Foundation assets to more than $100 million (See Front Page story). Private giving through the UND Foundation assists virtually every college, department and activity at UND. The UND Alumni Association, with its membership of nearly 90,000 graduates and former students, conducts a comprehensive program of alumni relations throughout the nation.

By 1986, assets had more than doubled, to $22 million. Six years later this figure more than doubled again, to $45 million. By 1997, Foundation assets had reached $85 million, and, in May 1998, the milestone of $100 million was reached. Since 1978, $42 million has been allocated for the benefit of the University, including student scholarships, faculty enhancement, and other priority projects. "The UND Foundation has reached this milestone only because of the dedicated and loyal UND alumni family whose generosity and caring for UND is uncommon," Strinden said. "With more than $100 million in assets, the UND Foundation is now in a position to move to a 'higher plateau' in its role of building and strengthening the University of North Dakota. Thank you to all of the alumni and friends who are making this possible."

UND Alumni Association adds staff members

The UND Alumni Association has made some changes and additions to its staff. Kirsten Carolin, who had served as special events coordinator, has assumed the position of development officer and annual drive coordinator. She will work with affinity campaigns, on-campus giving, and student/parent relations. Kim (Kenville) Gabik, '91, joined the staff in June as a special projects coordinator. The one-year position includes working with aviation alumni and friends and corporations.

Terri (Whicker) Horpedahl, '84, joined the Alumni Association July 1 as a development officer and National Alumni Leadership Council (NALC) coordinator. Terri will also work with the Schools of Law, Medicine and Health Sciences, and Engineering, on their special projects. April Martin, '98, has been named the new special events coordinator, effective July 1. Heidi Olson began working at the Alumni Office June 20, assisting both the financial department and the development staff.

Stand up and cheer,
Stand up and cheer for North Dakota! Pledge your loyalty, For she's your Alma Mater true.
Our boys are fighting,
And we will help them
see it thru. We've got the team, We've got the team, So North Dakota,
here's to you!
It's for you North
Dakota U That we sing, your sons and daughters true; Cheering our comrades to victory,
Renewing allegiance to U.N.D. Your honor we uphold in every contest,
As your children aye
shall do; And whene'er
you hear the cry of Odz!
Odz! Dzi! It's for you,
North Dakota U.
It's for U.
Hail to thee, O Alma Mater! Hail to thee with heart and tongue! Pride
we feel and love yet greater, While we raise our grateful song. Home of lofty thought and learning, Beacon o'er our western land. Shrine whence still the ever burning Torch is passed from hand to hand.

Bo's Report

by Rob Bollinger
Executive Director
Fighting Sioux Club

email: FSC@sage.und.nodak.edu

GREETINGS TO ALL from the Fighting Sioux Club! This summer has been extremely busy, finishing up our annual spring drive along with attending various Sioux-per Swing golfing events. In June, I went to Chicago to visit one of our "legends in UND athletics" -- Irv Kupcinet. For those of you who might not know who "Kup" is, I will give you a little background history.

Kup was originally a quarterback out of Chicago who had transferred from Northwestern University. In 1933, then-UND Coach C.A.

West induced Kup with an offer to handle athletic publicity as well as play football for the Fighting Sioux. Jack Stewart, publicist prior to that time, had left for the Southwest to enter the resort business, and West realized he needed a good publicist to boost not only his teams, but game crowds.

Kup did just what he was hired for and was publicist until 1935 when he graduated. Injuries hampered Kup's entire UND career and also ended his pro career with the Philadelphia Eagles with a shoulder problem. He then returned to his native Chicago to write sports for the Chicago Times, which later became the Sun-Times, where he has become a widely read columnist for more than 60 years now. He also has a long-running television show which has been syndicated since the early 1960s.

Kup is known as "Mr. Chicago" because of his fierce love for the city. Over the years, he has developed personal friendships with a large number of national figures in politics, entertainment and sports. His unselfish work on behalf of charities in Chicago is legendary.

While at UND, Kup lived in the stadium dormitory and later said, "I have fond memories of my days at UND because of the excitement on the campus in those days."

After having a wonderful visit with Kup, I decided to see some of the sites in town. Chicago was even busier than usual with the NBA finals in town -- and the town was just brimming with excitement! The fans were eager for the Bulls to win another NBA title during the fourth and possibly final game of the championships. As I was checking out the downtown area, I heard someone hollering from one of the buildings above me. This guy kept hollering, "Hey Rick! Rick, hey man! We were rootin' for ya!"

Finally I realized it was Rick

'I have fond memories of my days at UND because of the excitement on the UND campus in those days.'
Longtime Chicago Sun-Times columnist Irv Kupcinet, '35

Majerus, University of Utah head basketball coach. I saw him go into a nearby deli and decided I would go and introduce myself.

After introductions, Rick invited me to sit down and join him while he ate a bowl of ice cream. The conversation rolled along smoothly as we chatted about North Dakota and various athletic interests. As I excused myself, Rick asked what I had planned for the evening. I told him I just planned to go back to my hotel and watch the game on television. He pulls an official press pass out of his pocket and hands it to me saying, "Enjoy the game!"

So, with my disposable camera in hand, I headed off to the United Center. Inside, I found myself surrounded by people who were scurrying around, preparing for one of the biggest sporting events to hit Chicago.

It wasn't long before I saw several familiar TV faces, including ESPN sports announcer Dan Patrick and sports announcers Brent Musberger and Jack Ramsey. Comedic actor Bill Murray was also in the crowd to cheer on his favorite team.

Both teams came out onto the floor to warm up and I was up closer than I ever dreamed to Phil Jackson and his famous crew of Jordan, Pippen, Rodman and the rest, as well as Karl Malone and the rest of the Utah Jazz.

