Don't blame Bossie. She doesn't know any better.

Besides, it isn't a shopping center—yet. The farm land that is supposed to become a shopping center has been informally handed down generation after generation. Who has title to several parcels is questionable. Then, there are drainage easements held by adjoining owners which must be considered. And the problem of securing access to the highway, as well as some questions about separately held mineral rights.

There may be any number of problems, all capable of giving rise to costly future claims.

That's why, throughout the country, shopping center developers, investors and their attorneys turn to Chicago Title Insurance Company—the experienced, skillful title insurance company.

Tough title jobs—such as protecting title to land for shopping centers—are the kind we know best. Whenever you have a tough one, call us.
