the state in advance of such annual meeting, and in this way your membership will be advised and give consideration to the conclusions and recommendations thereof, and be prepared to discuss the same and give a worthwhile opinion at the annual meeting.

And unless you do this much of your committee work will go for naught. The time at the annual meeting is too short to give serious consideration, and discussion of many controversial matters, when submitted there for the first time; but if the committee reports are submitted before and in time for study your members will come there—some at least—prepared to analyze them intelligently.

And if you don't, the result will be the same as so many times in the past—report accepted and placed on file—referred to the executive committee for action — perhaps resolved on, and forgotten. This body of men dislike to take hastily ill considered action on important matters heard of for the first time in a committee report made without any notice; and generally they don't do it, and avoid it some way.

At our annual meetings you generally hear voiced that we didn't do anything about this or that, and what became of this resolution or that, and your committee is tired of making reports to have them buried, etc.

Well said and true, but why? Part of the answer is given above and the rest of it is the result of lack of interest and attention of the members of the association at large who carp and bark at home but display no ambition to employ a little of their time for the good of the order in attendance at the district or annual meetings. And you know brother the most of us have quite a bit of the commodity of time on hand not now, nor recently, required in considering heavy litigation.

Right now two thirds of you are local trouble shooters without pay, why not give a little time and thought to making your Bar Association work as intended—it may yield more to you, and can never be a total loss.

Come out for practice, boys, anyway, and take a swing at the ball. You can never tell what a little team work will accomplish.

YOUR SECRETARY.

COOPERATION IN THE BAR ASSOCIATION

As your President announces the personnel of his Committees for the ensuing year your officers are mindful of the responsibilities and the possibilities of our organization; and your suggestion, criticism and cooperation is solicited. Frank criticism at times also is no less important and helpful than suggestion and cooperation.

The purposes of the Association are thus expressed in our Constitution: "The object of this Association shall be to promote the administration of justice, uphold the honor of the profession of the law, and encourage cordial intercourse among members of the State Bar". It is our hope, that the officers and members of this Association may all be inspired to work for a more complete realization of each of these three objectives. Experience has proven, not only in respect to our own association, but to Bar Associations throughout the United States, that they afford the best medium yet devised for expression of the judgments of members