To say the least, the week I spent in Chicago was an unforgettable one. Although I was not able to watch Phil Jackson and his Bulls take the title in the final game, I speak for myself and on behalf of the entire University of North Dakota when I say, "Congratulations, Phil, on your sixth title win with the Bulls! Good luck in your new ventures." -Supplemented by A Century of UND Sports

Homecoming '98 reunions will include reminiscing about many of the 'greats'

Homecoming '98 will be a time of remembrance and celebration for Fighting Sioux sports fans and former athletes. The 1930s football reunion is scheduled for Friday, Oct. 9, and there will be plenty of reminiscing about the days and legendary players and coaches of yore. One familiar name is Glenn "Red" Jarrett, '31, who stands out in UND's athletic history, not only as an outstanding athlete, but also as the University's athletic director, football and basketball coach. A Grand Forks native, Jarrett excelled in many sports while playing at UND, including football, basketball and track. In 1930, Jarrett was a member of the Sioux football team labeled as "the greatest in UND history." The team ended the season with a 9-1-0 record, plus won their third straight NCC championship. That same year, Jarrett was named to the All-America first-team selected by Herbert Reed, a reporter for the New York Herald/Tribune, along with a panel of fifteen professional sport scouts. Jarrett's spectacular playing also won him recognition as an honorable mention from renowned Notre Dame football coach Knute Rochne.

In 1931, Jarrett graduated from UND with a bachelor's degree in education and became a coach at Minot (N.D.) High School. In the fall of 1942, Jarrett was named head football coach at UND. He had been an assistant for four years to longtime football Coach C.A. West. In 1945, Jarrett thought he would try his hand as UND's head basketball coach. He coached for one season before heading off to the Navy. Jarrett rejoined the UND athletic staff as acting athletic director and also head football coach. The name Glenn "Red" Jarrett will forever be synonymous with football, sports and UND.

The year 1957 brought changes to UND and its athletic department. A completely revised scholarship system resulted in an abundance of talent that promised a brighter future for Sioux football. The University also brought in an entirely new coaching staff, with Marv (Whitey) Helling taking over the reigns of head coach after Frank Zazula, '58, retired in 1956. The season started out slow with the Sioux winning three games, tying one, and losing four overall putting them in fifth place in the conference with a 2-3-1 record. Inheriting a squad scarce on lettermen, Helling made the most of an excellent crop of sophomores, headed by end Bob Herrick, '59, full back Don Stueve, '60, and halfback Jim Jarrett, '60, '62. With the passing skills of Steve Piasecki, '59, they added up to the most versatile Sioux offensive attack in years. According to the 1958 Dacotah yearbook, Piasecki had suffered the previous season for lack of good receivers, but he uncovered a gold mine in the "glue-fingered" Herrick.

The pair was said to be the conference's most feared passing duo and led the NCC in passing and receiving departments and were named to the coaches' all-conference team along with Stueve, who led the team in rushing.

UND student group to enter solar car in Sunrayce '99 seeks sponsors

THE SOCIETY FOR ENERGY ALTERNATIVES (SEA) is improving on its achievements made in Sunrayce '97 by designing and building a second generation solar car to enter into Sunrayce '99. This second-generation car will include many improvements that will make it lighter, more efficient and faster. The SEA is the official student organization at UND and consists approximately of 40 members. The Solar Car Team must design a vehicle which utilizes high tech materials, solar cells, batteries, electric motors, as well as computer hardware and software. Students face the challenge of designing a vehicle which will operate at highway driving conditions powered by the same amount of electricity used by a hair dryer. Before actually racing the car, the vehicle must also pass a strict scrutineering session prior to qualifying to be eligible to compete. Groups or individuals interested in assisting UND's effort in Sunrayce '99 have several options. Corporate sponsorship is the basis for financing the project. Firms may wish to donate equipment or supplies for the vehicle or to make a monetary donation to a general fund. For more information about UND's entry or to help support SEA, contact : Dan Gregorich at (701)777-4110 or email at: dgregori@badlands.nodak.edu.

Luncheon honors Sorlie, Rice families

UND's Visual Arts Department is planning to celebrate a special part of its history during Alumni Days 1999, marking the 50th anniversary date of the retirement of one of the University's longtime professors and "poet of the pottery wheel," Margaret Kelly Cable. An extraordinary and rare example of Cable's work returned to the UND campus when Helen (Rice) Sorlie, '42, daughter-in-law of the late North Dakota governor, A.G. Sorlie, donated a Margaret Kelly Cable-made vase to the UND Foundation. The vase, valued at $10,000, is one of only four "North Dakota products" vases ever made and is described as "The Crown Jewel of Cable era-pottery." Don Miller, a professor in the visual arts department, had the opportunity to thank Sorlie in person at a luncheon at the J. Lloyd Stone Alumni Center. Miller invites all UND alumni and friends to donate any exceptional pottery pieces they may have for the Golden Anniversary Retrospective Showing of UND pottery. Miller also said he is also welcoming temporary donations for those who wish to have their pieces displayed only during the showing and not made as a permanent gift. He is also seeking those who may have stories about Margaret Kelly Cable or other faculty members from that era. Miller has already received one story from alumnus Meral Rood, '37. If you would like to learn more about the Cable project or contact Miller, visit the web site at: <http://www.und.nodak.edu/dept/undclay> or email: undclay@sage.und.nodak.edu.

CAS II named for Bryce Streibel

STREIBEL HALL, formerly known as CAS II, was dedicated during Alumni Days '98. The hall was named for Bryce Streibel, former member of the North Dakota State Board of Higher Education and a longtime member of the North Dakota House of Representatives and then the North Dakota Senate. Streibel, rural Fessenden, N.D., has made significant contributions, not only financially, but also of his own time and talent to benefit UND, especially in the long-term development of the aerospace and medical programs.

Recently retired UND Vice President for Student Affairs honored at reception

GORDON HENRY, UND vice president of student affairs for the past 13 years, retired from his position as of June 30. He has served UND since 1965. A reception was held in his honor this spring. Henry has a wide reputation for being a staunch advocate of students. The Westhope, N.D., native is highly regarded for his compassion, encouragement, guidance and tireless efforts to help students.

He is pictured at right with his wife, Patricia, and some members of the sorority Alpha Chi Omega. The group's president, Julie Passa of Drayton, N.D., said: "Dr. Henry played an extremely instrumental role in saving our chapter in the early 1970s. By dealing directly with our National Headquarters and the women of the chapter, he helped us turn things around. Without him, we wouldn't be here today." Under Henry's vice-presidency, UND has been recognized as a regional and national leader in developing its Native American programs, Disability Support Services unit, international programs and other student-oriented services. Henry has been recognized as one of the top student affairs leaders in North Dakota. He is also proud of the Crisis Response program he helped develop in the 1970s and, with the help of the UND Foundation and UND's alumni, the University helps students, faculty and staff respond to virtually any type of crisis.

