George Washington

“Let the reins of government be braced and held with a steady hand, and every violation of the Constitution reprehended. If defective, let it be amended, but never suffered to be trampled upon while it has existence.”

William L. Ransom

“The tasks of this hour must be fulfilled by somebody who believes in something and is sure of it, somebody who has enthusiasm and an unblurred outlook, somebody who speaks the vigorous language of ordered liberty and has not bent and warped the great traditions of our law and bar to give plausible support to the will-o'-the-wisps which political adventurers have pursued.”