Camp Depression tribute dedicated during Alumni Days '98

Sculpture depicting perseverance and determination honors those who earned educations while living in UND's unique boxcar housing during Depression

THE CAMP DEPRESSION Tribute at UND was officially dedicated to the "Boys of Camp Depression" during Alumni Days '98. Twenty-two former residents, now living all over the United States, attended the event. Each individual spoke about his experiences at Camp Depression. A prevailing theme among the speakers was their gratefulness for the chance to attend college, the deep appreciation they have for their educations, and an abiding pride in their fellow students and UND.

A brief history...

NESTLED IN SPARSE prairie woods on the south edge of the campus from 1933 to 1944 stood Camp Depression, an innovative part of UND history. The Camp was located near the railroad tracks between the power house and the old Winter Sports building and south of Babcock Hall. Today, the area where Camp Depression existed is now part of the campus parking facilities.

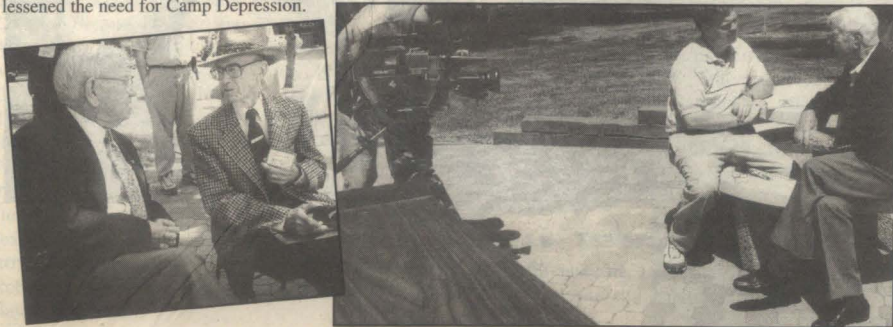

In the fall of 1933, the University administration saw a need for economical housing on the campus. Arrangements were made to buy eight caboose cars from the Great Northern Railway at $20 apiece. Camp Depression allowed financially strapped students to earn college degrees while living economically in the quadrangle of railroad cars. Fifteen brave souls initially signed up to live in Camp Depression. The students' University home was affordable, but far from perfect.

Powerful prairie winds drove an incessant stream of dust through the cracks -- one fellow recalled often times waking up to a dust-darkened pillow sporting the outline of his head -- and rainstorms sometimes brought water into the caboose. The cars were also hot; tar-coated roofs absorbed and held the sun's heat too efficiently. But, the Office of Education of the Department of the Interior referred to the Camp as "a unique method for an institution of higher learning to provide inexpensive housing for its self-help students."

The late Franklin Vikan, '34, a Bottineau, N.D., native, lived in Camp Depression from 1933 to 1935. He wrote a feature story for the Alumni Review in 1975 about Camp Depression: "...It might sound like hardship when you think of eight boisterous young men living and studying in one railroad caboose. But there were ground rules about hours of quiet, hours that the lights must be turned out and rules against drinking and gambling on the premises, all of which were observed to a more or less reasonable degree... Strangely enough, everyone seemed to have enough money to go down to Whitey's or someplace on a Saturday night..." The community was disbanded in 1944, when the government sponsored an experimental lignite gasification plant on the site. The boxcars were demolished; and, because of World War II, many students were drafted and a temporary slow down in the student population lessened the need for Camp Depression.

Sculptor shares his vision...

Curtis Flexhaug, Hillsboro, N.D., (pictured on the left with Alumni Association Executive Vice President Earl Strinden) is the artist who designed and built the powerful sculpture which graces the UND campus and pays tribute to those students who struggled for their higher educations. Permanently affixed to the brick surrounding the sculpture is a special tribute to those young men who lived in Camp Depression during the 1930s and '40s, who showed great courage and determination in their pursuit of education during those hard years.

Flexhaug earned a bachelor of fine arts degree from UND in 1995, and will receive his master of fine arts degree in visual arts this summer. He named the piece "Persistence," and calls it a "sculptural representation of the struggles the students face during their upward climb for their education." Flexhaug describes the sculpture as thus: "...The overall spiral shape represents the twisting and turning of continual motion, exerting the necessary energy to overcome obstacles that stand in the way of reaching one's goals.

The use of the metal, a flowing material strong enough to support itself, is representative of the student, ridged enough to move onward yet pliable enough to be molded and shaped. The stone represents the objects that stand in the way as attempt to achieve our goals. ...Through persistence, the obstacles can be overcome by strength and knowledge, including knowing when to step aside and go around obstructions..."

ABOVE: Elmer Lian, '40, Grand Forks, was one of the organizers of the Camp Depression tribute ceremony. Originally of Fairdale, N.D., Elmer is a former POW known for his unceasing efforts to preserve history, working on projects involving other POWs, North Dakota veterans, the Civilian Conservation Corps, and more. He earned a bachelor's degree in commerce from UND. FAR LEFT PHOTO: Elmer Lian and Vernon Gardner, '38, Falls Church, Va., visited about their days living in cabooses at UND. Vernon is a Kenmare, N.D., native, who earned an electrical engineering degree. LEFT: Dr. Phil West, '35, '36, HON'58, Baton Rouge, La., was one of the very first residents of Camp Depression. The Mentor, Minn., native was interviewed by a local television station following the tribute. Phil is a Boyd Professor Emeritus of Louisiana State University. He still conducts research as chairman and director of West-Paine Laboratories.

The little aluminum plane, with an empty weight of 2,300 pounds, left Barrow with a gross weight of about 4,750 pounds, including 300 gallons of gasoline, arctic survival gear, and an ample supply of chocolate-covered raisins and drinking water. Following are excerpts from Smith's flight journal recounting the 11,500-mile, 27-day odyssey from their homes in Fort Worth and Dallas, Texas, to North Dakota, Alaska, Norway, Greenland, Canada, and back to North Dakota.]

MARCH 31 — Takeoff point is the Frontiers of Flight Museum at Dallas Love Field. Present for the sendoff are museum officials, the media, schoolchildren and family and friends. Six hours 20 minutes, runway to runway, Dallas to Grand Forks. A big snowstorm causes icing on the wings over South Dakota. Bill handles the situation by calmly flying around the storm and dropping to a lower altitude to melt the ice.

APRIL 1 — A visit to Hatton, N.D., Carl Ben Eielson's hometown; as American as apple pie. We are met by Eileen Mork, Eielson's niece, and by the board of the Hatton-Eielson Museum, the mayor, the media, school staff and 300 courteous, freshly scrubbed children from kindergarten through high school. Years ago, Hatton schoolchildren collected pennies to build an arch at the cemetery to honor Eielson. In this tradition, the children give us a sack of money holding $25.73, including 723 pennies. The day also features a return visit to Carl Ben Eielson School at Grand Forks Air Force Base.

APRIL 2 — Surprise! On a trip to Fargo to visit another Eielson School, we are met by TV cameras, news reporters and Fargo-Moorhead business and civic leaders... We are honored at a luncheon in the new Valley Aviation hangar. The emcee is Hiram Drache, '63, historian and editor of "Polar Pilot."

APRIL 3 — Bismarck for lunch with Al Jaeger, North Dakota Secretary of State, and other officials. Gov. Ed Schafer, '69, gives us a state flag in a handcarved wooden box as a gift for the governor of Svalbard. The North Dakota Heritage Center gives us copies of Eielson's flight log covering the momentous flights 70 years ago. The journal tells of the emergency landing on floating ice after their Stinson airplane ran out of gas north of Alaska in 1927. In one of the greatest survival feats in Alaska history, the pair walked over pack ice and on floating ice to shore near Beechey Point.

APRIL 4 — The eight-hour, 1,300-mile flight from Great Falls, Mont., to Juneau, Alaska, is the second-longest leg of the trip. The weather turns bad over the mountains, and I can see ice forming on the wings and wing mirrors. Signs handles the ice problem again by dropping down to warmer temperatures while flying by instruments over snowy peaks. It is exciting to hear the ice particles bounce off the tail.

Exclusive to the Alumni Review: flight log excerpts from Thomas H. Smith, expedition coordinator

APRIL 6 — In Juneau, Sen.

Gary Wilken introduces us to the Alaskan Senate. We get an Alaska flag to take to Norway as an official gift from Gov. Tony Knowles. The Juneau-to-Anchorage flight is only about 600 miles but it reinforces Bill's statement that Juneau is one of the most challenging airports in the country because of high mountains, water and frequent bad weather. Today we are plagued by almost zero visibility, heavy snow and more icing. The snow apparently disables the airspeed indicator. The engine cuts out very briefly two times. Bill turns to me and asks: "What else can go wrong?" At that moment, the throttle sticks full open with water freezing the cable. Still without a hint of panic, Bill finds a way to lose some altitude without running into the mountains. The ice melts and Anchorage Airport turns up where it's supposed to be. Ted Spencer of the Alaska Aviation Heritage Museum is in sight near the runway to film us as we land and taxi to the museum.

APRIL 7 TO 10 — We meet with arctic aviation pioneers Ingrid and Einar Pedersen to review landing sites on Spitsbergen and Greenland. En route to Fairbanks, we land on the 14,500-foot runway at Eielson Air Force Base where we tour the base and visit two schools.

APRIL 10 — The plane is parked in Richard Wien's hangar for final servicing. Wien is the son of Noel Wien, founder of Wien Alaska Airlines and a friend of Ben Eielson dating back to 1924. We meet with Fairbanks coordinators Randy Acord and Corky Corkren of the Alaskaland Pioneer Air Museum.

APRIL 11 — Flying over the menacing mountains to Barrow emphasizes the courage and skill Eielson needed to fly here 70 years ago. Barrow is on the shore of the Arctic Ocean at the most northerly point in the U.S. We make final plans for the big flight, monitoring weather forecasts and renewing contact with the air rescue people.

APRIL 13 — Excitement builds as we reach the first day set aside for departure, weather permitting. But it is not to be. The outlook is bad with strong headwinds over the polar region. We hand stamp several hundred first-day souvenir envelopes with the Barrow postmark. The mailpieces all have the Hatton postmark and a special Carl Ben Eielson 70th anniversary imprint. We will add the Longyearbyen postmark in Norway and present them to the Hatton museum to be sold as a fund-raising activity.

APRIL 14 — Bill checks the weather outlook at 6 a.m. and calls it "good, not great" but with favorable tail winds. The decision is made to leave Barrow today. Barring something unforeseen, we should land on Spitsbergen April 15, exactly 70 years after Eielson and Wilkins' takeoff date. The weather is cold with overcast skies and a subzero windchill. Thanks to the courtesy of Cape Smythe Air - Grant Thompson, president, the plane is moved to a heated hangar nearby. Loaded with all the right provisions and survival gear, the plane moves out for final fueling. For the first — and only — time on the entire expedition, the seven tanks are fully loaded. The 300 gallons of gasoline weigh about 1,800 pounds, a heavy load for a plane that weighs only 2,300 pounds empty.

At 11:45 a.m. — Starting the takeoff roll. The big adventure is under way! Flying in patchy fog, we are soon over ocean ice.

Bill Signs and Tom Smith, '48, arrive in Longyearbyen upon their successful conclusion of the Eielson commemorative flight.

Larry Arason, '55

'55 alumnus first sports official inducted into southern California coaches association

By Angela Lueck

LARRY ARASON, '55, was inducted into the Southern California Interscholastic Basketball Coaches Association (SCISBCA) in March. The association generally caters to the professional and fraternal growth of coaches in the CIF Southern Section, but the Mountain, N.D., native, was the first official to be inducted into the 1997-98 SCISBCA Hall of Fame. Arason, who has been officiating basketball for more than 45 years in the Southern California region, began officiating when he was a junior at Central High School in Grand Forks. He continued to officiate when he began attending UND in 1951. He and classmate Dick Koppenhaver, '53, officiated every home basketball game for the junior varsity and varsity teams at Manvel, N.D. "Dick and I each were paid seven dollars per game to officiate the basketball games in Manvel," Arason said. "We also received a businessman's membership at the YMCA for officiating games there."

Known on campus as "Sparrow" Arason, he had a reputation of determination and persistence. UND's athletic program had not had a varsity baseball team since the early 1920s, and it became Arason's dream to bring back that tradition.

"Baseball had been on hiatus for almost 35 years, and I thought it was time to bring it back." With the help of law student John Shaft, '50, Arason drafted a petition and circulated it among the student body. "The first person to sign the petition was Harold 'Pinky' Kraft," Arason said. Kraft volunteered to be the proposed baseball team's head coach.

Arason collected nearly 2,000 student signatures. He delivered the document to then-University President George Starcher. "When I walked through his door, President Starcher looked up at me and said, 'I've been waiting for you, Sparrow.'"

In 1955, the same year Arason graduated, his dream came true -- baseball became a varsity sport at UND. Even though he was never able to play the sport at UND, Arason has taken a great satisfaction in knowing hundreds of student-athletes who came after him received the opportunity to play.

After serving more than 37 years as a teacher-coach and athletic administrator, Arason retired in 1994 and lives in Santa Ana, Calif., with his wife, Gayel. He still remains active in various athletic organizations and community youth programs including the Elk's Lodge Hoop Shoot Contest. Arason, who heads the event, says the contest involves more than 3,500 students, ages 8-13, from more than 70 schools.

Beach, N.D., native hobnobs with celebrities, rock stars in position as buyer for Saks Fifth Avenue

By Heidi Amundson

When Dana Kress graduated with an advertising degree from UND in 1978, he moved to Minneapolis and began the search for a job in his field. "I soon found out it was hard to get started in advertising," he said. "So while I was looking, I took a job at Dayton's, where I discovered I enjoyed retail."

A few years later, he packed up all his belongings, and without ever having been there, drove to Los Angeles. "It was scary, but I liked the idea of a big city," he said.

A big city is exactly the opposite of what the Beach, N.D., native was accustomed to, and at the same time, exactly what he had been looking forward to all his life. He said he chose UND because it is the largest University in the state.

"I wanted to experience everything I could," he explained. In the 20 years since Dana left UND, he has lived this credo to the utmost.

In L.A., he found a job as assistant manager at Bullocks department store, and was soon put into the buyer training program. Since then, he has worked as a buyer for Bullocks Wilshire, I. Magnin and Neiman Marcus.

His talents have brought him to the upscale Saks Fifth Avenue corporation, where he was offered the position of buyer for women's advanced European designers in 1996. Saks Fifth Avenue, a high-end specialty apparel store, operates more than 65 stores throughout the U.S. Buying offices are across the street from the flagship store at Rockefeller Center in New York City. When not traversing the globe and the U.S., Dana lives in White Plains, N.Y.

In November 1997, Dana was chosen from more than 70 buyers as "Saks Fifth Avenue Buyer of the Year." He was awarded for his creativity and outstanding taste level in buying fashion merchandise, and for over-achievement in his statistical plans for the year, including sales, markdowns, stock on hand and gross margin.

Dana credits UND to helping him get where he is today. "Attending UND helped me understand people better. It helps me now in my job when I buy for customers all over the United States." He also credits his fraternity, Delta Upsilon, for helping to develop his social skills. "I have many lasting friendships from college that will last a lifetime," he said. "I wouldn't trade my four years at UND for any other school."

As an advanced buyer for Saks, Dana spends more than three months each year in Europe. He attends runway shows in London, Milan, Florence, and Paris to view the clothes, how they're put together by the designers, and what the "theme" of the season is.

"Everyone thinks my job is so glamorous, but believe me, each trip to Europe is about four weeks long. I see about 50 to 60 runway shows, and I don't get one day off." But attending the fashion shows is his favorite part of his job.

"Because Saks has so much clout, and because of how much we buy, we usually get tickets in the front row," he said. With these prime seats, he has sat next to a number of celebrities, including Demi Moore, Paul McCartney, Ringo Starr, the Spice Girls and Mick Jagger. Dana has also attended several dinners and parties with models, designers, celebrities and even royalty in such places as the British Embassy in Paris, the Opera House and the Louvre Museum.

"This is when I almost always have to pinch myself and say, 'Can this be happening to someone who grew up on a farm in Beach, North Dakota?'" Because Dana was the buyer for Versace clothing at Saks, he was personally invited to Gianni Versace's memorial services in Milan, and was seated just rows behind Princess Diana, Elton John and Sting.

"It was quite a moving experience that I will remember forever," he said.

Dana's position at Saks entails as much financial and statistical work as it does creative. "I guess that's why I like my job so much," he said, "because it has a lot of variety."

Between fashion shows and parties, he writes orders for his stores, a task which can last from three hours to two full days. Dana decides which merchandise he wants, keeping in mind the different stores he's buying for.

For example, the stores in Florida, have a distinctly different customer profile than those in New York or San Francisco. Not only are details like the weight of the fabric important, but certain stores sell more avant-garde items, while others tend to be more conservative.

He then determines how many units and what sizes go to each store, which takes hours and must fit into a predetermined budget. Dana spends between $20 - $30 million per trip by the time he finishes buying from the 40 or more designers, which include Gucci, Prada, Dolce & Gabbana, Versace and Missoni.

When Dana returns to New York, he oversees the shipping, and once the clothing arrives, it must be displayed properly in the stores. Sales associates need to have proper knowledge of the merchandise in order to sell it correctly, so Dana travels around the U.S. visiting stores. He and his assistants monitor the selling, conduct transfers and clearance merchandise at the end of the season to make room for the new.

Dana plans on continuing to buy for a few more years or for "as long as I enjoy it." His goal is to become a divisional merchandise manager, which oversees a number of buyers in one division.

Jeffrey Stith, a UND professor of atmospheric sciences, was presented with UND's highest faculty honor, the Chester Fritz Distinguished Professor Award. Stith has been on the UND faculty since 1980. The Seattle native holds a bachelor's degree from Western Washington University, a master's in physics from Rensselaer Polytechnic and a Ph.D. from the University of Washington.

At UND he has helped establish an airborne-cloud physics research facility and develop a bachelor of science degree in atmospheric sciences. He has chaired the atmospheric sciences department since 1990 and is recognized internationally as a scholar in cloud physics. In 1996, the Student Chapter of the American Meteorological Society presented him with its "Most Dedicated to Students" award.

There will be nothing but ice for the entire trip except for the final minutes before landing at Spitsbergen. Even with more than 4,750 pounds gross weight, Centurion 90 Mike Bravo climbs to cruising altitude faster than expected. Without being melodramatic, 2,200 miles is a long way to sit in one place in a small airplane without toilet facilities. The transpolar flight is actually happening. We could be in Norway in less than the 13 to 14 hours projected. The sky is generally clear with great views of magnificent expanses of ice. There is no open water but I see long ice ridges and light and dark areas indicating shifting floes. For the first two hours, we are in contact with Barrow radio and other places in Alaska. After that there is no sight or sound from any other human source until we near Spitsbergen. From Barrow, we fly north-northeast to the 84th parallel 360 miles from the North Pole. In about four hours, at 170 miles per hour at 84 degrees we travel one-fourth the distance around the world. Wow! Looking to the south I see the north coast of Greenland, the world's most northerly point of land. We are now turning southeast for the final run to Spitsbergen at 78 degrees 15 minutes north. The snow-covered peaks of northwest Spitsbergen stand out in the bright morning sun. But as we approach our destination, thick clouds move in and Bill makes another storybook instrument landing in a snowstorm. The sea level Longyearbyen Airport is tucked among 3,200 to 3,400-foot mountains. Signs says "it was a good thing I couldn't see. I might have been scared."

Touchdown at Spitsbergen at 10:15 a.m. local time. It is April 15, 1998. The dream of honoring my boyhood hero is fulfilled.

We have used only slightly more than half of our fuel. No precise count on chocolate-covered raisins but we have plenty left plus lots of water. We have an almost immediate audience with Ann-Kristin Olsen, governor of the Svalbard Islands, exchanging flags and mementos including items from the Grand Forks Sons of Norway Lodge. After notifying friends, relations and the media in the U.S., we enjoy our first meal in 20 hours followed by a good night's sleep at the Polar Hotel.

APRIL 16-17 — We sightsee around Longyearbyen noticing there are almost more snowmobiles than cars. We handstamp the first day covers with the Norwegian reindeer postmark. Heading out across Greenland Sea on the first leg of the long flight home, we fly over remote Jan Mayen Island and then on to Constable Pynt on Greenland's east coast. We land on a little snow and gravel strip in a modest blizzard.

APRIL 18-22 — After crossing Greenland's giant ice cap, we weekend at Sondre Stromfjord. We fly down the 115-mile fjord at 1,000 feet with rocky cliffs rising 5,000 feet above the plane... the most spectacular scenery of the trip. It isn't that we haven't flown over great mountains and glaciers, but most have been obscured by clouds until now. We move south of the Arctic Circle for the first time in nine days, crossing Davis Strait to Frobisher Bay and then over to Hudson Bay to Winnipeg.

APRIL 23 — On a side trip to Arnes, Manitoba, we visit the monument marking the birthplace of Vilhjalmur Stefansson, the famous arctic explorer and former UND student. Stefansson recommended Eielson to be the pilot for Wilkins. And 100 years ago, Stefansson rented a room at my Grandfather Richards' farm near UND when my mother was nine years old. Visiting Stefansson's birthplace completes the circle of family connections for me since my father knew Ben Eielson 70 years ago when I was five.

APRIL 23-24 — Back in Grand Forks for reunions with family, friends and supporters from the UND Alumni Association and UND Aerospace. Bill and I are honored at a luncheon at the J. Lloyd Stone Alumni Center, hosted by Earl Strinden, Alumni Association executive vice president.

APRIL 26 — The emotional highlight of the entire trip is unfolding as we circle Hatton and land on a 2,500-foot section of Highway 18 just north of town. We taxi to the cemetery and place flowers on Eielson's grave. Then we take the plane into town and park on Eielson Street in front of the house where Ben grew up. Friends from Grand Forks, Fargo and area towns are there along with the media and representatives from colleges and universities in the region. It is like a Fourth of July celebration with children waving flags, the mayor and townspeople congratulating us, and the American Legion color guard presenting the colors. I take this opportunity to thank my support people, especially my wife, Betty (Blake) Smith, '48, who is here from Fort Worth. Host for the celebration is the Hatton-Eielson Museum, represented by Arden Johnson, president. Welcoming remarks are made by Eileen Mork, board member and curator of the museum. Bill and I receive honorary life memberships plaques by the museum. Representing the newly named John D. Odegard School of Aerospace Sciences are Dick Nelson, managing director, and Tim Burke, '88, director of communications. The Barrow-Spitsbergen Aviation Foundation has been formed to help cover Smith's costs for the trip. Funds collected in excess of trip expenses will be donated to the UND Foundation for the benefit of UND Aerospace and to the Hatton-Eielson Museum. For information, contact Tom Smith at: 6825 Simmons Rd., Fort Worth, Texas, 76180; email: tomsmith@star-telegram.com; phone (817) 485-3526.

Endowments express appreciation, strengthen UND

Dr. A. Leonard Asmundson

IN APPRECIATION FOR THE EDUCATION he received at the University of North Dakota, Dr. A. Leonard Asmundson established the Dr. A. Leonard Asmundson Endowment within the UND Foundation.

Valued at $100,000, the endowment will provide annual scholarships for UND School of Medicine and Health Sciences North Dakota students, particularly those from his hometown area of Upham. Additionally, the endowment will support the Dr. A. Leonard Asmundson Professorship in the UND School of Medicine and Health Sciences.

Leonard grew up in Upham. Working throughout his college years, he earned his bachelor's degree in medicine from UND in 1929 and his M.D. from Northwestern University in 1939. Leonard interned at Harborview Hospital in Seattle, then moved to Randle, Wash., to work for the Civilian Conservation Corps. He moved on to a practice in nearby Morton, Wash., and was later invited to be part of the building of a new hospital in Enumclaw, Wash. As a founding doctor, he worked tirelessly to raise funds for the hospital. Today, the surgery center is named The Leonard Asmundson Surgery Center, honoring the physician who performed the first surgery at the hospital.

Leonard and a colleague also funded the youth clubhouse, supported the area school's sports programs and served as leaders in the local Chamber of Commerce. In 1992, Leonard was presented with the UND Alumni Association's highest honor, the Sioux Award. Leonard died June 1998.

FOR HER DEDICATED service to the UND School of Medicine and Health Sciences' physician assistant program, family, friends and colleagues have established the Mickey Knutson Scholarship Endowment within the UND Foundation.

The endowment has been established with gifts from those who wished to celebrate Mickey's retirement after more than 30 years with UND.

Proceeds from the endowment will help meet the needs of students in the physician assistant programs within the School of Medicine and Health Sciences at UND.

Mickey earned her bachelor's degree in nursing from UND in 1958 and her master's degree from the University of Washington in 1961. She returned to UND upon accepting a position as an assistant professor of nursing in 1963.

In 1966, she moved to Minot and worked, first as the director of the St. Francis School of Nursing, then as an assistant professor at Minot State College. She returned to UND in 1972. That same year, she founded and directed the Family Nurse Practitioner

Mickey Knutson

Program. Mickey served as the project coordinator of the experimental MD/FNP joint project from 1977-1982, during which time she co-wrote and negotiated more than $3 million in grants for the program. Mickey obtained her own family nurse practitioner/physician assistant certificate from UND in 1978.

Mickey was director of the division of health practitioners, co-director of the physician assistant program and associate professor of community medicine and rural health at UND. She retired in January 1998. Mickey lives in Minot.

THE GORDON M. ERICKSON Memorial endowment has been established with a gift of more than $10,000 to the University of North Dakota Foundation. The endowment will help support priority projects at UND.

A native of Grand Forks, Gordon attended UND where he took classes in music and history. He served overseas during World War II and was honorably discharged in 1945. Gordon later enrolled at Black Hills (S.D.) State University, where he earned his bachelor's degree in 1961.

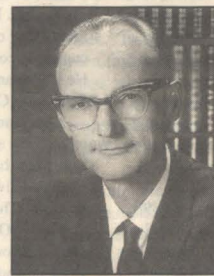

He was a member of the UND Philharmonic, the concert orchestra, college bands and the Greater Grand Forks Symphony Orchestra. He was also active in Kappa Kappa Psi, the national honorary fraternity for bandmen.

In 1961, Gordon returned in earnest to the music world, and took up residence in Fargo. He played with the Fargo Symphony as the lead percussionist for 25 years.

He was also active in several area dance bands, including the Campus Kings, featuring the renowned Peggy Lee.

Gordon continued his love and passion for music until his death in 1997.

Gordon Erickson

THE ESTATE OF INA C. MONTGOMERY has provided for the establishment of the Ina Montgomery Memorial Endowment within the UND Foundation with a gift of more than $43,000. The endowment will fund student scholarships in sociology and nutrition and dietetics.

A Grafton, N.D., native, Ina received her bachelor's degree in education from UND in 1931. She worked as a social worker with the Public Welfare Board of North Dakota and a supervisor for the welfare offices in seven counties. When she resigned in 1952, the Public Welfare Board of North Dakota issued a resolution naming Ina as "one of the pioneers playing an important part in the development of public welfare in North Dakota from its inception through its progressive development."

In 1952, Ina moved to Minneapolis and opened The Treasure Chest, a small gift shop. She sold the shop in the late 1970s, and began working part-time at Schlamps, a fur store. Ina died in February 1996.

1998 Merrifield Scholar named

Jason Zevenbergen, Shelly, Minn., a graduate student in English at UND, received this year's Merrifield Award, an honor sponsored by a grant from the UND Foundation which recognizes outstanding scholarly research utilizing primary source materials held in the UND Chester Fritz Library's Elwyn B. Robinson Department of Special Collections. Zevenbergen's research paper was titled "Establishing a Jewish Community: A Study of Jewish Immigrant Homesteaders in North Dakota, 1880-1920." The $1,500 scholarship is named in honor of UND's first University librarian of record, Webster Merrifield. His tenure as University librarian began in 1888. In 1891, he was named president of UND, a position in which he served until 1909.

Physical therapy student receives Stone leadership/service award

The 1998-99 J. Lloyd and Grace Stone Leadership and Service Scholarship Award was presented to Chris Leonard, the son of Charles and Margaret Leonard of Rolette, N.D. The senior majoring in physical therapy is active in Delta Tau Delta and is a coach for Special Olympics. The scholarship award, presented by the UND Alumni Association student alumni group, Telesis, is provided through a trust established in 1974 by Amos, '50, and Grace (Whiteside), '54, Martin, St. Paul, Minn. This award honors J. Lloyd and Grace Stone for their contributions and service to UND. J. Lloyd Stone was the longtime executive vice president of the UND Alumni Association.

Carol Berglof Memorial Scholarship presented

James Argent, a native of Moorhead, Minn., received the Carol Berglof Scholarship for the 1998 spring semester. Argent graduated in May, with a bachelor's degree of accountancy and business administration, majoring in financial management and accounting. While at UND, Argent was active in Beta Alpha Psi, the Financial Management Association, Golden Key Honor Society, the North Dakota Society of CPAs, and intermural basketball, football and softball.

The Carol Berglof Memorial Insurance Scholarship was established within the UND Foundation by the North Dakota Roughrider Chapter of the Society of Chartered Property Casualty Underwriters in memory of their friend and colleague. The scholarship is awarded annually to a student enrolled in the College of Business and Public Administration and taking courses in insurance.

Berglof, a Sherwood, N.D., native, graduated from the University of Washington. She worked for Farmers Union Insurance in Jamestown, N.D., for 15 years. Carol was one of the first women in North Dakota to earn the Chartered Property Casualty Underwriters designation. She and her husband, Laverne, raised two children. He lives in Jamestown.

AS THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH DAKOTA PREPARES to meet the many challenges and exciting opportunities of a new century, loyal alumni and special friends are joining in a historic effort for their Alma Mater's future — the 21st Century Campaign. The 21st Century Campaign calls on this loyalty and unselfish commitment from all alumni and special friends to build UND for its important role in the next century. The goal is $50 million in new gifts, pledges and commitments, to be reached by Dec. 31, 2000. We are very proud to report that through the generosity of our dedicated alumni and special friends, the UND Foundation has reached the $100 million milestone in assets. Along with this historic announcement (please turn to Page 1 for more information), the UND Foundation also received a record number of gifts during the 1997-98 fiscal year which ended June 30. Thank you to all of you who are strengthening your Alma Mater, the University of North Dakota!

MESSAGE FROM THE CAMPAIGN'S CO-CHAIRS...

"IT WAS A pleasure to speak to the UND Foundation and Alumni Association Board of Directors during their June meeting, and give them an update on the 21st Century Campaign. We are currently working to 'spread the good word' to the more than 9,500 alumni living in the Twin Cities area alone about this historic endeavor for the University of North Dakota. We firmly believe UND alumni are among the most loyal and dedicated alumni in the entire nation. Our goal is to encourage alumni and friends to think about what UND means to them, how the University has helped them on their paths to fulfilling, productive lives, and how they can show their appreciation for their Alma Mater.

"We reported to the board on some of the great ideas our alumni and friends have shared with us on how to strengthen UND. For example, there are many members of our alumni family who hold key positions in corporations across the nation. In several of these corporations, a good number of other UND graduates are also employed. We are working to identify people interested in being the 'point person' in these organizations, who would visit with their UND fellow alumni and ask them to consider participating in the 21st Century Campaign.

"With the proliferation of matching gift programs in industry, alumni and friends can really maximize their donations to the University -- doubling, even tripling their gift in some cases! We hope that, with a high degree of participation, we will be able to meet our goal and also proudly proclaim that UND has the highest rate of alumni giving of any public university of our size in the nation. We believe this is a very attainable goal.

"Thank you for all you are doing for your University!"

Campaign co-chairs Merlin and Barbara Dewing.

The 21st Century Campaign is strengthening key areas at UND:

■ STUDENTS — Alumni and special friends of UND will be investing in STUDENTS: goals in this area include increasing scholarship support for high achieving and deserving students, as well as increasing funds for graduate and professional scholarships and the number of Distinguished Student Awards.

■ TECHNOLOGY — UND stands poised to meet the opportunities students and faculty will encounter in the new century. The goal in this area is to develop funding to strengthen UND's position on the cutting edge of TECHNOLOGY for teaching, research and learning.

■ TEACHING — It is vital UND continue to attract and retain a top-quality faculty. Goals are to increase the number of endowed chairs and endowed professorships; increase funds for faculty career development and for awards to recognize outstanding TEACHING at UND.

■ LIBRARY RESOURCES — The Chester Fritz Library, the research and academic hub of the University, is North Dakota's largest and most comprehensive academic research library. While the printed page holds an esteemed place, the use of multimedia and other LIBRARY RESOURCES is an ever-growing aspect in our rapidly changing world. The goal is to build a strong base of support for this very important area, allowing the library to continue as a fundamental learning resource for all students and faculty.

Carrigan Cup competition held at UND School of Law

THIS YEAR'S CARRIGAN CUP International Trial Competition at the UND School of Law included more than 50 UND students, nine Norwegian exchange students, and eight students from the University of Manitoba. Attorneys from all over the state of North Dakota volunteered considerable amounts of time to help with the week-long program.

The award is named for U.S. District Judge (Ret.) Jim Carrigan, a Moberge, S.D., native who graduated from UND in 1953 with both the bachelor of philosophy degree and juris doctor. Prior to his appointment as U.S. District Judge in 1979, Carrigan was a lawyer, judicial administrator, law school teacher and Colorado Supreme Court Justice. He retired in 1995.

He received the UND Alumni Association's highest honor, the Sioux Award, in 1974. He was presented an honorary degree from UND in 1997. Jim and his wife, Bev, live in Boulder, Colo., and the retired judge continues to be involved in legal issues, serving as an arbitrator for the Judicial Arbitrator's Group.

Charitable Remainder Unitrust - A real-life example

A CHARITABLE REMAINDER UNITRUST arrangement with the University of North Dakota Foundation can be a powerful and flexible financial planning tool. We thought you may find this seven-year unitrust experience interesting and beneficial.

This UND alumni couple established a Charitable Remainder Unitrust in 1991, and here is what has happened in just seven years. Their Charitable Remainder Unitrust has grown from $777,432 (December 1991) to a value of $1,082,508. A Growth of 39%! At the same time, the Unitrust has been providing annual income to the couple at 8% of the annual valuation. During the first year, their Unitrust income was $62,194. This year they will be receiving $86,600.

In 1991, when the husband was nearing retirement from his medical practice, they transferred a single highly appreciated stock holding into a unitrust. They avoided a potential capital gains tax obligation of $213,254. They received an immediate charitable deduction of $185,898 with a five-year carryover allowance. They reserved life-time income for two lives. The UND Foundation serves as Trustee and a 50% remainderman. The competent, professional trustee management by the UND Foundation has resulted in significant growth and an increasing cash flow for this UND alumni couple.

The Donors/Income Beneficiaries have a very good feeling knowing they have provided for a major gift to fund an endowment in their name which will, in the future, be a continuing investment in a stronger and greater University of North Dakota. Countless numbers of students who will walk the same campus paths they walked some many years ago will be the beneficiaries. They too will go from this University to make their lives count for the benefit of others and to build on our proud UND tradition of alumni service, achievement and loyalty.

For a personalized illustration or to discuss how a unitrust could fit into your plans, please contact one of our development staff members today, (701)777-2611 or (800)543-8764, Box 8157, Grand Forks, North Dakota 58202-8157. All contacts are confidential and there is no obligation on your part.

University of North Dakota ALUMNI REVIEW

July/August 1998

The UND CAMPUUS is beautifully ablaze with flowers and lush greenery at the end of July. There are a few more students walking these campus paths than last year: summer session enrollment is up nearly 500 over last year's figures. Though totals fell somewhat short of the 1996 mark, credit hours and revenues exceed 1996's numbers. There are 3,351 students enrolled at UND this summer compared to 2,852 last summer and 3,382 in 1996.
